ARMS CONFERENCE CONCLUDES WORK; SHANTUNG TREATY FORMALLY SIGNED

HACKMANN'S OFFICE UNDER INQUIRY AT HYDE'S ORDER

State Auditor Admits Using Part of Money Obtained From Counties for Typing Examiners' Reports in Increasing Pay of Negro Janitor From $60 to $100 a Month.

DENIES DEMANDING MONEY FROM EMPLOYES

Official Brands Investigation as "Political Plot" and Result of Careful Check Made on Appointees of Governor.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 4.—Gov. Hyde, it has become known at the capitol, has had under way for several weeks a quiet investigation of the office of State Auditor George E. Hackmann, including an inquiry into reports which have reached him of irregularities in the expense accounts submitted by employes of the auditor's office and approved by the auditor. The Governor has consulted Attorney General Barrett regarding steps for a more complete and more formal official investigation.

Hackmann today told a Post-Dispatch reporter he knew of the inquiry the Governor had been conducting and said he welcomed a detailed investigation into every one of his official acts, and into every matter connected with his conduct of his office.

He branded the investigation as a "political plot," and declared that it resulted from the careful check he said he had made on accounts of appointees of the Governor. "Every record of my office is open to any person in the State of Missouri, official or private citizen," Hackmann said, "and any investigation can only result in a complete vindication of me. I probably have made mistakes, but every penny is honestly accounted for."

Inquiry by Former Employe.

The Governor's investigation has been made by L. F. Dehart of Cameron, formerly an employe of Hackmann, whom Hyde several weeks ago appointed a field agent of the State Marketing Bureau. He has submitted to the Governor certified copies of expense accounts of examiners of the State Auditors' office for expenses incurred in auditing the records of county officials, and has informed the Governor that each of the accounts contains charges varying in amount from $5 to $625, which the examiner received from the county and turned over to Hackmann personally.

On each of the accounts there appears a charge for typewriting services in preparing the report of the examiners, although the typewriting work was done by stenographers regularly employed in Hackmann's office at a regular salary paid by the State. Some of this audit typing, however, the stenographers say, was done outside regular office hours.

The largest amount under this charge is $625, which appears on an expense account submitted to and paid by the County Court of Jackson County. It is in the account of Herman Groeschel of 2908 South Fifty-ninth street, St. Louis, an expert accountant formerly employed by Hackmann. Groeschel was in charge of the force of examiners who worked in Jackson County nearly 12

Governor's Statement as to the Hackmann Investigation

GOV. HYDE said to a Post-Dispatch reporter at Jefferson City last night:

"I have heretofore been advising with Attorney-General Barrett upon an investigation of the State Auditor's office. I shall immediately direct the Attorney-General to proceed with a further investigation, both through his office and through the grand jury of Cole County, and with such suits as the investigation indicates are proper. From the conversations already held with him, I am sure he will proceed with diligence."

GUS O. NATIONS TASTES BEER FIRST TIME AT WINE GARDEN

Waitress Brings Federal Dry Agent Foaming Stein, He Partakes of Contents, Then Orders Whisky.

Gus O. Nations, Federal Prohibition Enforcement Agent who has been heralded as one man who has never tasted beer and who has been active in ferreting out the elusive moonshiner and home-brewer, is no longer the abstemious Gus we knew yesterday. He fell from grace in a wine garden at 9301 South Broadway last night by tasting beer, but how he knew it was the real article, not having previously tasted the same, Gus did not explain.

Nations, disguised in a fur cap and with overcoat collar turned up so even his most intimate friends would not suspect his identity, set out with a friend to inspect the drinking places of South St. Louis. At the place on Broadway he ordered some homemade beer and a waitress brought him a foaming stein. The woman eyed Nations suspiciously and in order to make good the deception, Nations was compelled to make a pretense at drinking. Then he ordered a half pint of whisky, and the waitress brought him a bottle of something resembling whisky in color.

Nations arrested the proprietor, Jacob Weiss, 27 years old, and took him to the Carondelet Station. He said he would have arrested the waitress, who lives with her husband at the garden, but did not wish to deprive her 8-months-old baby of its mother.

STORE LIGHTS ON BUSY CORNER OUT EARLY LAST NIGHT

Police "Sniffers" Find Liquor in Drug Store, Barbershop and Saloon and Take Proprietors.

The store lights on the southwest corner of Union and West Florissant avenues, a busy street car transfer point, went out early last night—at 8:30 o'clock, to be exact, because when a special "sniffing" squad sent out from Central Police Station finished sniffing, the druggist, barber and saloon proprietor were under arrest. There was nothing left on the corner but a notion store, and the lights there had gone out before the policemen arrived.

In response to an anonymous communication stating that if "sniffers" were sent to the basement of the drug store, which is just across the street from the main entrance of Calvary Cemetery, they would find a stock of home brew, Lieut. Doyle detailed two of his best "sniffers," Special Officers Hatton and Stuart.

The "sniffers" found in the drug store basement 10 cases of homemade beer and five gallons of corn whisky, in the basement of the barber shop, next door west; five cases of beer, two of which were packed in ice, and in the basement of the saloon, another door west, nine cases of beer, seven gallons of "white mule" and seven pints of wine.

The discovery was followed by the arrest of Howard N. Rockafellow, the druggist; August Begemann, the barber, and Joseph R. Graff, the saloonkeeper. The latter took all the blame. He said the entire stock of liquor belonged to him and that the druggist and barber had nothing to do with it.

The policemen admitted this was possible because they found the three cellars connected by unlocked doors. However, they decided to hold all three on a charge of having liquor in their possession, and put the question of responsibility up to the Prosecuting Attorney. The prisoners were later released on $500 bonds.

RADIO AMATEURS ORDERED TO STOP BROADCASTING OPERATIONS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Orders for temporary suspension of radio broadcasting by amateurs, because of interference caused regular radio stations, was announced today by the Commerce Department. New regulations, however, will be issued covering amateur broadcasting as soon as some desirable plan can be formulated.

Radio broadcasting, the department explained, is a new wireless service which has developed very rapidly during the past three months and now embraces the sending out of everything from market quotations and crop estimates, health talks, weather forecasts, high-class entertainment to lectures, sermons, music and announcements as to stolen automobiles. The result has been to fill the air with radio reports to the detriment of commercial and necessary service.

MABEL NORMAND VISITS THE TAYLOR HOME WITH POLICE

Actress Re-Enacts Scene at Slain Director's Apartments Where She Called Night of the Murder.

IMPORTANT WITNESS FOUND, IT IS SAID

Check Being Made on Movements of Several Persons Night of Killing; Inquest Is Held.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 4.—The force of detectives investigating the slaying of William Desmon Taylor, motion picture director, formerly known as William Desmon Deane-Tanner, accompanied by Miss Mabel Normand, film actress, late today paid a visit to the house where Taylor was shot to death. Miss Normand, at the request of the detectives, re-enacted the scene at the Taylor apartments Wednesday night when she called there and left shortly before the time the police say the tragedy occurred.

Miss Normand said she was in the apartments about 45 minutes, all the time being passed in the living room where Taylor's body was found the next morning. She pointed out the positions of the various pieces of furniture in the room and indicated where she and Taylor conversed. Taylor walked with her to her automobile and conversed with her chauffeur and herself for a few moments, she explained further, leaving the front door of his apartments open. His only servant had left about 15 minutes before, to be gone for the night.

Letters Are Missing.

After Miss Normand had left the Taylor home today police detectives said another reason for her visit there was a desire on her part to secure the return of some letters which, she said, had been directed by her to Taylor. The detectives said Miss Normand expected to find these letters in a drawer of the desk at which Taylor was sitting when he was shot, but that a search today failed to bring them to light.

Police detectives also were searching tonight for a business associate of Taylor, who, they had been informed, was in possession of his personal correspondence. They said they did not know definitely that any letters had been taken from Taylor's home after his death, but that they wanted to check charges to that effect that had been made to them.

Important Witness Found.

A check was being made tonight upon the movements of several persons Wednesday night, it was stated at police headquarters, at least one of these being a man connected with the motion picture industry. It also was stated that an important witness had been located and might be questioned tonight.

The inquest held today lasted less than 45 minutes and resulted in an open verdict, the jury declaring Taylor came to his death from a gunshot wound inflicted by an unknown person with homicidal intent.

Practically the only new development in the inquest testimony was that the bullet which ended Taylor's life, ranged upwards after entering the body on the rear of the left side about four inches above the hip, and lodged near the shoulder. This indicated, according to detectives, the slayer fired from a reclining position or that Taylor was bending over when the shot was fired.

Miss Normand was the only one of a number of motion picture actors and actresses subpenaed who was called to the stand. She testified she called upon Taylor Wednesday night, leaving at 7:45, or about 15 minutes before a shot was heard by the neighbors.

AMERICAN DOGS WIN THE INTERNATIONAL 120-MILE TEAM RACE

"Huskie" Quintet, Piloted by New Hampshire Man, Makes a Perfect Score.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, N. H., Feb. 4.—Five American-bred huskies, their tails curled proudly aloft, scampered into town this afternoon and won the international dog team race of 120 miles that started from here last Thursday. The huskies, owned and piloted by Arthur T. Walden of Wonalancet, received a perfect point score as to time and condition. They made the three-day "mush" in a corrected time of 15 hours and 36 minutes and covered the day's lap of 32 miles from Lancaster in 3 hours and 37 minutes.

Accustomed to travel over New Hampshire hills and dales, the huskies found the going on the snow-packed roads more to their liking than did the team of Jean Lebel of Dersimis, Quebec. The Canadian's time for the 120 miles was 16 hours and 22 minutes, or 46 minutes behind Walden. He finished with five dogs. The sixth, suffering from sore feet, was hauled over the last lap by his teammates.

Jacques Suzanne, whose team from Lake Placid, N. Y., was forced out of the contest yesterday because of trouble with a strange hitch on the mush from Colebrook to Lancaster, made it a poor third in point of time. He was 14 hours behind Walden.

The dogs that Henri Skene brought from La Loutre, Quebec, completed their race by train, their owner having withdrawn them before the start from Colebrook yesterday.

Lebel made a game finish, running beside his dogs for many miles, while his knee, wounded in service with the pioneer Canadian air squadron in France, gave him great pain. Officials of the Race Committee urged him to withdraw before the start from Lancaster today, but Lebel refused.

GERMAN PRESIDENT EXPELLED FROM SADDLEMAKERS' UNION

Workers Take Action Against Ebert and Berlin Police Head for Attitude Towards Rail Strike.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—President Ebert on his fifty-first birthday today was again thrown out of the Saddlemakers' Union. A general meeting of the union at Cologne voted 200 to 8 in favor of his expulsion, on the ground that his actions had been damaging to organized labor.

The Rote Fahn (Red Flag) today attacks President Ebert in an appeal to the proletariot to support the railway strikers, saying: "Ebert earns 300,000 marks yearly, and has 400,000 more to entertain—but not the workmen. Do you wonder that he forbids the hungry railroad workers to strike? Stand by your fighting brothers' union."

President Richter of the Berlin police force today was read out of the Metal Workers' Union because of his attitude against the railroad strikers.

DELEGATES FROM CHINA AND JAPAN AFFIX SIGNATURES

Ceremony at Pan-American Headquarters Witnessed by Hughes and Balfour and Reporters.

TREATY WRITTEN IN ENGLISH

Kiaochow to Be Restored and Japanese Troops Removed From Shantung Under Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The treaty between Japan and China, embodying the settlement of the Shantung controversy, was signed late today in the hall of the Americans at the Pan-American Union by the representatives of the two Powers. Attendant upon the signing were Arthur J. Balfour, head of the British arms delegation, and Secretary Hughes, whose good offices together with the intercession of President Harding brought about the settlement.

The treaty was signed for Japan by Admiral Baron Kato, Ambassador Shidehara and Vice Foreign Minister Hanihara, and for China by Minister Sze, Minister Koo and Chief Justice Wang. Two copies of the treaty were signed and sealed. One to be deposited in Tokio and the other in Peking.

Treaty in English.

The treaty is in English and signed in English, the English language having been adopted as the official language both for the negotiations and for the treaty.

Formalities attending the signature were simple. A handful of newspaper reporters who had followed the conversations through the many vicissitudes since they were instituted, Dec. 1, were permitted to be present at the historic ceremony.

The Japanese and Chinese plenipotentiaries arrived at the Pan-American Building shortly before 5 o'clock, closely followed by Mr. Balfour and Secretary Hughes. In the meantime the four observers who represented Messrs. Balfour and Hughes arrived. They were John Van A. MacMurray and Edward Bell for Mr. Hughes and M. W. Lamson and F. A. Gwatkin, the latter taking the place of Sir John Jordan, who was unable to be present.

The plenipotentiaries sat at the long table in the Hall of Americas, while at the end were Messrs. Balfour and Hughes and the four observers. The three pens used by the three Chinese plenipotentiaries, each with the name of the one using it printed thereon, will be sent to the Museum of Shanghai College in Shanghai as mementoes of the occasion. The pens used by the Japanese will be sent to Japan.

Minister Sze and Baron Kato simultaneously signed, each a copy, then the copies were signed also simultaneously by Minister Koo and Ambassador Shidehara and finally by Chief Justice Wang and Mr. Hanihara. The annexes were then signed.

Both Minister Sze and Baron Kato then notified Messrs. Hughes and Balfour that the treaties had been signed and officially thanked them for their good offices which brought about the settlement.

Shantung Dinner Given.

The Japanese delegation tonight in celebration of the conclusion of the negotiations were hosts at what was described as a "Shantung dinner" at which the Chinese delegates, Messrs. Hughes and Balfour and the four observers were guests.

The treaty comprises 28 articles and six annexes. Japan agrees, under article one, to "restore to China the former German leased territory

DELEGATES BEGIN MAKING FAREWELL CALLS ON HUGHES AND PRESIDENT HARDING

WASHINGTON Feb. 4.

By the Associated Press.

THE final round of farewell calls incident to the adjournment of the armament conference was begun today with visits to the White House and State Department by members of the British and Italian delegations.

The British delegation, with the exception of Sir Auckland Geddes, the resident Ambassador, will leave Washington for New York on Monday after the final plenary session of the conference and will sail from New York on the Aquitania on Tuesday.

Mr. Balfour on leaving the White House said he told the President he was returning to England with the greatest satisfaction over the "wonderful success" of the Washington conference. The conference, he said, has demonstrated the great success of the conference method of dealing with international questions and would undoubtedly result in more like international meetings.

The other members of the delegation who bid farewell to the President were Lord Lee of Fareham, Sir Robert L. Borden, the former Canadian Premier, Senator G. F. Pearce, the Australian Minister; Sir John Salmon, who represented New Zealand, and Srinivasa Sastri, the Indian representative.

Senator Schanzer was accompanied to the White House and State Department by the other members of the Italian delegation.

SAILOR IS KILLED WHEN TORPEDO STRIKES BOAT

Projectile, Fired at Target Towed by Motor Boat, Is Deflected, Wrecking Craft.

By the Associated Press.

SAN PEDRO, Cali., Feb. 4.—Arthur Robinson, a sailor of the United States Pacific fleet, was drowned today when a motor boat in which he and two companions were serving as crew to tow a target, was struck by a wild torpedo fired by the submarine R-10. Robinson's companions were rescued.

The sailors were in the small boat which was towing the target at 70 yards, and three submarines were engaged in practice, firing at it. A torpedo from the R-10 was deflected and struck the small boat, destroying it.

Robinson was 18 years old, and enlisted at Chicago.

TWO WOMEN GET ESTATE OF "RAGGED MILLIONAIRE"

Court Ruling Directs That $500,000 Each Be Paid to Daughter and Sister of C. A. Stevens

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The estate of Calvin Armory Stevens, known as the "ragged millionaire," who died in Bensonhurst, Long Island, in 1877, while living apart from his wife, goes to his daughter, Mrs. Kate Stevens Fagan, and his sister, Mrs. Mary Grace Richardson, it was learned today. Each gets $500,000 under a ruling of Supreme Court Justice Donnelly.

Stevens' frugality was a byword in New York. Although he inherited a fortune from his father, Calvin Stevens, he wore shiny clothes, ate in dingy lunchrooms and slept on a cot in a small attic room in a building he owned.

Justice Donnelly was asked to interpret the will of the elder Stevens, which left his estate to his son, Mrs. Richardson and another daughter who has since died.

MARRIAGE NOTICE REQUIRED

By the Associated Press.

RENO, Nev., Feb. 4.—Bishop George O. Hunting of the Episcopal Church in Nevada, and the clergy under him issued notices today that seven days' notice must be given to them before they will perform the marriage ceremony.

"The sanctity of the marriage and the marriage relationship seem lightly regarded these days, as evidenced by the prevalence of divorce," the Bishop said, "and the marriage problem should be guarded before the wedding as well as afterwards. Hence the clergy reached this decision at their recent convention here.

TWO PACTS ARE ADOPTED DEALING WITH THE FAR EAST

Half Dozen Supplementary Resolutions Also Passed at Session That Virtually Completes Work of Delegations at Washington; Formal Signing Monday.

HARDING WILL MAKE ADDRESS

Farewell Oratory Includes Bright Forecasts for Future and Praise of Conference by Balfour, Hughes and Other Delegates.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb 4.—The arms conference made the last entry on its record of achievements today and prepared for sine die adjournment Monday.

At a four-hour plenary session two more treaties and a half dozen supplemental resolutions were passed through the final stage of conference approval and then the delegates exchanged farewell courtesies in a series of speeches expressing universal satisfaction over the results of the history-making 12 weeks of negotiations just ended.

Monday's session will be devoted entirely to formal signature of the conference treaties and to an address by President Harding, voicing his appraisement of the work accomplished by the conference he called into being. Most of the foreign delegates plan to leave Washington on Monday night or Tuesday.

The two treaties accepted formally at today's sitting both relate to China, one providing for a revision of the Chinese customs system and the other embodying Elihu Root's "four points" and the amplified open door. Some of the separate resolutions put on the record deal with collateral Chinese questions, but included in the lot was a supplement to the four-Power Pacific treaty excluding from the scope of the agreement the principal islands of the Japanese Empire.

A few hours after the plenary session adjourned the Japanese and Chinese met and affixed their signatures to the treaty by which Shantung is to be returned to Chinese control. Although the long-debated Shantung question occupied a key position in the conference program, the negotiations by which it was settled proceeded outside the confereence proper and only the two Oriental Powers were made parties to the resulting treaty.

All Nations Had Voice.

Every delegation had a voice in the final session of oratory that really brought the work of the conference to a close today and every spokesman predicted that the achievements of the Washington conference would loom large in the history of the world. Secretary Hughes for the United States and Arthur J. Balfour for Great Britain, hailed the conference accomplishments as ushering into a "new era" of international understanding, and Albert Sarraut for France eulogized the record of achievement as constituting the "loftiest precedent of mankind." Similar expressions came from all the other national groups.

What the negotiations had done for China and for peace in the crucial area of the Pacific and the Far East was the keynote of nearly all the concluding addresses. Japan renewed her pledges of fair treatment for China through Baron Shidehara and Minister Sze, of the Chinese delegation, asserted that his people would look upon the decisions reached here

ARMS PARLEY TERMED TREMENDOUS STRIDE TOWARD LASTING PEACE

CONFERENCE OF IMMENSE VALUE, EVEN IF IT FELL SHORT OF THE GREATEST HOPES

Naval Holiday Alone Justifies Calling of Session, Says Observer—Pacific Pact Robs Jingoes of Their Former Thunder.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Now that it is possible to examine and appraise the completed work of the arms limitation conference, it is seen that the pessimism which pervaded much of the comment during its middle stages was unwarranted. The conference did not fully realize the great hopes raised by the world-shaking proposals of Secretary of State Hughes on its memorable opening day—that "inspired" day, as it was called by Balfour—but it did take a tremendous step toward the ultimate reign of peace throughout the world.

Nine nations, in the case of Pacific and Far Eastern problems, five in the case of naval questions, sat down together in an effort to remove sources of war-breeding irritation. It is important to remember that all decisions had to be unanimous; one recalcitrant nation, to quote again from Balfour's admirable summary of the conference's achievements, could stop the whole machinery of progress toward any settlement. When that fact is considered, with the further fact that only a few months ago suspicion was rampant among the Governments of the world, the wonder is not that the conference fell short of ideal attainments, but that it came as close to it as it did.

Naval Holiday Greatest Result.

The great outstanding accomplishment, of course, is the five-Power treaty that puts an end to competition in naval armaments—a competition which, if it had been carried on much longer, must certainly have thrown the world into hopeless bankruptcy. Those who are expecting an immediate great saving from the decision of the three great naval Powers to junk 58 of their battleships are doomed to disappointment. The potential saving, however, in dollars, yen and pounds sterling, is beyond all calculation.

Roughly speaking, the United States, Great Britain and Japan agree to cut their navies in half. They agree to build no more capital ships for 10 years, and to build airplane carriers within specified limits. Even though the attitude of France made it impossible for the conference to deal with land armaments, or to fix a limitation on auxiliary warships, the gain from the agreement as it stands is alone sufficient to justify the calling of the conference.

Hardly less important, if indeed not equally important, is the four-Power pact by which the United States, Great Britain, Japan and France bind themselves to respect the insular rights of one another in the Pacific and to take counsel together if the peace is threatened there. This and the armament limitation treaty must be read as complementary parts of one great peace project. With the chances of war in the Pacific reduced to a minimum by the four-Power pact, the United States, Great Britain and Japan can well afford to cut their navies. Each can do this without fear of impairing its national security, for the naval treaty, while making it difficult if not impossible to wage offensive sea warfare, leaves to each nation, in the airplane and the submarine, ample means of safeguarding its coats.

Robs Jingoes of Ammunition.

Again, the two treaties dovetail together, in the sense that the fact of armament limitation in itself is conducive to the end sought by the four-Power pact—permanent peace and good understanding in the Pacific. No longer—if the treaties are ratified—will there be excuse for the jingoes of Japan and the United States to seek to inflame their compatriots with talk about the growing size of the other nation's naval budget. In conformity with one of the principles laid down by Hughes in his opening address, the two nations, with great Britain, agree to "stop where they are"—to "peg" their capital ship strength as the navy people say, at the present ratio of 5—5—3.

The naval treaty carries another greater emollient besides the agreement to stop capital ship construction. This is the undertaking on the part of the United States, Great Britain and Japan to preserve the status quo with respect to fortifications and naval bases in a broad stretch of the Pacific.

On the part of this country, the agreement is not to fortify any of its possessions west of the Hawaiian Islands. Japan is freed from the menace, real or fancied, of a chain of fortifications in the Pacific from which the United States could descend upon and wipe out the smaller Japanese fleet.

In other words there has been dropped down in the middle of the Pacific a neutral zone; the frontiers of the two countries, so to speak, have been pushed back from each other and the chances of difficulties brought about by the too close proximity of armed forces are thereby lessened.

Better Relation With Britain.

Not the least valuable of the results is the better relationship that affected between this country and Great Britain. The Irish settlement removed one source of discord. Two other great sources are now in a fair way to be eliminated, the Anglo-Japanese alliance with the ratification of the four-Power pact, and the threatened competition in navies with the coming into effect of the naval limitation treaty.

Though Britain always said that the alliance with Japan could never be used against the United States, there were those in this country why believed that America was menaced. Why, it was asked, should the alliance be maintained, after the removal of Russia and Germany as hostile forces in the Far East, if it was not meant to serve the interest of the allies against the only other competitor—the United States.

One of the prime objectives which the British set for themselves at the conference was the abrogation of the alliance. The problem was embarrassing. Britain wanted to "play the game" fairly with the United States, in this respect, as well as in naval matters, but she could not cast Japan aside like an old shoe.

The solution was found in the four-Power pact. Credit for bringing the negotiations over this treaty to a successful conclusion is due in large measure to the diplomacy of Arthur J. Balfour, head of the British delegation.

It deserves to be said of Balfour that he gave effective support to Hughes at all stages of the conference. Next to Hughes himself, he was the outstanding figure of the conference. His patience and geniality seemed never to fail. It was Balfour, with Hughes, who got the Japanese and Chinese going again on the Shantung conversations when they appeared to have reached a dead standstill. Balfour's popularity with the crowd that attended the plenary sessions was attested by the applause that his first appearance on the floor invariably evoked.

A Strange Blunder by Lodge.

A strange and unexplained blunder, one that gave rise to hostile criticism when the conference was proceeding smoothly, was made in connection with the four-Power Pacific treaty. This was the failure of Senator Lodge, in his flowery speech explaining the pact, to state that the delegates understood the term "insular possessions and insular dominions" to include the homeland of Japan as well as her outlying islands. Lodge apparently, was too carried away with his description of the Pacific islands to give attention to this mundane point.

The result of his omission was serious embarrassment to the administration. President Harding, it will be recalled, put an opposite construction on the term from that privately agreed upon by the delegates. This difference was at once seized upon as a talking point by the opponents of the treaty in the Senate. At the plenary session today it was announced that the four-Powers had agreed upon stipulations, supplementary to the quadruple treaty, to the effect that the disputed term does not embrace Japan proper. Thus the Harding interpretation becomes the official one, and all doubt as to the meaning of that part of the pact is ended.

Running concurrently with the conference, but technically outside of it, were the negotiations between Japan and China over Shantung. The settlement of this controversy, pregnant as it was with possibilities of far-reaching trouble, was a notable achievement. China gets back the sacred province, with its important railway and rich mines, on terms which, though not all that she desired, were declared by her delegates to be satisfactory. A treaty covering the agreement was signed by China and Japan late this afternoon.

The Submarine and Gas Treaty.

Another treaty of importance emerging from the conference is the submarine and poison gas treaty.

Though recognizing the institution of war, this treaty, like the armament limitation treaty, deals with the weapons of war, as Secretary Hughes said, in the "terms of peace." It prohibits the use of submarines as commerce destroyers and outlaws poison gas as a weapon.

Negotiations carried on outside the conference have eventuated in a treaty between the United States and Japan, which takes the island of Yap from the field of controversy. America is guaranteed the cable rights for which she contended.

Another conference treaty provides for the allocation of the former German cables in the Pacific.

There remain to be noted, of the eight treaties growing out of the gathering, two pacts, signed by the nine Powers, relating to China, one of these on the tariff. This treaty, which was laid before the plenary session today by Senator Underwood, provides for a revision of the Chinese customs duties so they will yield 5 per cent ad valorem. This measure is held to be vitally important to China.

In the other treaty the signatory Powers agree to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of China; to give her every chance to develop a stable government; to work for the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce of all nations in China and to refrain from taking advantage of the present disturbed conditions in China to gain special rights that would abridge the nights of the nationals of friendly states.

This treaty carries a specific reaffirmation of the "open door" in China.

War Possibilities Remote.

The proportion of success in the Far Eastern half of the conference is about the same as that in the naval half. Certainly of the possibility of war in the Far East has been made remote. China came to the conference with everything to gain and nothing to lose. Though the conference found it could make but a small dent in established facts in China, it did decree that the game of grab should stop and paved the way to the eventual restoration of China's damaged sovereignty.

Satisfaction may be derived from the fact that in several instances where the conference failed to come to a decision the opposing views were spread on the record. This was done, for instance, in the matter of the difference in opinion between the United States and Japan over the retention of Japanese troops in Siberia. The record was made for the world's judgment.

Large account must also be taken, in any estimate of the benefits from the conference, of the impetus it has given to the movement for world peace through general disarmament. As Lord Riddell, the British public expert, said, it was a great "peace advertiser." It has set the world to thinking about peace and the ways of attaining it. It has proved that representatives of the ntaions when animated by a spirit of co-operation, can gather around a conference table and iron out a lot of difficulties.

The conference has done its work—not a perfect work, but one that has greatly increased the sum total of good feeling in the world What the Senate will do about it remains to be seen.

as the animus of a new inspiration to go forward to orderly development.

The utterances of the statesmen of the Powers during the final period of oratory were addressed, strangely enough, to a hall almost empty of spectators. The plenary session had lapped far over the lunch hour before it had completed the tedious formalities of approving treaties and resolutions already made public and what had originally been a crowd of many hundreds dwindled gradually away until the galleries had many entire rows of seats without a single occupant.

Hughes Presents Treaty.

Secretary Hughes, acting as his own reading clerk, presented to the conference in turn the general Far Eastern treaty, the statements of the Japanese and American Governments on Siberia, a similar series of statements by the Japanese, Chinese and American Governments on the "twenty-one demands" and several of the supplementary resolutions. Senator Underwood, chairman of the Conference Tariff Committee, read the tariff treaty, Senator Lodge presented the supplement to the four-Power Pacific treaty, and Mr. Root the resolution authorizing a future conference to revise the rules of warfare.

As the agreements of the conference finally shape up, nine of the resolutions formally adopted are left out of the series of treaties, delegation leaders explaining that they deal with subjects which relate to executive policy and do not require parliamentary ratification. These resolutions, which are declared, nevertheless, to stand as binding agreements among the Powers, provide for withdrawal of foreign postoffices from China, establishment of a commission to investigate extra-territoriality in China, regulation of Chinese radio facilities, consideration of the question of withdrawing foreign troops from Chinese soil, unification of the Chinese railroads, publicity of all commitments affecting China, "better protection" for the Chinese Eastern Railway, a conference of the Powers on rules of warfare, and a request on the part of the Powers that China reduce her military forces.

In addition to these, the conference adopted today three supplementary resolutions, one establishing a "board of reference" to handle questions arising under the general Far Eastern treaty, another providing that until the five-Power naval treaty is ratified, the signatories are "in honor bound" not to dispose of ships that otherwise would be scrapped, and the third stipulating that the five-Power submarine and poison gas treaty shall not come under review by the conference on warfare regulations.

To Ratify Japan Agreement.

The supplemental agreement to exclude Japan proper from the scope of the four-Power Pacific treaty, on the other hand, is to be ratified by the parliamentary bodies of the signatories as a part of the treaty itself. It is to be signed at Monday's session, the five-Power treaty to which it refers having already received the formal signatures of the plenipotentiaries.

Besides this agreement, to which the United States, Great Britain, Japan and France are party, the instruments to be signed Monday are the naval limitation and the submarine and poison gas treaties, to which the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy are parties, and the general Far Eastern and Chinese tariff treaties, which require approval by the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France, Italy, China, Belgium, Portugal and the Netherlands. That will bring the total of signed treaties produced by the conference to six, while two others relating to Yap and the Pacific cables are to be put into final form and signed later. Like the Shantung agreements these two treaties are regarded by conference leaders as falling outside the province of the conference negotiations proper.

Speech by Balfour.

"Exactly 12 weeks ago," said Balfour, "the President of the United States in an eloquent speech in which he inaugurated our meeting asked us to approach our labors with full consciousness that we were working for the welfare of mankind.

"Looking back over that 12 weeks I think we may say without undue self esteem that the advice so nobly tendered has been taken and have had a consciousness that we were working in the service of mankind."

Balfour said he could well believe that the mass of treaties, resolutions and speeches might cause confusion in the minds of the people.

"Yet I think," he added, "that those engaged in the work as well as those who will have the opportunity calmly to consider it, will see that, in spite of the fact that we have traveled all over the whole globe, seemingly, considering trifling details, the great moral questions have been met."

Treaties to Stand, Balfour Says.

Any nation, which in the future sought to transgress the principles laid down by the conference in regard to China, Balfour solemnly warned, need not plead ignorance or seek to invoke any secret "understanding" with minor Chinese officials. Such a nation, he declared, would be considered "outside the comity of the nations.

"If you would really estimate the magnitude of our accomplishments," Balfour continued, "cast your eyes back only a few months, when a spirit of deep anxiety overshadowed the mind of every man who contemplated the state of public feeling in the Pacific area. Although the world was still bleeding from the wounds of war, men talked glibly about naval wars and our great maritime Powers felt they were almost committed to the fatal rivalry of shipbuilding, a standing menace to its peace."

New Feeling Among Men.

Such a feeling, Balfour continued, existed within the last year. He emphasized that he was not talking about ancient history, and added:

"May we not see in the changed feeling of men that already the work of this conference has produced its beneficent results; that already a feeling, a mutual feeling, of fear has given way to a feeling of a very different character."

The decisions of the conference, Balfour asserted, would produce a "new era" over the entire world, especially over that part in which the great maritime Powers are deeply concerned.

"The center of our troubles had been the peculiar problems that have arisen in regard to China during the last quarter of a century," said Balfour. "The relations between China and foreign Powers, and even more, the relations between foreign Powers on account of China, has caused endless anxiety among statesmen of the world."

Adding, however, that he was not certain anxiety in regard to China was at an end, Balfour said it was difficult to apply to China "recent schemes of a political sort," which can be effectively applied to Western nations.

Balfour contended that China must work out her own changes "in accordance with the changes of a changing world."

"It is to the genius and inspiration of those who have directed the policy of the United States," Balfour continued, "that this day stands out unique in history as one of a great successful effort to diminish the burdens of peace and render more remote the horrors of war. If this United States had not had the courage; the foremost of conception which embodied their announcement of Nov. 12, all the rest of our labors would have lost one-half of any value which they now possess."

Speaking for France, Albert Sarraut said it was too soon to be able to fully realize the whole significance of the accomplishments and that all the delegations could return to their homes with their heads held high and with hearts confident that they had done the best they could in the interest of humanity.

"When the inventory is being written," said M. Sarraut "I am sure that it will show that no sordid thought ever entered the heart of any of us."

Senator Schanzer then speaking for Italy, declared the conference "marked the point of departure of a new era" of peace.

Referring to the question of American representation in the Genoa conference, Schanzer expressed a hope that the United States would not withdraw from its participation in the councils of the world.

Japanese Baron Speaks.

Baron Shidehara, for Japan, praised the accomplishments of the conference, both with regard to armament and the Far East. "unanimity of views could hardly be expected on all questions," said Baron Shidehara. "But after numerous sessions, one broad fact has been brought markedly to the fore. It has been, that all differences of opinion relate not so much to the ultimate purposes of the nations in the Pacific, as to the means by which such purposes are attained. It has been found that we are striving for the same goal in life and that goal is now in sight."

"To say that Japan has special interests in China," he continued, "is to state a plain and actual fact. It intimates no claim inimical to China or to any other foreign nation. Nor are we actuated by any reason for securing special rights in China."

Baron Shidehara reiterated that Japan did not seek any Chinese territory but desired maintenance of the open door and equal opportunity. He praised the naval treaty, saying:

"We knew the conference would do good. It has done good. Competition in naval armaments is now a matter of the past."

Baron de Cartier of Belgium added his felicitations on the work of the conference in a short speech delivered in French. The conference, he said, had resulted in accomplishments most gratifying to the Belgium Government.

Minister Sze, for China, assured the conference that his Government felt much gratified over what had been done, both in regard to the Far East and armaments. China, he said, appreciated fully what Baron Shidehara had said about the future of the Chinese nation, which he said would in the future guard against any nation gaining special interest in its territory.

"Sincere satisfaction" over the conference results, was expressed by Jonkheer von Blokland, for the Netherlands.

A similar statement was made for Portugal by Viscount D'Alte.

Secretary Hughes Speaks.

Secretary Hughes followed Viscount D'Alte with a speech giving his conception of the work of the conference.

"We did not content ourselves with expressions of pious hope," said Mr. Hughes, "but were determined to realize the hope that the world for a generation had been struggling to attain"

Referring to the conference rule requiring unanimous action, he said that rule, of course, has carried with it the consequence that when any proposal was resisted it was impossible to carry the proposal forward.

Secretary Hughes expressed gratification for the personal tributes paid him and thanked the delegates. He also commended the co-operation of the press, which, he said, has greatly aided in molding public opinion throughout the world.

Chinese Naval Officer Sail for Home.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 4.—Admiral Toai Ting Kan, naval adviser to the Chinese delegation to the arms conference, sailed for China today on the steamer Silver State, accompanied by members of his staff and others who were attached to the delegation.

POINTS IN CHINESE TARIFF TREATY

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The following is a summary of the new treaty respecting the Chinese tariff, announced today at the arms conference:

(The treaty repeats in substance the provisions of the tariff resolution adopted previously, but in different language.)

Article 1 provides for a revision commission to meet at Shanghai immediately and to revise the Chinese import tariff on a basis of 5 per cent effective. All the nine Powers would be represented. The revision would be complete within four months and become effective two months later.

Article 2 provides for a "special conference" of the signatory Powers to meet in China within three months to revise existing treaties to permit imposition of a surtax.

Internal Tax to Go.

By article 3 the special conference also would take steps towards abolition of the internal Chinese likin tax.

Under article 4 another revision of import duties is authorized as soon as the first revision is completed and periodical revisions would take place every four years.

Article 5 pledges the Powers to "effective equality of treatment and of opportunity," in all that pertains to the Chinese tariffs.

Under article 6 the "principle of uniformity" on land and maritime frontiers is agreed to.

Charge for "Transit Passes."

Article 7 fixes 2½ per cent ad valorem as the charge for "transit passes."

Article 8 invites other Powers to adhere to the treaty.

Article 9 provides that the treaty shall override all conflicting previous agreements.

Article 10 contains the usual provisions for parliamentary ratification.

of Kiaochow," and in the subsequent articles and annexes provides for the details of the restoration.

Machinery is set up through a joint commission to be appointed by the Chinese and Japanese Governments to make and carry out "detailed arrangements" relating to the transfer of administration and public properties, and to settle other matters requiring adjustment. The transfer is to be completed as soon as possible, but in any case within six months of the coming into effect of the treaty.

Japanese troops, including those along the Tsingtao—Tsinanfu Railway are to be withdrawn from Shantung as soon as the Chinese police or military are provided to take over the protection of the railway. This may be done in sections, the date in each instance to be arranged in advance between the Chinese and Japanese authorities and the complete withdrawal to be effected within three months if possible, and not later than six months after signing of the treaty.

The Japanese garrison at Tsingtao is to be withdrawn simultaneously, if possible, with the transfer of the administration of the leasehold and in any case within 30 days thereafter. The Japanese agree that the Customs House at Tsingtao shall become an integral part of the Chinese maritime customs as soon as the treaty comes into force.

Payment to Japan.

Under articles providing for the transfer to China of the Tsingtao-Tsinanfu Railway, called the crux of the entire Shantung problem, China undertakes to pay Japan 53,406,141 gold marks, the value placed on the road by the reparations commission under the treaty of Versailles plus Japanese expenditure for permanent improvements and additions, minus an allowance for depreciation. A joint Sino-Japanese commission will be appointed to agree on these values.

Actual transfer of the railway properties is to be completed as soon as possible, but not later than nine months after the treaty becomes effective, and payment is to be made then with Chinese treasury notes secured on the properties and revenues of the road running for a period of 15 years, redeemable after five years at China's option. Until these notes are redeemed a Japanese will occupy the post of traffic manager and another Japanese will be chief accountant, jointly with a chinese chief accountant with coordinate functions. These officials "shall all be under the direction, control and supervision of the Chinese managing director and removable for cause."

Extensions of the Tsingtao-Tsinanfu railway, already provided for by concessions, shall be open "to the common activity of an international financial group on terms to be arranged between this group and the Chinese Government.

Operation of Mines.

Former German-operated mines in the Province will be handed over to a company to be formed under a special charter of the Chinese Government, in which the Japanese capital shall not exceed Chinese capital.

Japan undertakes not to seek the establishment of an exclusive Japanese or international settlement in Kiauchau and China agrees to open the entire former leasehold and port of Tsingtao to foreign trade on equal terms. Property rights of foreigners will be respected. The salt industry is declared to be a part of the Chinese Government monopoly and Japanese interests will be purchased at a fair value.

The treaty becomes effective after its signature and exchanges at Pekin which must take place not later than four months after signing.

COURT CONFIRMS SALE OF LINCOLN MOTORS TO FORD

His Bid of $8,000,000 the Only One Made at Auction of Detroit Automobile Works.

WILL MAKE BIG CUT IN PRICE OF CARS

Factory Which Has Been Closed Pending Receiver's Sale Will Be Reopened by New Owner Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Feb. 4.—Henry Ford formally came into possession of the Lincoln Motor Company at Detroit late today when Judge Arthur J. Tuttle in United States District Court confirmed sale of the property, effected at public auction this morning. There was no protest to the confirmation.

Ford, through his representatives, bid $8,000,000 for the Lincoln holdings, being the only one to offer a bid. The price was the lowest that could be accepted, Judge Tuttle had ruled previously.

Expected opposition to Ford's plan to purchase the company failed to develop.

Other Bidders Withdraw.

Both George T. Judson, local banker, and E. T. Berger, Detroit attorney, who yesterday qualified as bidders by filing certified checks for $250,000 each in Federal Court, announced their withdrawal shortly before the sale took place.

Berger announced he withdrew upon advice of his New York clients, who expressed fear legal complications might ensue because their certified checks qualifying them as bidders had been filed after 10 o'clock yesterday morning, the hour originally set by Judge Tuttle as the latest moment checks would be received.

Judson would make no statement regarding his withdrawal.

Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., announced following the auction, that the Lincoln plant, closed for some time pending the sale would reopen Monday. It was also announced that price reductions ranging from $800 to $1200 would be made effective immediately.

Announcement that Ford was the only bidder and had offered the minimum price permitted by the Court caused a break in the price of Lincoln stock on the local Stock Exchange, the shares declining from a point slightly under $6 to $3. A rally later brought it to $3.50, where it remained when the market closed.

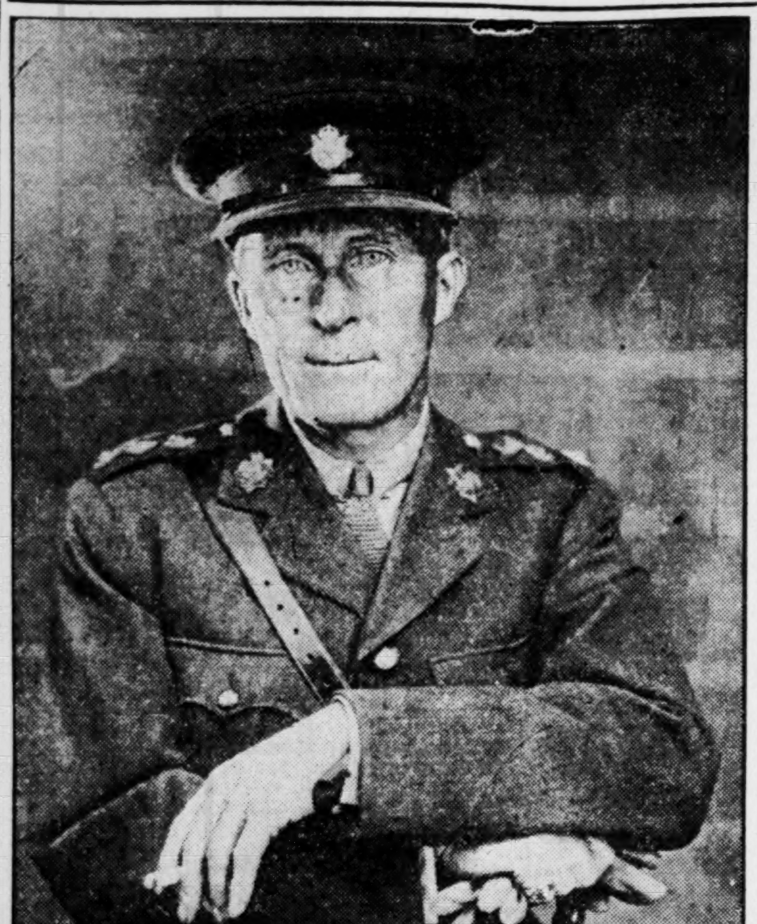
Personnel to Be Separate.

Although the Lincoln plant will be operated as a unit of the Ford organization, the executive personnel of the two concerns will be kept separate, according to announcement by the Lincoln company today. The Lincoln will continue under the direction of Henry M. and Wilfred C. Leland.

After the sale was consummated about 1000 employes of the Lincoln company invaded the plant to congratulate Henry M. Leland, president of the concern.

The Detroit Trust Co. was appointed receiver for the company in November on petition of company note holders and over the objection of President Leland. On that date the assets of the concern were listed in excess of $15,000,000. The receiver, after an appraisal, placed the assets at $9,073,105.46, and the liabilities at $9,490,811.13.

Murdered Movie Director in Uniform of a British Officer



WILLIAM DESMOND TAYLOR.

Taylor was captain in the British Army during the world war and will be buried Tuesday in his uniform.

MABEL NORMAND GOES TO TAYLOR HOME WITH POLICE

was at the inquest but was not called to the stand. A detective, however, testiged Mrs. MacLean told him after she heard the shot she went to her door and looked across a court and saw a man standing at Taylor's door.

The detective named two others who he said told him they heard a shot. The Coroner's jury asked him if they gave any explanation why they made no investigation at the time. He replied they said they thought the sound might have been made by an exploding tire.

The deceased was referred to as "Taylor" throughout the inquest.

Search for the person described by Mrs. MacLean and for Edward F. Sands, former butler and secretary for Taylor, continued and the police ran down numerous fruitless clews. It was admitted for the first time by the investigators that Sands is believed to be in or near Los Angeles. He had been sought for several months on a grand larceny charge made by Taylor, who alleged Sands stole some of his effects and disappeared. Investigators said they had the word of a witness they believed unimpeachable that Sands was in this city last Tuesday.

The detectives said the statement of Sands would be an "important element" in the case if he had one to make, in the interest of narrowing the scope of the investigation.

Revenge Believed Motive.

The investigation today, it was said, was devoted largely to the subject of motive. The police have been from the beginning of the opinion that Taylor was slain for revenge, but it was admitted that up to late today it had not been determined that anyone entertained an animosity for Taylor of such a degree that would appear to be incentive to murder. The possibility that jealously might have been the cause of the slaying was still receiving attention, it was declared.

The discovery that Taylor had once gone by another name was received by the police with much interest and it was said that this might prove an important element in the case.

Inspection of the Taylor residence was completed by finger prints experts, who announced they had found no impressions or other clews.

The bullet, which was taken from Taylor's body, was produced at the inquest, then returned to detectives who were endeavoring to learn its history. The missile was found practically intact and retained its original shape, due, County Autopsy Surgeon A. F. Wagner said, to its not having struck a bone during its passage through Taylor's body.

Bullet of Unusual Type.

The bullet was declared to be of unusual type, a distinguishing feature being a groove around its circumference near the base.

The dual existence of Taylor may be paralleled by the mystery surrounding his brother, Dennis Deane-Tanner, and the police are anxious to ascertain just what Sands may know in this connection.

Disappeared in 1908.

While Taylor came into public notice in 1908 when he disappeared from New York, where he was known as an art connoisseur under the name of William Desmond Deane-Tanner, his brother is reported to have disappeared likewise, but no revelations have developed here as to whether the brother is alive.

Mrs. Ada Deane-Tanner, wife of the brother, said that in 1912 her husband, a well-to-do interior decorater, Dennis Gage Deane-Tanner, left his home for his office in New York in 1912 and she had not seen nor heard from him since. A nation-wide search was made by detectives at that time, but according to Mrs. Deane-Tanner, she was never able to find a trace of his movements after his departure from the house.

Miss Normand is said to have admitted, as did Neva Gerber, another film actress, that Taylor once had been engaged to her, while Mary Miles Minter also is said to have enjoyed the director's close friendship at one time. It was only a week before his death, however, according to Miss Windsor's mother, that the latter took her first automobile ride and dinner with Taylor.

Many stories have been brought to the police by neighbors of Taylor and by his former employes concerning the neighborhood happenings the night of the crime, and the director's recent comings and goings, friends and associates, telephone calls and various social activities.

Tells of Incident on Walk.

Theodore Kostoff, the dancer, told of having been on "location" in the country with Taylor about two weeks ago. They were walking together. Suddenly, from behind a clump of bushes, a man sprang toward Taylor. They faced each other for a moment, eye to eye, and then the stranger turned and walked away. Taylor offered no explanation, Kostoff said.

Ted Taylor, the director's agent, but not a relative, told of a telephone call his chief received last Monday. The director hung up the telephone abruptly, it was said, and when the bell rang again two minutes later, said, "Don't answer."

What was said to be "a large automobile of striking appearance," seen near the Taylor apartments the night of the slaying, is understood to be receiving some attention from the detectives.

A question being considered is whether blackmail probably was an element in the crime. It is said to be considered possible the slayer attempted to extort money from Taylor, and when refused, or threatened with exposure, shot to kill. An open check book on Taylor's writing desk, with a pen nearby, found when the body was discovered, might, in the opinion of detectives, have been part of a plan of the director to "stall" until the police could arrive.

Another phase they are considering is whether Taylor might have feared for his life. From some sources the detectives are said to have gained the information that for a few days before his death, Taylor had seemed "uneasy about something." Henry Peavey, his negro houseman, told the police that Taylor, who usually used his automobile, left his apartments on foot Wednesday afternoon, a few hours before he was slain, and was absent a considerable period.

Neva Gerber last night said she once had been engaged to marry Taylor, but the engagement had been broken off because they "both believed it an unsuitable match."

"I have never known a finer, better man than Mr. Taylor," said Miss Gerber. "He was the soul of honor, a man of exceptional culture, education and refinement, but possessing a reserve which very few were permitted to penetrate.

"So far as I know, he did not have an enemy in the world, although he mentioned casually fights he had had on his various trips to the Klondike.

"He had led a most eventful life, and he told me on one occasion of being in a village in the Far North when it was scourged by smallpox. He went about nursing the inhabitants, including a priest. The epidemic was a severe one and practically everyone was stricken or had fled to escape the pest.

"Finally Mr. Taylor and the priest, I think were the only two left. The priest fell a victim and Mr. Taylor nursed him back to health. Then Mr. Taylor caught the disease and after a hard battle, the priest nursed him back to health, as Mr. Taylor had done for the priest.

Said He Made Two Fortunes.

"In spite of this experience, he often longed for the far north, and he used to talk about it in the rests between scenes in pictures. He told me he had made two fortunes and spent both of them upon his return to Alaska.

"He often spoke of his mother, then in London, and his little daughter. He always termed the latter a 'child' and was planning to bring her to Los Angeles. It was my understanding his former wife was living in New York. I always assumed he was divorced, for had he not been, he would not, I believe, have asked me to marry him. We were engaged for some time, but broke off the match two years ago when he concluded we were not suited to each other.

"This terrible affair is all the more mysterious because it was a common saying among the studios and in Hollywood generally that Mr. Taylor had not an enemy in the world.

"He may have made an enemy in the past, who nursed a grudge through the years which finally resulted in this murder, but he never gave the slightest indication to me of having any foe."

Funeral services for Taylor will be held Tuesday afternoon in a local church, the Motion Picture Director's Association announced. Taylor will be buried in his uniform of a Captain in the British army, which he wore during the world war, and military honors will be paid by other British veterans living in Los Angeles, it was stated.

Former Wife Tells of Life With Taylor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Mrs. E. L. C. Robins, former wife of William Desmond Taylor, slain Los Angeles motion picture director, tonight told of her married life with the murdered man, who she said then went by his real name, William Cunningham Deane Tanner. She said she could throw no light on the mystery of his death.

Prior to her marriage to Tanner, Mrs. Robins was Miss Ethel May Harrison, a member of the famous sextette of the original production of the musical comedy, "Floradora."

At that time Tanner was connected with a Fifth avenue antique shop. In 1908 he was said to have withdrawn his money from a bank, telephoned his wife that she would never see him again, though explaining it was no suicide that he contemplated, and vanished. For months thereafter he was sought by the police in America and by Scotland Yard in England.

Mrs. Robins said she had not heard whether her former husband had married again—was not sure, in fact, whether he knew that she had divorced him.

YAP TREATY TO BE SIGNED NEXT WEEK BY U. S. AND JAPAN

Signatures of Secretary Hughes and Baron Shidehara to Be Affixed to Agreement.

By CHARLES MICHELSON,
A Special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—All the treaties emanating from the arms conference were adopted at the penultimate plenary session today except that applying to Yap which Secretary of State Hughes and Baron Shidehara will sign the coming week, and the six-Power treaty about the former German cables which awaits Italy's agreement.

Today's proceedings naturally divide themselves into two divisions—the first a routine acceptance of the treaties and resolutions to which all hands had already given their assent and the purport of which has been frequently published and the second a session of oratory in which the heads of each delegation congratulated themselves and the world on the results accruing from the conference.

It does not sound like a very exciting program, but there were gleams all through both divisions. The first bright spot was the presentation by Senator Lodge of the supplement to the four-Power treaty that takes the homeland of Japan out of the protection accorded the territorial integrity and confirms the sovereignty of the Powers in the island and "island dominions" in the Pacific.

It was Lodge's speech in announcing and explaining the original treaty that resulted in the disclosure that either the President or the delegates did not know what it meant, for Lodge carefully avoided any reference to the inclusion of the main islands of Japan in the treaty, though it was discussed and thoroughly understood in the committee sessions and the President came out and announced that it was as absurd to consider the homeland of Japan as in the purview of the treaty as the mainland of the United States.

It was this incident that compelled the supplement adopted today. Lodge did not couple his presentation of the revision with any speech or explanation, which omission occasioned grins and nudges throughout the audience.

Senator Underwood got the only chance he has had at the open sessions with the treaty on Chinese tariff. Hughes has had the limelight most of the time, naturally. Lodge was able to romance around the jeweled isles of the Pacific with the four-Power treaty and Root had the advantage of the horror thrill that goes with submarines and poison gases, while Underwood had the unpicturesque assignment that deals with the difference between 5 per cent ad valorem and such customs rates as the Chinese themselves might wish to impose on imports into their country. Underwood realized that it sounded queer to have a conference called largely to attempt the restoration to China of sovereign rights of which she had been deprived, then fix her customs duties and name an international board to handle them.

"It may seem an anomaly," said Underwood, "for the conference after recognizing the territorial integrity and sovereignty of China to engage in a compact on a domestic question." But he hoped the day was not far distant when China would regulate her own tariff.

In the course of his explanation he slipped easily into a review of Chinese history for the past 400 years. It was not as good a vehicle as Senator Lodge's "Cruise of the Kawa," but it helped diversify a dry and technical subject.

Underwood wound up that the treaty arrangement would "in all human probability "double China's revenue from tariff duties.

Minister Sze, rising amid great applause got into the record that this was only enough to meet the temporary needs of the Chinese Government and that China looked for complete independence. He added that the political troubles in China were only the transitional pangs incident to the change from an autocratic to a democratic republic.

None of the speeches will figure in future examples of great addresses for the use of students of oratory; the delegates are tired and their expressions of gratitude and satisfaction have been made through the conference, but they were by no means uninteresting.

ACHIEVEMENTS OF ARMS CONFERENCE PRAISED BY LODGE

Declares Parley Succeeded in Accomplishing Practical Results by Treating Only Armaments and Far East.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—By not trying to do too much the Washington arms conference "has succeeded in doing something real and practical," Senator Lodge of the American delegation declared tonight in a statement commenting on the results of the meeting. The secret of success, he declared, lay in the fact that "It was limited in subject."

"The conference was confined by the President's invitation," the Senator said, "to the limitation of armaments and questions relating to the Far East—and the Far East meant China. We had three principal objectives—the limitation of armaments, the termination of the Anglo-Japanese alliance and aid to China which would help her to secure real independence. All three objectives have been attained, if not with completeness, which, of course, was impossible in the case of China, in a very large measure.

"As France, owing to her situation, was unable to reduce her land forces, the efforts of the conference were directed to naval armament. The reduction involving abandonment or destruction of many capital ships was not the most important feature of the limitation.

Limitations Called Achievement.

The great achievements to my mind were the limitations on the tonnage of ships and the caliber of guns, for this means an end to competition in armaments and naval competition—the real danger. Supplementing this with the naval holiday by which no building can be undertaken before 1947, except for replacements under certain limited conditions, we may truly say that the conference has succeeded not only in a reduction, but a permanent reduction in naval armaments, putting an end to competition both in guns and tonnage. This limitation extends beyond capital ships and includes all auxiliary vesels as well.

"The second achievement was what is popularly nown as the four-Power is popularly known as the four-Power holding insular possessions or dominions in the Pacific terminated the Anglo-Japanese alliance—an alliance which carried in it the seeds of future troubles in the Pacific region. This was the one all-important point in the four-Power treaty. The treaty contains no possibility of any alliance and no obligation whatever beyond the obligation to consult in case of a controversy, and no nation is bound by the results of the consultation.

China Assisted.

"In regard to China the outstanding and most important result was, of course, the return of the Province of Shantung by Japan. Apart from the Shantung settlement, other things were done by the conference of the highest value to China. First was the general treaty which provides for China's neutrality, for the 'open door,' and many other points of very great moment. Then there are a number of declarations made by the conference and unanimously agreed to which relieve China in the matter of foreign postoffices, foreign troops, extra territorial jurisdiction and other points of the same kind.

"I cannot but believe that the work of the conference not only will help to relieve, in a large measure, the nations of the earth from the burden of naval expeditures, but that the work of the conference has done much to promote and maintain the future peace of the world over a great area of the world's surface. The Far East is a region where international disputes and wars between nations are easily bred and a great deal has been done to remove that danger from the coming years."

Belgian and Canadian Arms Delegates Praise Parley.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Baron de Cartier, Belgian Ambassador to the United States and delegate to the arms conference, made the following statement tonight concerning the conference:

"The Washington conference will stand forth in history as one of the epoch-making events of the world, for it was inspired by noble motives of justice and honor. Conceived by the great republic, the United States of America, through its high-minded chief executive, President Harding, and its illustrious Secretary of State, Mr. Hughes, the conference will be recorded, I believe, as a triumph of American foresight, courage and capacity in international diplomacy, a diplomacy founded on justice and good will to all.

"Belgium has been most happy to participate in the various treaties and resolutions affecting the future of the Far East and as a natural order of things contributing to the safeguarding of the peace of the whole world. International co-operation as the watchword for the future—fairness and equity in all inter-nation dealings appeals to the people of Belgium because it represents their real aspirations and their high hopes for a future of tranquility and happiness."

Borden Makes Statement.

The "educative influence" of the Washington conference should be given primary place in the results of the meeting, Sir Robert Borden, Canadian delegate, declared.

"Beyond question," he said, "the practical, concrete results that have been attained are notable. Even if those results had been much less important, I should still hold that it was infinitely worth while to have called the conference. On the other hand, if those concrete results had been still greater I should have regarded them as of less vital significance than the educative influence such a conference is bound to exercise upon the participating nations.

"Although we remember the decay and destruction of past civilizations, we are apt to ascribe permanence to our own. It would be difficult to offer any valid reason for such conclusion unless the blighting and devastating effects of war can be avoided. In our remarkable command over the destructive agencies of nature and in man's lack of control over his primeval instincts and passions, the existing civilization may face more constant peril and more widespread destruction than any in the past.

Education Called Essential.

"To preserve the progress for which we have toiled painfully through many centuries and to insure a faster advance along the path of freedom, justice and equal opportunity, mankind must find some efficient means by which public right shall be enthroned and the world's peace maintained.

"That can only be accomplished by one of two means; the first, at present wholly impracticable, is the establishment of an international authority armed with sufficient force to control the aggression of any nation; the other and the only practicable means is so to educate the public opinion of the world that the government of each State will be constrained to the settlement of international differences by peaceful means.

"The peace of the world cannot be assured by any proposal that does not have this educative process as its fundamental basis. The habit of direct, effective and continuing international consultation must be formed to bring the nations around a common council board, to realize and to discuss different points of view, to bring harmony out of discord and agreement out of controversy. This surely is a great lesson for all the nations. It has been effectively learned by each nation represented at this conference."

The measure of success achieved by the Washington conference can only be appreciated when it is considered that the conference brought about the adoption of "most important resolutions and acceptances of considerable sacrifices through free discussion, not through imposition," Senator Schanzer, head of the Italian delegation, said in a formal statement issued tonight.

"Here was not a congress of victors and vanquished," the Italian spokesman said, "but of states equally independent in their sovereignty. This new method of diplomacy, first applied by the United States, has given excellent results and the Powers, convened in Washington after patient and friendly discussions, agreed to create new guarantees for the maintenance of the world peace.

Believes War Averted.

"No one can controvert the fact that the conference of Washington, by eliminating the danger of war in the Pacific, has freed the world from a most oppressing nightmare, since a war in those seas among the greatest naval Powers would certainly have had dire consequences not only for the nations at war but for all nations of the world.

"The naval treaty has actually proved that limitation of armaments is possible and has freed the interested nations from a financial burden which would have ultimately ruined them.

"The policy of the Powers concerning China has been placed upon the solid basis of clearly formulated principles and the application of these principles will offer secure guarantees for the progress of the Celestial Empire, an immense reservoir of man-power and natural wealth.

"The wish I now express is that the United States may continue to use the power and the great influence it has acquired in the world to carry on its beneficent missions for peace, co-operation among peoples and restoration of the international economic balance."

SUMMARY OF PROFIT AND LOSS FROM ARMS PARLEY

British Journalist Sees Concessions to France and Japan as Weak Points—Tie Between Great Britain and America Stronger.

A British estimate of the work of the Arms Conference is given in the following dispatch sent to the Manchester Guardian by its special correspondent and printed in the Post-Dispatch by special arrangement.

By HENRY NEVINSON.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—It is now possible to estimate the profit and loss upon the arms conference as a whole.

The obvious weak points were the concessions to France and Japan, who have acted in concert throughout as though bound by the alleged previous agreement revealed in the documents published by the Far Eastern Chita Republic. The first mistake was the departure from the Hughes disarmament scheme by yielding to Japan's outcry for the preservation of the capital ship Mutsu, thus entailing some expense upon America and a great expense upon Britain in providing new capital ships to maintain the ratio.

The second mistake lay in yielding to the French demand for a vast fleet of submarines when Britain proposed their total abolition. Great expense is thus imposed on Britain for antisubmarine craft and some expense to America and Italy, besides the incalculable increase of ill-feeling between ourselves and France, as illustrated in the further submarine controversy between Ambassador Jusserand and Lord Lee on Tuesday.

The Third Mistake.

The third mistake was the failure to preserve China from encroachments except by Elihu Root's four points resolution, which can easily be broken by an aggressive Power. The Shantung compromise is a distinct gain to China, but still leaves Japan with a finger in the railway management and opportunity for financial interference for some years.

As was shown especially in American Delegate Underwood's paternal homily to the Chinese, the delegates have said to China:

"Be good, sweet child, and let the Japanese be clever."

The fourth mistake was in yielding to Japan's demand to obliterate the fourth of the Hughes resolutions, allowing the proposed board of reference to examine past as well as future concessions and agreements made by China with other Powers. Japan thus secured by default all her claims to Port Arthur, Manchuria and other past concessions, though Admiral Kato still admits that Manchuria is part of China.

The fifth mistake was the acceptance of the pious resolution promising the withdrawal of the Japanese troops from Eastern Siberia as soon as a stable government is erected and peace prevails, though every one knows that the presence of the Japanese troops is the sole hindrance to stability and peace.

Better Excuse Offered.

The British delegates plead that Japan, though difficult in diplomacy, keeps her word when once given. Holy simplicity! Have they forgotten Japan's solemn pledges to withdraw from Corea when the Russian was finished?

A better excuse was that the Far Eastern republic could not be dealt with apart from the rest of Russia with which it will ultimately be federated as a Russian state. But Japan's occupation of Vladivostok and the Maritime provinces up to the mouth of the Amur River, together with the brutal behavior of her troops in the Chita dominion, implies a terrible war as soon as Russia recovers her fighting strength.

Another point of failure is the abandonment of all attempt to limit land forces after Briand's incendiary speech. Perhaps still more ominous was his implied insult to Britain in deliberately omitting all reference to our service to France during the war.

On the other hand, though Japan, supported by France, rides off temporarily triumphant with the spoils, the conference has secured large intangible advantages, especially for England and America.

The chief object and difficulty of the conference was to assuage the growing hostility between these two countries owing to our Japanese alliance and consequent vast program for the American fleet.

Gain Pointed Out.

Japan is unpopular here, partly through immigration on the Pacific coast and threatened monopoly of the Chinese trade, but chiefly through the treatment of China, as in Shantung. Our Japanese alliance brought a share of the unpopularity on us. The four-Power treaty ended that alliance without offense to Japan, by bringing her into agreement with France and America as well.

This was an immense gain, though the treaty only prescribes consultation in case of agreement and respect of island possessions in the Pacific within certain boundaries; and though the existence of the agreement will make interference with Japanese aggression in China and Siberia only more delicate.

Japan has not gained here in sympathy. France has heavily lost. But the feeling between America and England has been incalculably improved, and that is the chief advantage of the whole prolonged conference.

Advantages Accrue.

Great credit is due to Balfour for his personal tact and extraordinary popularity. Also to Lord Lee and Ambassador Geddes. The whole British delegation has won a high opinion, though our captious critics still detect amazing astuteness and deep laid cunning in British diplomacy, far too subtle for the blue-eyed innocence of American politicians, even of President Harding and Secretary Hughes.

The question of whether the Senate will ratify the treaties is still uncertain. The opposition is strong, partly owing to the Democrats' indignation at the Republicans for stealing Woodrow Wilson's clothes, as they consider, and partly owing to Republican fear of European entanglements.

But I consider that ratification is now probable, if a good show is made over the supposed protection of China and the settlement of the Shantung dispute. Whether the treaties are ratified or not, great advantages are secured for the English-speaking peoples and possibly for the general peace.

OPENS BANK ACCOUNT WITH STOLEN CHECK, IS ARRESTED

Man Taken by Postoffice Inspectors as He Attempts to Get Cash to Leave City.

Leo Harris, 26 years old, who said that he was reared in a Jewish orphans' home in Cleveland, was arrested yesterday before a teller's window in the First National Bank at which he had presented a check for $200 against a deposit of $225 he made on last Wednesday with a check stolen from an apartment house mail box, which he altered.

The stolen check was one of the Brown Shoe Co., made payable to Mrs. W. E. Cook, 5791 Westminster place. Harris took the check from the mail box of Mrs. Cook's apartment, erased the "s" of the "Mrs.," endorsed it "W. E. Cook," and with it opened an account in the bank. Mrs. Cook complained of the nondelivery, first to the shoe company, then to Postoffice Inspectors, who discovered the check's deposit in the bank and set a watch.

Harris made out a check for $200 signed with the name "Cook," yesterday, intending, he said, to depart last night for New Orleans, and when he appeared at the cashier's cage, was taken into custody.

He is five feet tall and weighs 95 pounds. He told a reporter he came to St. Louis Jan. 20 and rented a room at 4312A Olive street. His theft at the Cook apartment was his first, he declared.

ANOTHER DAY OF BALLOTING FOR A POPE FRUITLESS

Vast Crowds Around the Vatican and St. Peter's Watching Signal Smoke Again Disappointed.

MINOR ACCIDENTS AT SCENE OF WAITING

Gendarmes and Troops Have Difficulty Untangling Immense Assemblage of People and Vehicles.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Feb. 4.—The balloting of the members of the Sacred College for the successor of Pope Benedict XV today again proved fruitless. Shortly before sundown the vast crowds which had assembled around the Vatican and St. Peter's dispersed with even greater disappointment than on the previous evening when failure to select a Pontiff was announced by the black smoke issuing from the Sistine Chapel.

Gendarmes and troops had difficulty in untangling the immense assemblage of pedestrians and vehicles of all sort that were massed together awaiting throughout the day the final announcement. And although there was considerable disorder, only a few minor accidents occurred.

Reports Called "Fantastic."

Reports appearing in the newspapers purporting to relate to the progress made in the conclave are characterized by Vatican officials as "absurd and fantastic."

Prior to the opening of the conclave, the Vatican was stocked with what was considered an ample food supply to carry the Cardinals through the election period. But it became necessary today to withdraw 120,000 lire from the bank for further provisions, portending a protracted duration of the conclave, in which event Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, who is speeding to Rome, will likely arrive in time to take part in the later sessions.

No definite announcement has come from the conclave as to the course to be pursued on Sunday. In some quarters it is believed the usual work of the conclave would be suspended for religious ceremonies. But as Cardinals make their own rules of procedure, they could, if they so desired, proceed with the balloting on Sunday.

Interest Is Increasing.

Interest in the balloting is increasing as each succeeding vote shows that the Cardinals have been unable to reach the necessary two-thirds. The crowds this afternoon in St. Peter's Square were by far the largest since the office of Pontiff became vacant, and while the attitude of the people has been marked by patience, signs of nervousness and high tension are not lacking. Both yesterday and today the issuance of white smoke, when the ballots were first set on fire was interpreted by many of the watchers that a selection had been made.

Announcement in Morning.

There is a feeling by some of the prelates that the Sacred College will adhere to precedent and not announce its choice in the evening, on the ground that morning is more solemn for such an occasion. Some lean to the belief that by the withdrawal of a large sum from the bank, the camerlengo, Cardinal Gasparri, is preparing for a long siege as divergence develops within the conclave walls and no compromise is visible.

Nothwithstanding the uncertainty of tomorrow's proceedings, Sunday will be a banner day for the people of Rome, the most of whom probably will await in the vast piazza the possibility of some announcement.

Soft, Summer-Like Day.

The day broke with summer-like clearness and softness, bringing out the largest crowd since the beginning of the conclave. Bishops, priests, friars, sisters of mercy and Christian brothers, accompanied by students, were numerous in the assemblage.

Toward noon the sun became so intense that many in the crowd discarded their overcoats and raised umbrellas. Several airplanes were flying at low altitude, sending to flight thousands of pigeons and other birds perched on the roof of the Vatican.

Anticipating the largest gathering of the week, Vatican authorities established an improvised hospital in one of the outer chambers of St. Peter's. The doctors, however, did not receive a single patient.

Cardinal Marini, who has been suffering from influenza since the opening of the conclave, was reported to be better today, so that he was able to be present at today's balloting.

Athletes Foil Attempted Holdup.

By the Associated Press.

OSSINING, N. Y., Feb. 4.—A highwayman, who tried to hold up 20 young men, basketball players and their friends near here today, after they had offered him a ride on their motor truck, was disarmed and soundly thrashed before he managed to escape in the woods near Pine Ridge.

Second Post-Dispatch Free Concert Attracts an Attentive Audience of Children That Fills Theater

Verdi's March, Dvorak's "Largo," Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," Wolf-Ferrari's "Intermezzi" and Delibes' Ballet Music Charm Hearers—Boys Seem More Interested Than Girls.

Conductor Ganz, to Delight of Youngsters, Gives as an Encore "In the Hall of the Mountain King," Bringing Them to Their Feet, and Repeats It, So That They Go Away, Talking of It.

The free Post-Dispatch concert, given by the Symphony Orchestra at at the Missouri Theater yesterday morning, attracted more than 3500 children, and called forth a display of interest which drew delighted comment from Conductor Ganz. It was the second of a series of five concerts which this newspaper is presenting as its Christmas gift to the pupils of the public and parochial grade and high schools of St. Louis, and it exceeded, both in attendance and enthusiasm, the first, which was given Jan. 21.

At the conclusion of yesterday's performance, Conductor Ganz was asked if he had detected any difference in the attitude of the two audiences.

"Yes, indeed," he responded quickly. "They were on more intimate terms with us today; one could feel that. And there was more unity of atmosphere. They are interesting ones to play for—those youngsters! Anyone can see that we shall be great friends before this series is finished."

Quieter, Less Critical Audience.

The conductor was not the only one to perceive that the audience possessed characteristics distinct from one composed of adults. For one thing, it was quieter, better behaved, and less critical. Especially is the latter true. These naive listeners had no desire to show erudition—no ambition to pose as critics. Either they were absorbed, and showed it, or they were indifferent. In either event, the orchestra was something colossal and above criticism. They did not patronize.

And how impressionable they were! How they responded to the spirit of the various numbers! When, for example, the stirring bars of the triumphal "Aida" march flared out, there was a perceptible tensing of bodies; and before the last trumpet note had died away, the stately rhythm was being stamped by a thousand feet. And thus, no less, did they succumb to the melancholy spell cast by the mournful beauty of the "Largo." One fancied the composer, whose loneliness inspired it, weeping again out of sheer fullness of spirit, at the sympathetic sadness reflected in the serried rows of faces.

But the outstanding demonstration was yet to come. It proved, almost, that music's charms to soothe the childish breast are impotent compared to its power to arouse them. It happened when the orchestra played, as an encore, Grieg's "In the Hall of the Mountain King."

Grieg Piece Arouses Children.

This was, as Conductor Ganz explained before playing it, "a dance by a King who had very large feet." It was precisely calculated to set the audience on fire. As the prodigious, thumping meter of the piece rose to huge, and still huger proportions, the listeners became tremendously excited. Obviously, they could fairly see a giant in enormous wooden shoes, cavorting uproariously in his great hall. They laughed and cheered, and some—there is no denying it—actually jumped up and down. At the end there was such a storm of applause that the good-natured conductor played it again, and with the same effect.

Later, commenting upon this demonstration, he shook his head in mock despiar as he said: "Ah, that Mountain King's Dance—I don't know—I'm afraid they'll go to bed and get up with that!"

No doubt it had a pronounced effect on the reception accorded the numbers that came after. These, the two beautiful intermezzi from "The Jewels of the Madonna," were accepted very much as something which follows the main event. Interest heightened a trifle as the concluding selections were rendered, but the crisis had passed, as was evident.

Very few departed, however, until the program was finished. Those who did were the older ones, whose action, it was apparent, was in imitation of their elders, thus lending force to the argument that children behave best when they act naturally, and worst, when they copy grownups.

Boys More Attentive.

It impressed the observer that the boys, as a rule, were more attentive than the girls. This may be a contradiction of all the learned statistics on the subject; probably it is denied by volumes of psychological research. Nevertheless, one impressive feature of the spectacle consisted of row upon row of small chaps lying back in their seats, with their eyes partly or wholly closed, utterly absorbed in the serious numbers. No such phenomenon was observed among their sisters.

Although the concert did not begin until 10:30 o'clock, and the doors did not open until 9:30, the sidewalk in front was the scene of a noisy gathering before 9. Shortly thereafter, it took on, realistically, the aspect of a gathering of the clans. They came trooping from street cars and automobiles, and a scandalous report had it that some small boys were seen alighting from the tail end of trucks.

For all that, it was a most orderly assemblage, and one of the ushers volunteered the information, thankfully, that the regular "movie" crowd was nothing like that—if it was, he said, about half of his associates would lose their jobs, as there would be nothing for them to do.

Crowded Theater at Concert.

By the time Conductor Ganz appeared, the first floor was filled, including the boxes, and only a small section of seats at the rear of the balcony remained empty. In the period preceding the first number there was an animated chatter, and much testimony to the effect that this is the season for coughs and colds. When the conductor, however, raised his hand, and began the first chatty little speech with which he prefaced each number, a portentious silence fell, every face was turned to the stage, and from that time on it was a model audience.

As the children emerged from the front doors, more than an hour later, a dilapidated vendor of toy balloons and similar gimcracks, came hurrying up. It seemed that he had just been informed of a prospective harvest. So he hobbled into the midst of the throng, shouting his flamboyant wares. Now, in some fiction stories, these children would have immediately erased Verdi and Grieg from their minds, and turned to this "more natural" interest. But this happened to be in real life, and the vendor didn't sell a toy or even elicit an audible comment. But the reporter could hear, as the guests departed, a running fire of vivacious commentaries on "the mountain king's dance."

The next of the concerts will be given at the Missouri Theater Feb. 18. The fourth, for negro children, will be at the Odeon, March 4, and the fifth and last will be at the Missouri, March 18.

TRIBUTE IS PAID TO MOORE ON RETIREMENT

Senator Reed and Mayor Kiel Make Addresses at Dinner in the Statler.

About 1000 men and women last night attended a dinner in the ballroom of Hotel Statler given in honor of George H. Moore, retiring Collector of Internal Revenue for the St. Louis district, arranged by a committee of friends.

Among the speakers were Senator James A. Reed, former Governor Gardner, former Commissioner of Internal Revenue Daniel C. Roper, Mayor Kiel, Frederick W. Lehmann, Charles P. Williams, Breckenridge Long and John S. Leahy, recently appointed to succeed Moore as collector, who acted as toastmaster.

Senator Reed said he had found little during the evening in the way of enjoyment as he "could never find it a matter of congratulation that a Democrat was going out of office."

Much had been said, he declared, of the happiness that would come to Moore's wife as he left the public service, but with a humorous glance at Leahy he offered to wager the only happiness to follow Moore's retirement would be to "the hollow-cheeked and hungry-eyed fellow who was waiting for his job."

The dinner resulted in an unusual commingling of men of both political parties and there were many out-of-town guests.

Moore said most of the credit for his success in office was due to the efficiency of the workers he had gathered about him and declared he had been given great assistance in every possible respect by the newspapers and bankers of the State.

Miners' Wages Reduced.

LITTLE CONCERN OVER NEW REVOLUTIONS IN MEXICO

War Department Will Soon Stamp Out Uprisings, Officials Declare.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 4.—Scant importance is attached by today's newspapers to reports received here that Gen. Francisco Murguia has crossed the border from the United States to start a revolution.

Gen. Murguia, with 14 men, is said to have entered Mexico at Los Naranjos, near Nuevo Laredo, and the War Department has ordered vigorous measures for his apprehension.

Another uprising has been reported from Zitacuaro, Michioacan, where Col. Francisco Cardenas, at the head of 200 men, is defying the Central Government.

No official concern is expressed, the War Department stating energetic efforts will soon stamp out the uprisings.

ST. LOUIS COUPLE REMARRIED

Man and Wife Find Union, Legal Here, Illegal Under Illinois Law.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—The Illinois divorce law was responsible for the remarriage Thursday of Adam Whitfield Mason, broker, and Mrs. Margaret Maurine Gibson Mason, his wife of two years under the laws of Illinois, divorced persons may not remarry within one year of their decree.

When Mason removed to St. Louis three years ago, shortly after obtaining a divorce from his first wife in the Superior Court here, he married his present wife and did it legally. When business necessitated Mason's return to Chicago a fortnight ago he found his Missouri marriage was illegal as far as Illinois is concerned.

The second ceremony took place in the study of the Epworth Methodist Church, 5329 Kenmore avenue. Dr. Harlow V. Holt performed the ceremony. The Masons are residing at the Edgewater Beach Hotel. They resided at 5530 Pershing avenue, in St. Louis.

STILL FOUND IN HOME OF WIDOW IN RICHMOND HEIGHTS

Mrs. Carrie D. Miller Names Confederate in Operating Liquor Plant —Released on $1000 Bond.

Mrs. Carrie D. Miller, 45 years old, a widow, of 21 Highland terrace, Richmond Heights, was arrested last night when Mayor Jensen and two policemen found a 10-gallon still in the basement of her home. The still was destroyed as were also five barrels of fermenting mash and six gallons of "moonshine."

Mrs. Miller told the Mayor she had been operating the still as a means of livelihood and named a confederate who is being sought. She was released at Clayton on a $1000 bond.

ROBBERS GET $85 AT SALOON

Two armed robbers at 11:40 o'clock last night entered a saloon at Iowa and Chippewa avenues and after intimidating the bartender and a customer, took $85 from the cash register and escaped.

S. J. Kloth of 5016 Idaho avenue, manager of a Kroger grocery at Michigan avenue and Pestalozzi street, told the police that two men held him up in the store at 7:30 and took $15 from the cash register and a watch and chain from him.

Charles Wolfe, 4269 Washington boulevard, reported that a man held him up at Spring avenue and Washington boulevard at 11 o'clock and took $27 from him.

MADE SOCIAL KING WITH HIS 'FEAST OF ROYALTY'

Dressmaker of Paris, With Costume Affair, Wrests Leadership From One of Noble Birth.

Special Cable Dispatch to the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1922, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 4.—Paul Poiret, maker of fashions, has wrested the social scepter from Andre de Fouquieres, man of fashion. Poiret's "feast of royalty" given in the sumptuous surroundings of his palace in the aristocratic Faubourg Saint Honore, has won for the millionaire dress-maker the unquestioned dictatorship over that district of Paris society which, today, holds the center of the spotlight. Andre de Fouquieres, who has reigned supreme over the fashionable world ever since his American triumphs of 10 years ago, is still enthroned in the hearts of his loyal subjects of the conservatively exclusive Faubourg Saint Germaine, entry to which is dependent on blood and breeding rather than on wealth.

But noble birth has scant influence on social doings nowadays, and in Paris one's company at dinners, balls and tea dansants is coveted rather for one's money or wit or beauty or fame than for one's family. So there is nothing surprising in the rise of Poiret, king of modes, to sovereignty over the aristocracy of profiteers, actresses, gigolos-dance-hall mercenaries, and Indian Princes who comprise the Parisian Four Hundred of today.

Titled Folk There.

Not that the celebrated costumer was unable to attract titled folk of exalted position to his entertainment. Princess Lucien Murat, the Duchess d'Uzes, Mme. Robert de Rothschild and Duchess de Vallombrosa, were among those who gladly exchanged the stiff boredom of the Faubourg Saint Germaine for the glitteringly gorgeous frivolity of Poiret's Arabian Nights' festival. For such it was, with every guest arrayed in the royal robes of some defunct or legendary king or queen. That was the idea of this feast of royalty, and undoubtedly Poiret achieved the most colorful and splendid spectacle imaginable. The fact that most of the costumes came from his own establishment does not detract from the success of his enterprise.

Poiret himself was attired as Oedipe, King of Thebes, in superb scarlets, greens and golds; Princess Murat appeared as her ancestress, The Queen of Naples, and Gorges Scott, the famous painter of war scenes, as the Queen's royal spouse. Van Dongen, the portrait painter, was garbed as Neptune; Mlle. Cecile Sorel of the Comedie Francaise, as Marie Antoinette; Niola Nyoka, whose Oriental dances are the rage of the boulevards, as the boy King of Annam.

Police Make Appearance.

The magnificence of the gowns and jewels might have been envied by the real monarchs who were thus represented. There were numerous charmingly staged tableaux, representing the historic romances of royalty, and such scenes as the Petit Lever of the Sun King, Louis XIV.

There was a moment of apprehension when a very modern police commissaire arrived, who sought to arrest Poiret for holding a royalist meeting without proper authorization.

"We are here to bury royalty, not to praise it," exclaimed the designer of gowns. Whereupon the commissaire bucked off his huge mustachios and revealed himself as Maurice Chevalier, a comedian of the revues.

One of the most brilliant social functions Paris has seen this winter was the "Little White Beds" ball at the Champs Elysees Theater on Tuesday. The proceeds, which go to a fund for tubercular children, exceeded $30,000. All the most famous theatrical and music hall artists collaborated, and all the great Paris courturiers had worked with celebrated painters in designing gorgeous dresses and costumes for the hundred society women and men who portrayed figures from French fairy tales.

Among Those Present.

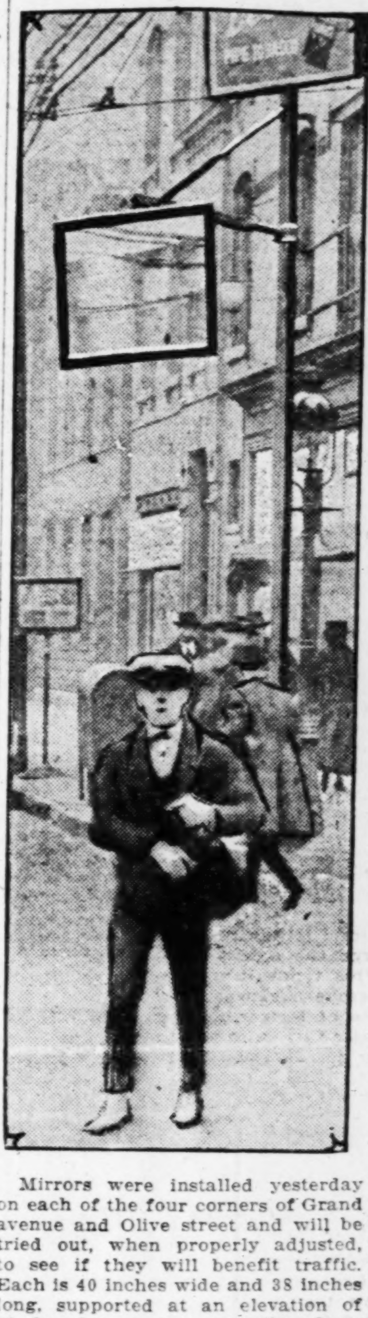
The theater was thronged, people danced on every floor. Ambassadors whirled around pretty comediennes to the mad rythm of half a dozen jazz bands. Cecile Sorel shimmied with Prince Achille Murat; Arthur Meyer, "last of the Boulevardiers," escorted Mlle. Mistinguett to the buffet. The wives of Adadamicians were dancing partners of Georges Carpentier; Maurice Barres fox-trotted with the Countess de Noailles, while interviewing her on her impressions as the first woman member of the Belgian Academy, and the American Ambassador, Mr. Herrick, surveyed the scene from the box of the Duchess de Valentinois, in company with Gen. Gouraud, the pacificator of Syria.

The sumptuous dresses worn are taken as the first indications of the spring fashions. White, mauve, rose and blue dominated with metal and bead trimmings, and it would seem that the panniers which failed to catch on last year are likely to be accepted during the coming season.

Man Felled and Robbed of $27.

Norbert Swehla of 2660 Nebraska avenue was accosted by two armed highwaymen at 10 o'clock last night as he was about to back his automobile into his garage, and at the command to raise his hands he reached into one of his pockets. A blow on the head from a revolver butt felled him, and when he recovered a few minutes later the robbers, who had taken $27 from him, had disappeared.

Mirrors on Poles at Grand and Olive to Aid Automobilists



Mirrors were installed yesterday on each of the four corners of Grand avenue and Olive street and will be tried out, when properly adjusted, to see if they will benefit traffic. Each is 40 inches wide and 38 inches long, supported at an elevation of 18 feet by an arm extending from an iron pole. The mirrors are focused on the central point of the intersection and when tilted so as to reflect the ground they will show traffic moving in all directions.

The ostensible purpose of the mirrors is to show drivers of automobiles moving east or west traffic moving south or north, and vice versa. The device was placed by the advertising department of the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. Director of Streets and Sewers Fisk said he permitted the company to erect the mirrors on condition that the city would be permitted to remove them on 20 minutes' notice if they did not prove a success. The company was required to furnish a $5000 bond for each mirror, protecting the city from any damage that might arise.

The idea was suggested by C. H. Harwood of Hannibal, Mo., who, upon learning that the city had no appropriation to finance the experiment, submitted the plan to the tobacco company.

The mirrors are equipped with rods that permit them to be adjusted at different angles, but are attached loosely so that the mirrors now sway with the wind.

N. J. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AGAINST "OPEN SHOP" MISUSE

Board Member Urges Conservatism in Using Advantages Now Held Over Labor.

By the Associated Press.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 4.—The attitude of the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce toward union labor expressed in a recent report of the Committee on Industrial Relations, was defined today by H. R. Heydon, member of the board of trustees, as "against any movement which misuses the name open shop forcibly to deunionize the workmen."

"We take no issue with a true open shop," said Heydon, "but employers should use conservatism in using the advantages which they now possess over labor."

GOLDSTEIN MAY NOT TAKE JOB

Doubts He Would Accept Revenue Post If Offered to Him.

Nat Goldstein, who has been mentioned as a possible appointee as Collector of Internal Revenue in the event of the definite declination of John S. Leahy to accept, said yesterday that, in his present humor, he would decline Federal appointment and would stand for renomination as a candidate for Circuit Clerk in the Republican primaries next August.

Goldstein is known to have a fondness for political work attached to membership in the Republican City Committee. He feels that if he accepted Federal appointment, he would be compelled to resign from the committee and he doesn't care to pay that price. "I could make more money in a two by four insurance business than I could in any Federal job," he said.

Will Preach Series of Sermons.

Four sermons on "The Teaching of Jesus" wil be given at 11 o'clock on Sunday mornings during February by the Rev. Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, at St. John's Methodist Church, King's highway and Washington boulevard. The first, today wil be "The Teaching of Jesus Regarding Wealth." Other aspects of Jesus' teaching, in the order named, will include "Politics," "The Home," and "The Church."

SAYS DRY LAW CAUSES 'DEMORALIZING STRAIN'

Associate Justice Clarke of Supreme Court Says End Is Difficult to See.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The eighteenth amendment has placed "an unprecedented and demoralizing strain" upon all the country's laws, Associate Justice John H. Clarke of the United States Supreme Court told the alumni of the New York University Law School, at their annual dinner in the Biltmore Hotel tonight.

"It required millions of men and women abruptly to give up habits and customs of life which they thought not immoral or wrong, but which on the contrary they believed to be necessary to their reasonable comfort and happiness," he said. "The end is difficult to see."

Justice Clarke also complained of the triviality of many cases brought to the Supreme Court and the length of many of the "briefs" submitted.

He said that legal briefs should actually be made brief.

"There seems to be a type of lawyer in every part of our country who, once he is retained in a case, no matter how trivial, sets to work with all the ingenuity he possesses, to impart into the record a Federal question which he thinks may enable him to carry it to the Supreme Court of the United States, if he should prove unfortunate in the courts below," said the Justice. He said that cases came from every part of the earth, especially from the District of Columbia.

He added that, while it was not for him to eulogize the Supreme Court—which recently had been called "the living voice of the Constitution"—the scope of the Court "has become so fateful that the effects of many of its decisions upon the welfare of our country are as great as would be the results of decisive battles in a great war."

The Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, proclaiming that citizenship rights shall not be abridged, has been the source of most trivial litigation, the speaker said, adding that expanding Federal activities were operating to make a close second of the Fifth Amendment, providing for prosecution, trial and punishment, and setting forth that private property must not be taken for public use without compensation.

In conclusion he asserted that all were living in a world so new that past experience could be of little service, except as a warning.

WHISKY IN SYRINGE ON BAR

Dry Agents Later Find "Moonshine" in a Cubby Hole.

An innocent-looking syringe lying on the bar of a saloon at 5098 Arsenal street yesterday afternoon led to the arrest of Harry Burgolty, 39 years old, owner of the saloon, and his brother, George, the bartender.

Prohibition Enforcement Agent Nations and detectives had gone to the saloon and Sergt. Roach picked up the syringe, took a sniff and passed it to Nations. Nations took a sniff, a small one, so there would be enough to go around, and handed the syringe to the next man. The verdict was unanimous—whisky. A search began. It was in a fair way to be fruitless until Sergt. Roach accidentally moved a circular piece of tin the size of a half dollar, which was on a pivot. Underneath in a cubbyhole reposed a quart milk bottle, which, Agent Nations said, contained a pint and a half of "moonshine" whisky. The men are held on a Federal charge of unlawfully having liquor in their possession.

CUT IN WAGES BRINGS BOOM IN PAINTING

Union Officer Says Paper Hangers Will Work Independently if Jobs Are Not Provided.

Speaking at a meeting of the St. Louis Wall Paper Dealers' Association last night, called in the interest of promoting the movement to paint and decorate now and thus provide employment for painters and paper hangers who have voluntarily reduced wages 20 per cent, Charles J. Lammert, secretary of the Painters' District Council, after noting the small attendance, remarked that the union would set about to find employment for its members unless the dealers displayed more interest in the situation. The meeting was held in Knights of Father Mathew Hall, 4053 Lindell boulevard, and there were not more than a dozen dealers present.

"If our union had given notice of an increase in wages," Lammert said, "this hall would have been crowded with dealers prepared to argue here for hours against it, but since we have voluntarily reduced wages, which is the first reduction we have ever taken, there appears to be a lack of interest among the dealers."

Much Painting Begun.

Discussing the effect of the wage reduction, which became effective Wednesday, in a two-year contract at $1 an hour for painters, decorators and paper hangers, Lammert said he had been notified by painting contractors that they had received more than a score of jobs to paint since the decrease went into effect, and that he had issued more permits to men to work under the new scale in the last three days than he had issued in the previous five months. He said that indications were that several hundred painters who have been idle for months would probably be employed this month on jobs that will be started by persons who have been holding up work on account of the labor cost under the previous wage scale of $1.25 an hour.

He added that the wall paper dealers had not been as active as the painting contractors in going out for work, and then stated that since the union had cut wages it would provide employment unless the dealers did so. He explained after the meeting that he meant by this that the union would allow the paper hangers to go out and work independently of the dealers.

Lammert is also president of the Building Trades Council, and it will be remembered that the painters, decorators and paper hangers were the only crafts in the building trades that agreed to reduce wages in the recent referendum vote taken in the building trades.

Other speakers who urged co-operation by the dealers with the unions were Charles J. Eisenring, business agent of the paper hangers' union, and Elwood Street of the Community Council, which represents 83 charitable and philanthropic organizations. Street said unemployment this winter had increased the burden on charitable institutions from 50 to 100 per cent.

Phil J. Mohr, president of the Wall Paper Dealers' Association, and John Ehrhardt Jr., secretary, said the Executive Committee of the association was at work on plans to promote the movement.

Tractor Prices Reduced.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—The International Harvester Co. today announced price reductions ranging from $200 to $230 on two and three plow tractors, explaining it was intended "to meet trade competition."

STATEMENT BY WILSON ON ARMS PACTS UNLIKELY

Friends in Senate of Former President Had Expected He Would Outline His Views.

MAY MEAN DOOM OF IRRECONCILABLES

Naval Reductions Agreement Sure of Approval, Four-Power Treaty Stands Chance of Being Rejected.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Former President Wilson is not expected to indicate any public attitude, either for or against the treaties growing out of the disarmament conference, according to some of his friends in the Senate. Until the present time it was believed that Mr. Wilson probably would fully outline his views for the benefit of the country and Senators, but it was said this afternoon that he will maintain a position of neutrality and silence.

The positive belief now prevailing that Mr. Wilson will give no advice regarding disapproval or ratification of the arms parley treaties may cause a general disruption of the opposition that has been built up largely on that impression. It makes it easier for the Democratic leaders who favor following public sentiment in this matter. They can stand aside and permit the Republicans to approve the treaties and place their action on the high plane of nonpartisanship.

What His Silence May Mean.

The disintegration of this opposition, which was estimated among the Democrats alone at 22 votes, may mean the smoothing of a pathway for the treaties. It might result in leaving a mere handful of former irreconcilables on each side to battle alone, with final defeat certain. While this condition has not actually arisen, surface indications are pointing in that direction.

The naval reduction agreement is out of the woods unless some unexpected flaw is found later. It has been accepted as the best possible solution of the situation even by the most hardened of the irreconcilables. There is not a shadow of opposition seen in any quarter. It is possible that instrument may be approved with but little delay, in view of the fact that appropriation bills for the support of the navy must be based on the facts presented.

The four-Power pact will bear the brunt of the most severe attacks in the Senate. It stands the best chance of being rejected if any of the treaties go by the board. It is figured out now that the old-time bitter-enders will be able to control the Foreign Relations Committee and add a reservation stipulating that the United States may not be called upon to utilize force in carrying out any action undertaken by the signatories. For the purpose of such a reservation it is believed that Borah, Johnson, Brandegee, Moses and McCormick will hold together.

Time of Consideration Uncertain.

It was said today by some of the Republican leaders that the desires of President Harding ultimately will determine whether the various treaties shall be brought in for ratification in the near future or deferred until the program of domestic legislation, including the tariff revision, has been entirely completed. If the President does not decide the question, it will be taken up at a series of Republican conferences and threshed out until an agreement is reached. Some of the majority leaders favor a "tryout" policy. That is, they would bring the treaties in and devote 10 days or two weeks to sifting out the opposition and seeing what could be accomplished toward approval. If a bitter fight should develop, the treaties would all be gently laid aside and permitted to rest until after the domestic legislative program is completed and out of the way. A goodly proportion of the Republicans believe the treaties should not interfere with tariff revision and other matters that should become accomplished facts before the autumn campaign gets far along.

Nothing has developed thus far to indicate how the Chinese treaty will be received in the Senate. It contains possibilities of much trouble but Senators have given the matter no thought and will not do so until all the treaties are available for careful examination and comparison.

The Democratic Senators adhere to their agreements that no definite opinions shall be announced until after hearing minority leader Underwood fully on all the various pacts resulting from the arms parley.

VETERAN PATROLMAN DIES

William O. Coats Stricken at His Home After Return From Duty.

Patrolman William O. Coats, 63 years old, a member of the Police Department since 1892, died at 4:30 p. m. yesterday at his home, 4528 Chouteau avenue. Physicians said he probably died of heart disease. Patrolman Coats, who was signal officer on a patrol wagon for Central District, was on duty yesterday. He had not complained of feeling ill. "Sex Detector" Ad Barred by Postal Department Instrument Declared to Show Sex of Bird to Be Hatched From Egg, Gives Same Results Used With Rubber Dolls.

The United States Department of Agriculture has announced that it has ended the circulation of the "sex detector," an instrument asserted by its manufacturers to indicate the sex of the bird to be hatched from any given egg or whether the egg was fertile. It was hence an "invaluable" device for the poultry business and was exhibited at the recent poultry show in St. Louis.

The local office of the Bureau of Chemistry called the attention of the department to this fact and also to the fact that a Kirkwood man was advertising the sale of the "detector" through poultry journals.

Also, it was said, the "detector" would function in the case of oysters, butterflies, caterpillars, beetles and worms. Applied to blood, spilled in crime, it might determine the sex of the criminal.

Could Operate by Wire.

One advertisement stated that by attaching a wire to the apparatus and running it through a keyhole, the instrument would denote the sex of any person holding the loose end of the wire. Pointed toward the moon it presumably would indicate that the man in the moon was a woman.

The instrument was a plummet-shaped device attached to a slender thread. Suspended over an egg if it swung, pendulum-like it would thereby denote that the egg would hatch a rooster. If it oscillated, the hatch would be a chicken of the opposite sex. If it remained fixed the egg was infertile.

Put to test in the department, the "detector" proved very temperamental. It would forecast the advent of a rooster and the next instant would proclaim the coming of a hen from the same egg. It worked beautifully in the case of rubber dolls, indicating the sex of the dolls with great accuracy.. It happened that a piece of cardboard attached to a thread and suspended over the dolls would perform with the same accuracy.

So the advertisement of the detector has been forbidden by the Postoffice Department.

State Auditor Hackmann's Office Under Investigation

months auditing the records of all county officials.

Groeschel's Final Account.

Under the law each examiner submits to the County Court of the county being uadited his expenses, which include railroad fare, hotel and restaurant charges. Groeschel's final account paid by Jackson County was submitted Oct. 11, 1918, and contains the following items:

Oct. 1-6—Room and meals, $24 50.

Oct. 7-10—Room and meals, meals, $16.75.

Oct. 1-5—Five days, per diem at $7.50, $37.50.

Oct. 7-10—Four days, per diem at $7.50, $30.00.

Railroad fare, Jefferson City to St. Louis, $4.08.

To typing report in duplicate, $625.

To binding report in duplicate, $18.

Total, $755.83.

The account was sworn to before Roy E. Curtis, a notary public, who at that time was employed as a clerk in Hackmann's office and who is now cashier in the office of the State Treasury

Groeschel told a Post-Dispatch reporter that when he made affidavit to the account it did not contain the item of $625 for typing the report nor the item of $18 for binding the report. He said that after he prepared the account and had made affidavit, Hackmann spoke to him about including a stenographer's charge. Groeschel said he told Hackmann he knew nothing about a charge for stenographic work, and that Hackmann took the account from him with the remark: "I'll attend to that."

Tells of Getting Check

"I did not see the account after that time," Groeschel said. "The next thing I knew about it I received a cashier's check from the Exchange Bank of Jefferson City for the amount which I had originally placed on the expense account. It is customary for the counties to pay the examiners direct, but in this instance the check from the county was not received by me, my money coming in the form of a cashier's check from the bank in Jefferson City. I was afterward informed by another examiner that the records in Jackson County showed a payment of $755 in my name on that account."

An examination of the original expense account filed in the office of the County Clerk of Jackson County, at Kansas City, shows the first six items, which were Groeschel's expense for room and meals, his per diem and his railroad fare, in a clear, distinct typewriting. The seventh and eighth items, which were the $625 charge for typewriting and the $18 charge for binding, were in a blurred and entirely different typewriting, appearing to have been made through a carbon paper, rather than by a direct strike of the type on the paper. The figures of the totals showed that there had been an alteration, that something had been erased at that place in the paper, and the figures "$755.83" written in with a typewriter.

A copy of this expense account in Hackmann's office in the Capitol in Jefferson City shows the first six items in a somewhat blurred typewriting, as though made through a carbon paper, and the $625 and the $18 items in a clear type. It appears from an examination of the two accounts that a stenographer in adding the $625 and the $18 items after the accounts had originally been prepared, used a carbon paper, but through a mistake made the original the copy for the addition, while the copy first made was the original for the addition.

Admits Account Was Changed.

Hackmann admitted to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the Groeschel expense account had been changed at his direction after Groeschel presented it, but he insisted the change was made with Groeschel's knowledge and consent and with the knowledge and consent of Curtis, the notary.

"The Jackson County audit was completed," Hackmann said, "and there was a bulky report, containing about 1000 pages of typewritten matter. It was customary for us to charge the county for the expense of this typewriting work. I took Groeschel's expense account to the office of former Senator Cooper of Kansas City, who was County Counselor for Jackson County, and consulted him regarding a proper charge for the stenographic work. All accounts had to have his approval before the County Court would pay them. He told me that the work was really worth much more than he was willing to recommend, but we agreed on $625, and I had that amount inserted by a stenographer in Cooper's office.

"Groeschel and Curtis, the notary, knew that something was to be added to the account, but they did not know the exact amount as it had not been determined. It was all agreed to by the three of us, and no point can be raised that I changed an official record to which an affidavit had previously been attached because Groeschel knew when he made the affidavit that it was to be changed."

The certified copies of expense accounts for other audits, which were gathered by Dehart and are in the Governor's possession show charges for typewriting. Among them are:

Lewis County, $92; Boone County, $50; New Madrid County, $75; Stoddard County, $46.80; Benton County, $25; Buchanan County, $65; Polk County, $50; Newton County, $62.50; Livingston County, $60; DeKalb County, $40, and Henry County, $10.

Hackmann, when asked the total he had received on this charge from all counties audited, said it amounted to $1129. He was asked what he did with the money.

"I paid on the Jackson County audits $180 to Miss Nina Brown, $125 to Miss Sybil Stewart and $100 to Miss Dolores Robertson, who were stenographers employed in my office and who did the work of typing the reports. Several smaller amounts were paid to other stenographers, but the great part of the money went to Frank Abbington, then a negro janitor in my office, and now a clerk in the office.

Part to Negro Janitor.

"The janitor's salary under the appropriation by the Legislature was only $60 a month. Janitors in other offices in the Capitol were receiving $100 a month. Abbingdon was dissatisfied. He could not live on his salary, and I paid an additional $40 a month myself, making his salary $100. I reimbursed myself for these payments from the money charged to the counties for typewriting the reports."

In addition to the information on these expense accounts, critics of the Auditor have brought to the attention of the Governor that Hackmann has been receiving amounts varying from $50 to $100 from brokers who had issues of bonds which under the law must be registered by the Auditor. The registration of bonds is the certification by the Auditor of the legality of the bonds of all political subdivisions of the State, which is required by law. The Auditor signs a certificate on each bond, the State receiving a fee of $1 for $1000 of par value of the bonds, the fees going into the State treasury.

Hackmann, instead of requiring the bonds to be taken to his office in Jefferson City for registration, makes frequent trips to St. Louis and Kansas City and other places for the purpose of attaching his certificate. He said the brokers who had the bonds for sale paid him for his work, and that frequently he also submitted to the State an expense account for his expenses.

"Whenever I attend to another State business besides registering the bonds," Hackmann said, "I make out an expense account and am paid my expenses by the State."

"Do you always have other State business to attend to on these trips?" he was asked.

Some Trips Charged to State.

"Oh, no," he replied. "Last month I made four trips to St. Louis to register bonds. On two of these trips I attended to other State business and charged up my expenses to the State. On the other two trips I did not attend to any other State business and made no charge against the State."

"The money paid to me by the brokers handling the bonds," Hackmann continued, "is not based upon my expenses and there is no fixed charges. The highest amount I ever have received was $100 paid to me by a firm in Kansas City for the registration of a $5,000,000 issue of school bonds. I have received from other firms $50 and $75 and smaller amounts.

"The brokers consider it a great favor for me to relieve them of the necessity of sending the bonds to Jefferson City. It means a big saving of money to them. If they had to send the bonds to Jefferson City they would either have to pay high express charges, or would have to send two or three men with the bonds at great expense, at least much more than they pay me."

Denies Assessing Employes.

Hackmann denied a report that he demanded and received for his personal use a portion of salary of many of the employes of his office. Employes who would not consent to the use of their names told Post-Dispatch reporters that they had been asked to contribute to Hackmann. One examiner said that at the time the audit of Jackson County was in progress, C. E. Stephens of Maplewood, then chief clerk in the Auditor's office, and now chief clerk in the office of Secretary of State Becker, visited Kansas City and informed the examiners that Hackmann needed money because he had an expensive campaign, and that each examiner would be asked to pay to Hackmann 10 per cent of amount he received from Jackson County. The examiner said some of the examiners paid the money and others refused to pay.

Dehart, when questioned, said that he contributed 10 per cent of money he received, and that he believed that all the examiners except E. E. Whitworth, now Postmaster at Poplar Bluff, had made similar contributions at the request of Stephens. Several other examiners, however, denied they had made contributions, although they said the demand had been made by Stephens.

Stephens was asked the question; "Did you go to Kansas City on Hackmann's instructions and tell the examiners that Hackmann expected them to contribute 10 per cent of their earnings to him for his personal use?" he replied:

"I wouldn't put it just that way."

He refused to make any further statement, insisting that he did not wish to become involved in any way in the investigation of Hackmann.

Hackmann said he never had asked any employe of the office for money.

"Some of them have contributed voluntarily to my campaign expenses," he said, "but I did not even ask for that. During the campaign several times the office force made up a little pot to pay for postage in sending out my literature, the amounts each contributing varying from $2.50 to $10. Last Christmas the office force made up a purse of $140 and gave it to me, and Maj. John T. Clarke, utility clerk in my office, gave me $140.

"I did not send Gene Stephens to Kansas City with any instructions to get money from the examiners."

It developed during the inquiry that all employes of Hackmann's office are required by him to obtain their $10,000 surety bonds from the Aetna Casualty Co., and that the premiums, amounting to $25 a year, are paid to Hackmann and by him forwarded to the insurance company.

William P. Hoehn of St. Joseph, formerly chief examiner in the Auditor's office, said it was the general understanding in the office that Hackmann received a commission of $6.25 on each of the bonds. Hackmann denied that he received anything on the bonds.

"I insist on the money for the bonds going through my hands," Hackmann said, "because I must know that the bonds are renewed promptly. I know representatives of the Aetna company very well and I like to throw such business as I can to them, but I don't get anything out of it."

Hackmann is known as a prolific letter writer. Hoehn has preserved several letters signed with Hackmann's name. In one of these Hackmann directed Hoehn to go from Kansas City to Jefferson City to help in obtaining the passage by the Legislature of a bill in which Hackmann was interested The letter instructed Hoehn to charge his expenses for the trip to Jackson County, the letter stating that he could "make the pretense that he was going to Jefferson City to examine State records in connection with the county audit. Hoehn said he did not make the charge against Jackson County.

Another letter was sent to Hoehn at the time Hackmann sent L. D. Thompson, now State Treasurer, to Jackson County as an examiner. In the letter Hackmann said Thompson's appointment "is purely a political appointment." It also informed Hoehn that Thompson was in the mercantile business in New Bloomfield, and contained the suggestive statement: "You get me, do you?" Hoehn said he understood from the letter that Thompson was not expected to put in much time on the job.

Hoehn would not consent to the publication of the letters. When Hackmann was asked about them he looked through his files for copies, failed to find them, and said he did not believe he had written such letters.

Attorney-General Barrett, with whom Gov. Hyde discussed the Hackmann investigation several weeks ago, was asked today whether he intended taking part in the inquiry. He said:

"It is due to the Auditor and his friends that the atmosphere be quickly and publicly cleared by a full investigation. The State's interests also demand that. The Auditor of the State is the people's chief and daily protection against the misuse of public funds, and a doubt about the practices of that office could not be tolerated. The interests of all alike, therefore, demand that a very full investigation be promptly made. The action will be taken which the circumstances may require."

Hackmann speaking generally of the investigation said:

"Any time anybody wants to investigate me he can have the full run of my office. Every record is here and can be examined. I fear nothing from an investigation and want them to investigate all they please. There is nothing to this except politics.

"I have watched expenses too closely to please some officials of Missouri. I have protected the public money and now the Governor is seeking to discredit me. An investigation will mean a complete vindication for me and if conducted impartially will not result in any credit for those who are hounding me."

Stenographers Got Money.

The stenographers to whom Hackmann said he paid money from the stenographic fees charged to the counties said they received the money. Miss Brown said she received $180 and Miss Robertson said she received $100, the amounts named by Hackmann. Miss Stewart said she did not remember the amount she received, but that she did not believe it was as much as $125, the amount Hackmann said he paid her.

TWO GROCERS ARE HELD UP

Armed Men Get $68 at One Place—Another Robbed of $27.

Two men with revolvers held up Charles Kroepel in his grocery at 4250 Farlin avenue last night at 7:30 o'clock and obtained $68 from a cash register. A man, with his face hidden in a green handkerchief, held up the grocery of John C. Gioia, 1934 Macklind avenue, at 8 o'clock, taking $27.75 from a cash register.

As Mrs. Elsa Schueren of 5036 Sacramento avenue was walking on Newstead avenue between Natural Bridge and Lexington avenues at 8 o'clock, a man stepped from an alley, seized her pocketbook containing $7, ran back into the alley and escaped.

EATS!

We may live without poetry, music and art;
We may live without conscience, and live without heart;
We may live without friends; we may live without books;
But civilized man cannot live without cooks.
He may live without books—what is knowledge but grieving?
He may live without hope—what is hope but deceiving?
He may live without love—what is passion but pining?
But where is the man that can live without dining?

SPRINKLING INQUIRY LIKELY TO BE MADE BY GRAND JURY

Judge Killoren Will Instruct Body Meeting Tomorrow in Case Any Official States Such Need.

POOLING OF MONEY LAST YEAR APPARENT

Bank Collected Claims That Contractors Assigned and Money Was Deposited to Association's Account.

The February grand jury, to convene tomorrow, is expected to make an inquiry into the apparent pooling, by six sprinkling contractors, of all the money paid by the city for sprinkling in 1921, amounting to $328,888. The records of the Comptroller's office show that all the money paid by the city on its sprinkling contracts last year was assigned by the contractors to the Chippewa Bank, of which Gottlieb Eyermann Jr., one of the contractors, is president

The city's records do not show how the bank distributed the money among the contractors, but the grand jury has power to investigate the bank's records for the purpose of obtaining this information. The Board of Public Service, in the past week, has endeavored to obtain the facts regarding a report that the money was pooled, and was divided among the different contractors on a district or a mileage basis, so that those who had to make low bids in competitive district were reimbursed from the excess profits of those who got higher prices in non-competitive districts.

Would Instruct Grand Jury.

Circuit Judge Killoren, who is to deliver the instructions to the new grand jury tomorrow, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter last evening that he would instruct the grand jury to look into the sprinkling matter, in case any city official should state to him that there seemed to be occasion for such an inquiry.

It was understood yesterday that City Counselor Caulfield, at the instance of President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, would make such a suggestion to Judge Killoren. No formal announcement could be obtained as to the City Counselor's plan. Kinsey and Directors Fisk and Hooke have said they would favor a grand jury investigation.

Circuit Attorney Sidener said he would act on any complaint that might be made by the city law department or any member of the Board of Public Service, and that if the law appeared to have been violated in any particular, an investigation would be made, just as would be done in the case of any other violation of law.

"If any ground for action is shown, the grand jury will act in the case of sprinkling contractors just as it would in the case of bank directors," Sidener said. He said he had not received a report from Assistant Circuit Attorney Bowcock, who attended Friday's hearing of the Board of Public Service, at which sprinkling contractors were questioned about their prices and methods.

Attorney-General Interested.

Attorney-General Barrett, who was in St. Louis, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter last evening that, while the sprinkling matter appeared to be a local one, it might prove of interest to his office, and that he would write the Circuit Attorney a note, asking him, in any inquiry that might be made, to inform him of any phase developing which might call for action by the State. He said he would give any assistance that might be desired in an inquiry.

The contractors, at Friday's hearing, denied that they had any knowledge of a pool. It was shortly after the hearing that a Post-Dispatch reporter, making inquiry in the Comptroller's office, found on file there the assignments of the contractors' claims to the Chippewa Bank, and found also the vouchers, which are the city's receipts for the money paid, and which bore the rubber stamp of the Chippewa Bank, the signature of the individual contractors, and the stamp of the St. Louis Sprinkling Service Association, with the name "A. Schmalz" beneath.

Alban H. Schmalz of 2824 Shenandoah avenue, vice president of the Eyerman Construction Co., said yesterday that the signature was his. He said he did not know who the members of the association were, whether it was incorporated, who were the officers, where it met, for what its object was. He said that the successful bidders year by year are not always all members of this association, but that it happened that all those who held 1921 contracts were members.

Says Assignment Was Customary.

He said it was customary for all claims of the association members to be thus assigned to the bank and to the association. Schmalz said that, after the bank collected, he would claim the collections and deposit them in an account of the Sprinkling Service Association in the Chippewa Bank. He said he did not know who had authority to check out on this account, but that he had no such authority. He assumed that the contractors received their money through checks from this account.

The Eyermann Construction Co. is a member of the association, Schmalz said. He referred to himself as an employe of this company, which is incorporated, although he is, nominally at least, an officer. He said he had signed the vouchers for the contractors' claims at the direction of his employer.

Eyermann declined to answer any questions concerning the assignment of claims or the Sprinkling Service Association. He said at the hearing that he was treasurer of the sprinkling contractors' organization, whenever it had any funds.

The assignments and vouchers found in the Comptroller's records show that the Chippewa Bank collected on district sprinkling contracts, under the assignments held by it from the different contractors, the following sums:

Eyermann Construction Co., 10 districts, $82,408.

F. A. Stiers, 10 districts, $75,883.

John Fabick, 11 districts, $89,720.

John McMahon, 8 districts, $64,893.

F. C. Pollman, 2 districts, $12,041.

Tim Cavanaugh, 1 district, $3943.

The total of these sums is $328,888, the entire amount paid by the city for sprinkling in 1921. The lowest bids this year, which were accepted by the Board of Public Service Tuesday, but reconsidered and rejected Friday, amounted to $379,596. Taking into account a slight increase in mileage, this was 15 per cent higher than the 1921 figure. It averaged $534.34 a mile, $68 more than in 1921. The city will advertise for new bids.

Some Assigned in 1920.

Vouchers in the Comptroller's office show the same procedure of assignment of claims in the major portion of the districts in 1920 as obtained last year. One contractor who did not assign his claim was Joseph Gioia of 5256 Pattison avenue, regarded as an independent. He held the contract for district No. 40 for $4475. The total of the contracts for that year was $483,900, or an average of $686.30 per mile. In 1919 there were no assignments of claims.

Alderman Heckel of the Thirteenth Ward has proposed an investigation of the sprinkling situation by the Board of Aldermen and may introduce a resolution to that end at next Friday's meeting.

COMMUNITY CHEST CONSIDERED

Use of Method in Financing Charitable Organizations Discussed.

At a meeting of the committee of the Community Council appointed to make a study of community chests, held Friday afternoon at the Chamber of Commerce Building, Thomas C. Hennings, vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co., was elected chairman.

The committee decided to communicate with the 54 cities where community chests have been established in order to ascertain how these chests have worked as a practical method of financing charitable and philanthropic organizations through one campaign, instead of separate campaigns.

Sid Hatfield's Widow a Bride for Third Time in 18 Months

—International Photograph.

MRS. S. S. PETTRY.

MRS. SID HATFIELD, widow of a Mingo County (W. Va.) feudist, is married again, her third matrimonial venture in 18 months.

Her new husband is Sergeant S. H. Pettry of the West Virginia State Constabulary. In September, 1920, she married Mayor C. C. Testerman of Matewan, W. Va., and shortly thereafter Testerman was killed in a pistol fight between striking miners and Baldwin-Feltz detectives who were guarding mine property.

Hatfield, who was marshal of the town, was mixed up in the affray and he was tried for the murder of the detectives in the fight, but he was acquitted along with those jointly accused with him.

Mrs. Testerman had been the belle of the mountain community in her girlhood and Hatfield had courted her before her marriage to Testerman. He renewed his suit after Testerman's death and they were married shortly afterward. In August, 1921, Hatfield and his wife were entering the Mingo County courthouse with another couple when firing began between Hatfield and two mine detectives. Hatfield was killed. The widow's marriage to Pettry took place last Wednesday.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR RAID IS ASSUMED BY DETECTIVE ROACH

Officer in Charges of Alamac Hotel Arrests Makes Statement Defending Action in Case.

Detective Sergeant John Roach, in charge of the police gambling squad and one of the men active in the Alamac Hotel raid, assumed full responsibility for the raid in a statement yesterday and added he had no "apologies" to make in the conduct of the raid.

"One of my men saw what he believed was liquor being served in the cafe at the hotel and swore to the search warrants before Nations," said Roach. "The raid was made on the strength of these warrants. We searched the cafe, the lobby, restaurant and cellar, but did not search any of the rooms above the first floor, as the warrants did not cover that territory.

"In the cafe we found women at tables smoking cigarettes and drinking. Anyone who appeared respectable and was not drinking liquor was allowed to go. We released over 150 men and women on the spot. The ones we arrested were persons we wanted to investigate before releasing. The floor of the Central Station was littered with paper and other things while we were booking the prisoners. Most of the articles were thrown away by the women, who took them from their purses.

"Nations and his men found three persons with liquor in front of them. The other two we preferred charges against. One woman picked up a pint of liquor and threw it on the floor from her table when we entered. It didn't break and her friend tried to pull out the cork. We arrested both."

GERMAN RAIL STRIKERS TO BE ORDERED BACK TO WORK

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—Instructions have been issued by the Imperial Traffic Minister to the managements of the railway companies, requesting them to order all employes to resume work and to announce that failure to obey will make the men liable to dismissal.

There has been no material change in the strike situation in Berlin, but the emergency service to suburbs has been augmented.

At Bremen the situation has become worse, extending to Hanover. The railway unions in the Frankfort-on-Main district have decided to call a strike. Krupp works at Madgeburg have been forced to close down owing to lack of coal.

Telegraph workers in Berlin struck today, but the service is not yet in danger of stoppage. Builders and house repairers also went on strike.

In the meantime the radical elements among the employes of the gas, water and power plants in greater Berlin succeeded in carrying a strike resolution, despite the municipality's conciliatory attitude, and announced a tie up of public utilities beginning at midnight.

Notwithstanding the rebuke administered the railway strikers by the General Federation of Labor and allied organizations, the railroad tieup throughout Germany showed an extension in all branches of the service, many of the metropolitan centers being forced to reckon with the stoppage of milk and cattle trains.

Some of the Americans marooned in Berlin are making efforts to find a way of reaching Atlantic liners on which they were booked to sail.

SALES TAX FOR BONUS MAY BE ABANDONED

Increased Inheritance Penalty and Use of British Debt Refund Among Proposals.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Republican House leaders are understood virtually to have abandoned the idea of financing the soldiers' bonus by means of a general sales tax, a program which has been freely discussed with more or less favor at both ends of the capitol.

Opposition among the majority members, mostly from the Middle and Western States, to a sales tax is said to be so strong as to threaten defeat of such a program. The alignment against it is understood to be practically that which forced acceptance of the 50 per cent income surtax voted into the revenue bill by the Senate.

Developments at further hearings today before the House Ways and Means Committee disclosed that in spite of Secretary Mellon's opposition to the plan, a number of the majority members favor the use of part of the proceeds from the refunded British debt in helping to finance the adjusted compensation.

Popular Approval Considered.

They believe that this would meet with a greater measure of public approval than would a program involving the raising of the entire amount by means of special taxes.

Arguments on both sides of the question were heard by the committee. Representative Ramseyer, Republican, Iowa, opposed the proposal, arguing that such use of the money would be a breach of contract with the holders of Liberty bonds, who, he said, had been told in the law adopted by Congress that the proceeds from the foreign debt would be used to retire the Liberty bonds issued to raise the money advanced to the debtor nations.

Chairman McFadden of the Banking and Currency Committee, favored the financing of the bonus through the sale in this country of the refunded British bonds, with the principal and interest guaranteed by the American Government, as well as the British Government. He contended that, with this double guarantee, the bonds would bring a higher price than would American Government securities sold for the same purposes.

Advocates Inheritance Tax.

Increased inheritance taxes, as another means of financing the bonus, were advocated by Ramseyer, who said such taxes could not be passed on and would not be a penalty on initiative and enterprise. He thought the present return of $154,000,000 from this source could be increased by $200,000,000 a year without imposing any hardships. Chairman Fordney and some other members of the committee apparently received this suggestion without approval, but other members indicated sympathy with it.

Now that the arms conference has approved the naval limitation treaty, some committeemen are studying the subject of naval and army reduction as one means of providing revenue for the bonus.

Man Opposing Bonus Refers to $500 Donation by Mellon.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—S. L. Lovenbean, editor of the Disabled Veterans' Magazine, who appeared to oppose the cash bonus act, said in replies to questions by Representatives Garner, Democrat, Texas, that Secretary Mellon had contributed $500 to his organization, which at that time was conducting a relief program, since abandoned, he asserted, because of the activities of Senators and Representatives.

"You were opposed to the bonus and Mr. Mellon, also opposed to it, gave your organization $500?" asked Mr. Garner.

"But Mr. Mellon did not know that I was opposed to the bonus," the witness replied, adding that the money had been used in furthering relief work among former service men.

Replying to other questions, Lovenbean said his associate, James W. Mellon, had been arrested in Pittsburg, presumably because Secretary Mellon had assumed that improper use was being made of the letter his secretary had written, inclosing the $500 check. He said his associate was released by the police, with apologies, and added:

"As soon as we can get the papers together we are going to sue Secretary Mellon."

DUKE OF LEINSTER, PREMIER PEER OF IRELAND, IS DEAD

Successor to Title of Famous Family Married Musical Comedy Actress in 1913.

EDINBURGH, Feb. 4.—Announcement was made today of the death of the Duke of Leinster (Maurice Fitz Gerald), sixth of his line and premier Peer of Ireland. He was born in 1887 and succeeded to the title in 1893.

The family seats are at Carton, Maynooth, County Kildare, and Kilkea Castle, Mageney, County Kildare, Ireland.

The family is one of the most noted in the history of Ireland, dating back to the beginning of the thirteenth century. Lord Edward Fitz Gerald, the heir, married May Etheridge, musical comedy actress, in 1913.

Social Conference Opens.

PARIS, Feb. 4.—Failure of the German delegates to arrive because of the railroad strike in their country, and the absence of Italian representatives on account of the ministerial crisis in their country, left only the delegates of Great Britain, France and Belgium for the opening today of the International Socialist Conference.

I. W. W. PRISONERS WANT TO BE FREED IN BODY

Roger Baldwin, Formerly of Civic League, Describes Visit to Federal Prison.

Roger Baldwin, formerly secretary of the Civic League here, stopped in St. Louis yesterday on his return from the Federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., where he went with two other representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union to interview "political prisoners" on the subject of applying for executive pardons or commutations of sentence. Baldwin, who served a year's imprisonment himself for passive resistance to the draft, is director of the union, which has headquarters in New York.

His companions on the trip were Robertson Trowbridge, an attorney, and R. Crane Gartz. The three, as a committee, had the permission of the Department of Justice to talk to the 113 men who are confined at Leavenworth for violation of wartime laws.

Socialist Editor Starts Term.

"This number," said Baldwin, "comprises 99 members of the I. W. W., 11 draft resisters, two Mexican radicals and a Socialist editor. The latter is J. O. Benton of Duluth, Minn., whose term has just begun, the conviction having recently been affirmed by higher courts after three years of litigation.

"We found that the I. W. W. prisoners had refused to make applications for clemency, on the ground that their trials and sentences were unjust, and that hence they claimed they should all be released at once. The Department of Justice, on the other hand, will not consider any releases without applications, as President Harding has declared definitely against a general amnesty. Our committee suggested, therefore, that these prisoners present a mass petition, and they are considering doing so.

"Our examination, supported by the court records, revealed that not a single one of these prisoners was convicted for acts of violence or sabotage. All are serving terms for having expressed opinions on the war or the draft. This includes 11 prisoners from Oklahoma and Northern Texas, who advocated peaceful opposition to the draft.

Free Speech Made Issue.

"The I. W. W.'s hold that they were imprisoned for exercising their lawful rights of free speech. If Debs was eligible to release these men should be also, on the same legal or moral grounds."

Baldwin met several friends here yesterday. He is going back to New York.

WARNING AGAINST SOLICITOR

Complaints have been made to the Charities Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce by persons who have received telephone calls soliciting contributions for a fund to aid the poor, and offering to call on anyone offering to contribute to the fund. One such person, on visiting one of the complainants, said he represented the Christian Volunteer Rescue Army.

The Christian Volunteer Rescue Army has not been approved by the Charities Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, which has issued a warning against making contributions in response to such telephone requests.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 4.—Mrs. R. E. Dempoy of Omaha, daughter of Mrs. N. E. Burkett of Oroville, Wash., was located here last night by a private detective, working for her mother, who lost trace of her some years ago. Mrs. Burkett came to Omaha recently to search for her daughter, believing that she may have died.

NEW BONDS TO BE REQUIRED OF INDICTED BANK OFFICIALS

Night and Day Cases Assigned to Judge Killoren—Trials in March Probable.

The indictments against Cashier A. O. Meininger and the directors of the Night and Day Bank have been assigned to Circuit Court No. 10, presided over by Judge William H. Killoren, and will be set down for hearing early in March. The defendants, in the meantime, will be required to give new bonds.

The Depositors' Committee, working out a plan for reorganization of the bank, announced yesterday that 1901 of the contemplated 2500 shares of stock had been subscribed and that customers of the bank representing 1,556,560.82 of the total of $2,820,000 of deposits had accepted the proposed terms of reorganization.

As has been told, State Commissioner of Finance Hughes, who is in charge of the closed bank, has approved the committee's plan of reorganization, which provides that the creditors of the bank shall agree to accept in lieu of their claims against the bank 25 per cent in a demand deposit, 25 per cent four months after the bank has been reopened and the remaining 50 per cent in trust certificates in a fund consisting of the rejected assets of the bank.

"I understand there are a few depositors who are hesitating about signing up, believing that thereby their claims will be paid at the rate of 100 cents on the dollar," said Hughes. "Before the plan can be put in operation it will be necessary that practically every depositor accept the plan. There will be no distinction shown as between depositors if I can prevent it."

THEATER VICTIMS BURIED

Shaughnessy and Warner Funerals Take Place in Arlington Cemetery.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb 4.—Two military funerals were held today in Arlington National Cemetery for Knickerbocker Theater disaster victims. They were those of Edward H. Shaughnessy of Chicago, Second Assistant Postmaster-General, and former Colonel with the American Expeditionary forces, and Capt. and Mrs. William E. Warner. High Government officials attended the Shaughnessy funeral. Mrs. Shaughnessy, herself injured with her young daughter in the disaster, prevailed on her physicians to permit her also to attend her husband's funeral. Four air mail planes scattered flowers over the grave. Capt. and Mrs. Warner were buried together in the officers' section. The funeral was attended by Mr. and Mrs. John E. Warner of Alameda, Cal., parents of the officer.

Neighborhood Work Officials.

The Rev. E. S. White, pastor of the Church of the Holy Communion, has been elected chairman and Miss Josephine Fritsch, chairman of the International Institute of the Y. W. C. A., vice chairman of the Department of Neighborhood Work of the Community Council. The department voted to meet once a month in the various institutions which carry on neighborhood work or recreational activities.

FRANCE DEFENDS STAND ON GENOA CONFERENCE

Note Declares Conversations Are Proceeding Satisfactorily With Great Britain.

PARIS, Feb. 4.—France's objections to the Genoa conference and her plea for participation in the conference of all members of the League of Nations are defended, as in no wise intended to obstruct the conference, in a semiofficial note in which it is said that conversations are proceeding satisfactorily on the various points at issue between France and Great Britain.

"Far from seeking to raise an obstacle to the conference," says the communique, "it is sought to prevent a failure which Great Britain would be the first to regret."

It adds that conversations can be conveniently continued, as the Genoa gathering seems to have been necessarily postponed because of the Italian ministerial crisis.

"There is not a country that has not serious preoccupations regarding the assembling of the conference," the communique declares, "particularly because of the nonparticipation of the League of Nations, or the taking from that body of European problems it already has studied or partly solved."

The point is then made that Soviet Russia has accepted the invitation, not only in her own name, but for other republics whose political status is the subject of diplomatic controversy, such as Georgia and the Caucasian republics. France, it is said, would not consider her citizens property in Russia protected unless Russian legislation recognized such property, or Russia recognizes French legislation on the subject.

Concerning the conversations with Great Britain, relative to the French treaty with the Angora Government, the communique says they are progressing, and that a solution of the Smyrna and Thrace questions is promised. The protection of minorities question is capable of a settlement satisfactory to both Turkey and Greece.

There will be no difficulty regarding the Dardanelles, says the communique, as the League of Nations possibly will get the mandate, replacing the present commission.

The negotiations for an Anglo-French pact are described as still going on, with France asking more than moral support which is contained in the Versailles treaty guarantees and seeking pre-war relations, when, the communique says, France was given exact knowledge as to what military aid Great Britain would furnish.

The communique concludes:

"The Genoa conference will risk success unless the paragraph which specifies theer shall be no modification of existing treaties is put at the top of the program."

THE REV. S. D. GOODALE, EVANGELIST of York, Neb., will begin a series of meetings today at the Olive Branch Congregational Church, Sidney street and Missouri avenue, to continue until Feb. 26. Services will be held at 8 o'clock each night except Saturdays.

SHIPWRECK VICTIMS' PRAYERS ANSWERED

Survivors, Including 2 Women, Rescued After Three Days' Battle at Sea.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The story of three days of prayer in a raging sea, and of prayers answered in the nick of time, was told by two women and six men of the crew of the Nova Scotian steamer Donald L. Cook, who arrived today on tankers from Mexico. The battered, water-logged hulk of the Cook went down less than two hours after they had been taken off.

The women, Mrs. May Oxner, wife of the skipper, and Mrs. Bennet Feeler, the Cook's wife, were unanimously voted "hoodoos" by the crew and Capt. Oxner declared they would never go along again. The schooner was coasting down toward Jamaica with a cargo of lumber when she was struck on Dec. 14 by a terrific storm. Her sails and her masts were carried away, the cabins wrecked, and the vessel's hold filled with water. The food supply was ruined so that all went foodless three days.

Mrs. Oxner was authority for the statement that the crew prayed for three days for succor. Just as they were at the point of abandoning hope, the British steamer San Eduardo appeared, she said.

The party was landed at Puerto, Mexico, whence they were taken to Tuxpan, and thence to Port Arthur, Tex., where they boarded tankers for New York.

SEVEN CITY OFFICIALS OF CHICAGO INDICTED

Charged With Soliciting Political Subscriptions From Civil Service Employes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—True bills charging criminal violation of the civil service laws were returned against seven city, park and Board of Education officials today by the special grand jury which has been investigating civil service law violations.

Those indicted are William Stocker, City Sealer; William G. Keith, until Wednesday Commissioner of Gas and Electricity; Nicholas E. Murray, Superintendent of Sidewalks; Roy J. Battis, until Friday Chief Clerk in the Comptroller's office; Walter George, Assistant Buyer for the Board of Education; Tilden Strickler, manager of the garages of Lincoln Park, and Thomas H. Queenan, Electrical Engineer for Lincoln Park. The indicted men were held over on bonds of $2500 each.

As a result of sales of River View Park tickets for the Mayor Thompson boom which were made, the grand jury states, to civil service employes in practically every office under the control of the city hall organization, the machine netted $150,000 for campaign expenditures.

The grand jury also states it found numerous cases of favoritism and discrimination in promotional examinations, especially in the Police and Fire Departments. Some instances of the payment of money to politicians on the promise of promotion are declared to have been uncovered, and the jury urged greater use of specially qualified outside examiners to check such practices. The jury criticised "politics" in the fire department under the business management of John F. Cullerton.

Charges Grand Jury Makes.

The charge against all seven is the solicitation of subscriptions for political and partisan purposes from civil service employes. The penalty for the offense is fixed in the civil service law at a fine of $1 to $1000, six months in the county jail, or both.

Battis and George are charged with undue activity in the sale to their subordinates and office associates of tickets for the Thompson jubilee celebration held at River View Park last year. The others are charged with soliciting subscriptions for the Republican, the Mayor's official weekly, from civil service employes under them. Keith, as commissioner of gas and electricity, had served as a member of the Mayor's cabinet since the early part of the first Thompson administration.

At the meeting of the City Council last Wednesday he unexpectedly resigned and was succeeded by George E. Carlson, who was appointed by the Mayor.

Another Was Let Out.

Battis is another city official who was separated from the city service just before the indictments. He served as chief clerk under City Comptroller George F. Harding up to the close of business Friday night. Late in the afternoon Friday Comptroller Harding announced that Battis had been discharged and that Samuel Manning, chief clerk in the Department of Health, would report for duty in his place today.

Commissioner Keith, according to the grand jury findings, sold about $5000 worth of subscriptions to the Republican to civil service employes, chiefly his subordinates in the Department of Gas and Electricity.

Stocker, who was made city sealer after the election of Morris Eller as trustee of the sanitary district, also was charged with selling thousands of dollars' worth of subscriptions to the City Hall faction's weekly to civil service employes.

The civil service grand jury was impaneled several months ago by Judge McKinley on a special petition filed by the Civil Service Reform Association. The association charged that the civil service laws had been violated through the forced sale of tickets for the River View Park jubilee and subscriptions for the Republican.

PROTEST AGAINST PROPOSED GOLF PERMIT PLAN IS MADE

Chamber of Commerce Tells Aldermen Scheme Would Deprive Many of Pastime.

An opinion that a charge for golf and tennis permits by the city would be unwise has been communicated to the Board of Aldermen by the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce.

"Such charges would cut down by a large percentage," the board asserts, "the proportion of the public that now takes advantage of our public parks and the more the number is cut down, the more the public will feel that those who are able and who do buy the permits become in a sense members of a club having more or less exclusive rights to the use of public property."

Saunders Norvell to Speak.

Saunders Norvell, former St. Louis hardware dealer and present chairman of the board of McKesson and Robbins, New York City, will address the Salesmanagers' Bureau at noon tomorrow at Hotel Statler on "Salesmen Build Cities."

WOMEN IN SYMPOSIUM ON VARIED ENDEAVORS

One Town Club Speaker Tells of Interest Housekeeping Has After Years in Business.

The growing field of women's varied interests was typified in the program of the Town Club at luncheon yesterday, when women in business, women in politics, women in community work and others gave a symposium illustrative of their careers. Women in sculpture, education and in the fundamental feminine career, housekeeping, too, were represented. Miss Alma G. Robb, president, referred to the 14 members of the club who were on the program as being 1 per cent of the membership, and said that the range of their works shows the versatility of the whole membership.

Mrs. Washington Fischel advanced an idea that won applause from the 250 women present. She spoke on "My Latest Job," saying in phrase reminiscent of Chesterton, "It is to popularize education among the educated." She explained that her effort is towards the popularization of the Community Forum, recently instituted for the discussion of modern topics.

"Socrates in Athens was put to death for trying this same job," she said. "I feel I have only a few years yet to live—I have passed the Biblical allotment—but if I can help break the narrowness, intolerance and prejudice that makes St. Louis known as 'conservative,' I shall feel that I have not lived in vain. The Community Forum in some minds is a radical institution. If it should become a radical institution that will be because the conservatives stay away. Conservatives and radicals should clash and find each other out and educate each other. Everybody should tolerate the opinions of others. The forum is open to everybody and is an association that won't contaminate by proximity."

Arduous Duties in the Schools.

Miss Matilda Gecks, a spervisor of primary grades of the schools, answered the self-asked question, "Why is a supervisor?" by citing some of the things she was called on to do in the last fortnight, namely: Disciplining a sixth-grade room, diagnosing the failure of the teacher in this room to maintain discipline, talking with her after hours; interpreting the course of study to teachers; solving the problem of caring for 600 pupils in a 400-pupil building; estimating needs for supplies; advising teachers in the improvement of their health and in recreation, trying to get a teacher to accept a very undesirable position; persuading a teacher to work in an outlying school; recounting the questionable joy of teaching in portable buildings and persuading a girl to give up pedagogy because she was not propery fitted. Miss Gecks summarized her duties by saying the supervisor must keep up the morale of the corps and help the young, inexperienced teacher.

Miss Emily Fischer, who keeps house for relatives, after spending a number of years in business, told of the joy she had in housework, even to shaking the furnace grates. She was glad of her new apportunity "to read Pepys' Diary and delve in the Greek classics." Mrs. Alpha Hisey, on the other hand, told of introducing the methods of efficient housekeeping to revive a failing business, one she had taken over upon her husband's death.

Politics was discussed by Mrs. Frank P. Hays, president of the Republican Women's Club of St. Louis, and Mrs. Fred A. Reid, president of the Democratic League. Mrs. Hays, saying her organization is independent, spoke of the need for the friendship of ward and precinct workers among the women. "It takes more to run a political club that any other kind, she said. Mrs. E. M. Grossman, Democratic president of the St. Louis League of Women Voters, told of the league's work.

Plans for Soldiers' Memorial.

Mrs. Nancy Coonsman Hahn, sculptress, described her plans for the monument to Missouri soldiers to be designed by her and erected in the Argonne Forest of France. From her sketch she will make a half-scale figure, she said, and will take that to a Parisian studio, where she will duplicate the figure largely by mechanical means into the 8½-foot heroic statue of a woman symbolic of exaltation, rather than exultation.

Miss Carol Bates, secretary of the Missouri Welfare League, spoke of prison work, chiefly in the State Penitentiary, urging the need for more workers. She said that Gov. Hyde and the Prison Board were eager to improve conditions, but wanted outside help.

Miss Virginia Kern, business analyst, told how she diagnosed "sick business filing systems" for the filing system company which employs her, and told of the multiplicity of uses of card index systems.

"Selling an intangible product—the idea of the value of music," is the vocation of Miss Elizabeth Cueny, director of concerts, she said. She wants St. Louisans to acquire the music habit.

Miss Ella Cochran, official hostess of the Convention Bureau, related her methods of helping women visitors at conventions, first showing them the ways of the shopping district.

A letter from Miss Emma Bobb, assistant secretary of the Election Board, who could not be present, was read. She traced the recent development of election laws and predicted that the primaries next August and the November election would have more honest counting of votes than ever before.

DICE LED TO FORGERY AND FORGERY TO JAIL

George A. Kienlen Tried Both Ways of Increasing Income When Cemetery Lots Sold Badly.

It is hard to sell cemetery lots in midwinter, but George A. Kienlen Jr., 25 years old, 7426 Flora avenue, Maplewood, might have got by if he had not tried to increase his income by shooting craps at a St. Louis County "clubhouse." They needed money at the clubhouse and they took all that he had. That, Kienlen says, is why he turned to forging checks and that is how he came to be arrested yesterday when he presented one of them at the Mercantile Trust Co.

Kienlen became a salesman last June for the Memorial Park Cemetery Association. He did pretty well selling cemetery lots until the end of the year, but January was a bad month for cemetery lots.

One evening he was playing billiards with a friend downtown and his friend asked him if he would like to see a little excitement. Kienlen said it was just the thing he would like to see. They went out to a clubhouse on Gravois avenue, in the county. Kienlen watched others shoot craps but saved his own money. A few nights later he went back and did a little shooting himself and it took them only a little while to get all that he had.

He needed money to take home to his wife. He had seen Paul J. Krez, connected with the cemetery company, sign a check and remembered what his signature looked like, so he wrote out a check for $30.85 and took it to the Mercantile and got the money. The next week he made it $47.63. Krez discovered that somebody was drawing his money, so when Kienlen tried to cash one yesterday for $56 he was detained and the detectives came and took him to Police Headquarters, where he was locked up. He says it is the first time he has been in trouble and he expected to straighten it all up when he collected deferred commissions from the company.

AUTOMOBILES STOLEN IN U. S. FLOODING MARKET IN MEXICO

Cars Sold for Fraction of Value Seriously Affecting Legitimate Trade.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Stolen automobiles are overrunning the Mexican market, according to a report to the Commerce Department today from Consul John W. Dye, at Juarez.

The Consul said so many automobiles, stolen in the United States, were being sold in Northern Mexico for about half their market value that the legitimate automobile business was seriously affected. Some of these cars have come as far away as Chicago.

LITIGATION OVER BROWN ESTATE IS SETTLED

Capitalist and Daughter-in-Law Compose Differences—Latter "Fairly Treated," Lawyer Says.

Litigation between Mrs. Bess M. Brown of 4317 Maryland avenue, and her father-in-law, Paul Brown, 10 Washington terrace, broker and capitalist, over the estate of her husband, Paul Brown Jr., who died six years ago, has been settled out of court and the case was dismissed yesterday before Circuit Judge Calhoun. The order of dismissal provides for the setting aside of a judgment recently given by Judge Calhoun upholding a referee's report in favor of Mrs. Brown and also withdrawal of her exceptions to a settlement filed by Brown as administrator of his son's affairs in the Probate Court. The record does not disclose what money, if any, changed hands, and counsel for Mrs. Brown refused to discuss this phase of it.

J. M. Lashly of the law firm of Holland, Rutledge & Lashly, representing Mrs. Brown, stated, however, that Mrs. Brown had been fairly treated in the case by her father-in-law and that since they have composed their differences she had no desire to continue any cause of friction between her son, Paul Brown Jr., 8 years old, whose interests she also represented, and his grandfather. Brown is very fond of his grandson and has expressed his determination to make generous provision for the boy, the lawyer stated.

According to Attorney Lashly, the litigants met last Thursday and agreed to end the case. "The reconciliation," he said, "was complete and personal, and, of course, any further litigation between the parties is out of the question. This sort of ending is more desirable than a final determination in a court of last resort of the issues between them could possibly have been."

The difficulty arose in the first instance over the construction of the legal effect of certain bookkeeping items having to do with the estate of Paul Brown & Co., a brokerage firm of which Paul Brown Jr. was a partner, and the whole controversy was chiefly one between accountants. Brown contended for one accountant's construction and Mrs. Brown for another.

When Judge Calhoun gave his decision it was estimated by the plaintiff's counsel that approximately $80,000 would accrue to her husband's estate, to be divided among his heirs, including the widow and her son and also Dorothy Brown, a child of Paul Brown Jr. by a former marriage. Preparatory to appealing the case, Brown had filed a motion for a new trial.

Brown is vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co. and is the owner of valuable realty in St. Louis. His wife died last October. Brown departs Friday night for Florida, to be gone several weeks. He was represented in the suit by former Gov. Major and Virgil Rule.

500 TO 600 GALLONS OF SKIMMED MILK WASTED DAILY

Poured in East St. Louis Sewer Because There Is No Market for It.

N. E. Baum, secretary of the Southern Illinois Milk Producers' Association, wants to know why the Illinois-Missouri Co-operative Milk Marketing Association is separating cream from milk and pouring skimmed milk into the East St. Louis sewers. He asks why in the current issue of "The Dairymen's Journal," of which he is editor. He wants to know because it has been the expectation that the milk not disposed of in cans to the larger distributers would be bottled and sold to small dealers.

Albert Hall, manager of the marketing association, says it is true that 500 to 600 gallons of skimmed milk is being poured daily into the sewers, but this is because the association cannot sell as whole milk all that it receives from the producers and finds it necessary to separate the surpus, using the cream for butter and making from the skimmed milk as much cottage cheese as can be sold. But after all this there is a surplus of skimmed milk, for which there is no sale except for a limited quantity to bakers, at 5 to 8 cents a gallon, for use in baking in lieu of water. The skimmed milk that is thrown away, he says, cannot as yet be further utilized in by-products.

It is hoped that by developing the trade in cottage cheese all of the skimmed milk will ultimately be utilized.

The Franklin Standard of Demonstration
50 to 500 Miles—or More

It is not necessary to accept either our statements or the word-of-mouth confirmation of a Franklin owner. Let the car itself tell the story—the unvarnished story of performance now twenty years old.

We have laid out this demonstration plan to show anyone who wants to know—that motoring can be comfortable, free from trouble, and economical. Call upon any one of our 500 dealers any time. It will pay you to know this car.

FRANKLIN

The Differences Back of the Outstanding Performance of Today's Franklin

Case-Hardened Crankshaft
Outlasts any other three shafts. The only car with this big endurance feature. Seven main bearings (instead of the usual three) reduce vibration.

Direct Air Cooling—No Water
More efficient, weighs less, has 177 fewer parts. Does away with radiator troubles, cuts routine care, allows chassis flexibility, reduces carbon.

Laminated Wood Frame
More costly to build, but lighter, stronger and more shock-absorbing than steel. Increases comfort, permits wheels to conform to road without straining body.

Four-Point Body Suspension
Here again is flexibility, impossible with body rigidly bolted to frame the entire length. Prevents squeaks and strains.

Two-Point Spring Suspension
See what this does to rigidity, the enemy of comfort, safety and long life. No noisy shackle bolts.

No Torque Tubes or Strut Rods
Another contribution to flexibility. Allows springs to absorb jar of starting, stopping and road jolts. Also eliminates unnecessary weight and noise.

Full-Elliptic Springs
Give almost twice the usual spring movement. Deaden road shocks. More costly than semi-elliptic or other kinds, but important for comfort. Absorb the forces that cause skidding.

Light Unsprung Weight
Less weight below springs than any other car. Reduces reaction of road roughness against tires, body and passengers.

Scientific Light Weight
Quality materials of great strength properly used to equalize stress. Lessens load, distributes it evenly. Lengthens tire life, gives comfort, easy handling and economy.

Generous Use of Aluminum
In body, engine base and oil pan, rear axle housing, etc. Saves 440 lbs. in enclosed types, 350 in open. Costs 800% more than materials it replaces. A big factor in Franklin light weight and quality.

Tubular Front Axle
Made of drawn steel tubing. More expensive to produce, but is stronger, lighter and free from hidden flaws.

Non-Stalling Engine
A cowl switch does it. No pushing of pedals—no meshing of gears. A powerful safety factor.

Carburetor Adjustable From Dash
Carburetor adjustment possible with car in motion, meeting varying conditions. Prevents gasoline waste, insures maximum power.

Cold Weather Starting Devices
Strong starter, improved electric vaporizer, closed circuit ignition system — hotter spark. Makes starting instant, easy and dependable, regardless of temperature.

Patented Long-Type Aluminum Pistons
Combine advantages of cast iron and of ordinary aluminum types. Silent, longer-wearing, allow higher engine compression, quick acceleration. Reduce carbon.

Elimination of Grease Cups
Wick oiling eliminates all but three, which are easily reached. Lightens routine care, guards against damage due to neglect.

Pressure Oiling to Bearings
Makes oiling positive, constant, and equal—not a matter of chance. Saves many repair bills.

New Use of Drop Forgings
In load-carrying parts. Increases endurance, saves repair bills. The first car to embody this advance in construction.

Safer Braking System
Service and emergency brake areas separated, insuring cool brakes. Service brake on transmission acts through differential equally on both wheels. Multiplies braking force, prevents skidding.

Automatic Spark Control
Relieves the driver of guessing. Insures correct timing at all speeds. Saves engine—saves gasoline.

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation
(National Averages)

The most comfortable car to ride in
The easiest and safest car to handle
The most economical car to operate
The car that is freest from trouble
And can cover most miles in a day

FOR the many motorists who have hopefully changed makes of cars and are still dissatisfied, we have a brief message:

You merely changed makes instead of changing principles.

The same make or type of axle, engine or other part gives about equal results in different cars. The Franklin builds on individual and scientific lines. Engine virtually built twice; axle built up and machined for lightness and strength; carburetor of special design—and so on through the list.

Rigidity produces about the same effect whatever the name-plate on the car. The Franklin is flexible.

Water works in the same way on the front of any car. The Franklin is air cooled—no water, boiling, freezing or leaking.

Heavy weight takes its toll in tires, gasoline and comfort. The Franklin is light weight and resilient ---easily handled, comfortable and economical.

The demonstration will let you see, feel and hear the difference.

Loren Murchison Wins Dash Event In Boston Games

St. Louisan Defeats Lever and Comins Over 40-Yard Distance in 4 4-5 Seconds.

RAY SETS NEW MARK

Chicago Flyer Captures Hunter Mile in Record Time of 4 Minutes 20 2-5 Seconds.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—Loren Murchison, the St. Louis sprinter, representing the Illinois A. C., ran a front race to gain his second leg on the Briggs 40-yard sprint trophy, at the annual Boston A. A. games here tonight. Without an effort, so it seemed, Murchison breezed through the final a winner over Hal Lever of Pennsylvania U. by a yard. Billy Comins, the Yale freshman, was third. The time of 4 4-5 seconds was very good.

It was apparent from the way Murchison worked off his mark in both his trial and semifinal heats, that it would take close to record time to keep him from winning.

The little Westerner with a sliding start that seemed effortless was a flash in the opening heat and ever Ralph Colson of Allen school could not keep within touching distance. Murchison won his trial heat in 5 seconds and repeated while galloping away with the first semifinal.

Charlie Carroll of Holy Cross surprised by pushing right through at Murchison's shoulder in the semifinal round, shutting out Joe Carter, the Brown star, Andy Kelley and Win Marling.

Wefers Fails to Qualify.

Hal Lever was the winner of the second semifinal, but he had to thunder considerably to leave the narrowest of margins over Billy Comins, the Yale freshman, who got off a mark like a zephyr.

Gus Desch of Notre Dame, the little hurdle champion, who has been so prominent in the press lately won the third semifinal, E. J. Heapan, M. I. T. boy getting up close enough to be in the final.

Some of the greatest sprint runners of the day were eliminated in the trial heats. Wefers, the Metropolitan champion; Allen Woodring of Olympic fame and Irving Reid from Brown fell by the way.

The contest was settled in the start, the three place winners leaving the other entries as if they were anchored.

Ray Sets New Record.

The Hunter mile, one of the features, was won in new record time for the event tonight by Joie W. Ray of the Illinois A. C. The "Flying Parson," Hal C. Cutbill of the Boston A. A., was second, and James J. Connolly, Georgetown, third. Ray finished strong in 4m. 20 2-5s.

Ray broke a record of his own, having made the previous best time for this event, 4 minutes, 22 1-5 seconds, in winning in 1919.

Shrewd and Picturesque Were Old-Time Managers of Boxers

Not in Class of Modern Bunch as Money Getters, Edgren Writes, but Then in Those Strange Days Money Was More or Less of a Side Issue.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1922.)

As money getters, old-time managers of champions were hardly in the same class with the modern bunch. But in the old days money was more or less of a side issue. And in the old days boxing matches didn't draw such immense crowds, and people didn't dream of paying $50 for ringside seats.

The highest price I remember was at the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight, where seats in the ringside boxes were sold at $40. This was for the most advertised heavyweight championship match in many years. Today fight fans pay as much or more for box seats, even when little fellows meet for the minor titles.

Modern gate receipts for any championship fight run anywhere from $100,000 to $1,623,000.

In the old times the gate receipts for the Jeffries-Sharkey fight broke all records. The gate was $66,300 and the fighters' share was $36,465, split 75-25.

Champions didn't demand all the money in those days. They were satisfied to fight winner take all, or for a winner's and loser's percentage, usually 75-25 or 65-35.

Imagine a modern champion, even among the lightweights, being immensely pleased with himself because he won 75 per cent of a $36,465 purse—or $27,349.

That was what Jeffries, the greatest champion of 20 years ago, received for beating Tom Sharkey in 25 rounds of the hardest fighting of his whole career.

I remember meeting Jeffries a few days after that fight, and in smiling pride over his prosperity Jim pulled a bank book out of his pocket and showed me the deposit made just after the fight, and his balance.

Modern managers would look on that $27,349 as chicken feed.

Smooth Managers in the Game.

There were some smooth birds in the game in the old days. Tom O'Rourke, now Boxing Commissioner in New York, not only managed George Dixon and Joe Walcott, two black champions whose fighting ability may have been equaled but never has been surpassed, but in addition ran a big boxing club and had all the other champs fighting for him. O'Rourke managed Tom Sharkey, too.

While he was given to driving a hard bargain, it was said of O'Rourke that his word was good, and that he always paid just what he had agreed to pay, with or without a contract. When O'Rourke had Walcott fighting Kid Lavigne, Walcott grew weary and much discouraged.

"It ain't no use, Mr. O'Rourke," said Walcott, near the end of the fight. "I can't do nothin' with this white boy."

"Joe," said O'Rourke, "don't you quit. If you do, remember that you're going to settle with me."

Walcott took one look at O'Rourke and went out to fight. Being walloped by Lavigne was soft beside what he might expect from O'Rourke.

He Developed Jeffries.

Billy Delaney was one of the greatest old-time managers. He went to New Orleans with Jim Corbett, and it was under his coaching that Corbett whipped Sullivan.

Afterward Delaney had Corbett in the fight with Fitzsimmons at Carson. Delaney had brought young Jim Jeffries, a novice, but a giant in physique, up to Carson to be one of Corbett's sparring partners. The night after Corbett lost the championship Delaney proposed to Jeffries that under Delaney's coaching he might be the one to wrest the honors from Fitz.

Delaney matched Jeffries with Van Buskirk, with Gus Ruhlin, and with Tom Sharkey, and Jeffries won his fights. Then he took big Jim to New York, where Jeffries broke his hand in defeating big Bob Armstrong, and dropped out of sight by returning to California.

But a year or so later Delaney had Jeffries back again, Billy Brady having engineered a fight with Fitzsimmons, and this time Jeff made good and won the world's championship.

Delaney handled Jeff in all his fights until Jim retired. Years later the two quarreled because Jeffries refused to return to the ring to fight Bill Squires. When Jeffries was forced out of retirement after six years, by the public's demand that he come back and fight Jack Johnson, Delaney allowed his bitterness to turn him against Jeff. He joined Johnson's camp as coach, and no doubt his close knowledge of Jeffries' boxing methods helped Johnson to win. Delaney dropped out of the game after this fight. Personally, he was a very quiet man, with a keen sense of humor.

Jim Jeffries' Appetite.

I remember sitting at a training table at Shaw's Springs when Corbett was training for Fitzsimmons in 1897. Jeffries and Billy Woods and I were the sparring partners. Jeffries had just arrived in camp. There was a lot of talk and joking going on at the table, but big Jeff never said a word. He was stowing away the fodder as if he hadn't had a bite for a month. Finally everything at his end of the table had disappeared and Jeff was glancing around for more.

Delaney leaned over and looked at him anxiously.

"Jim," Delaney said solicitously, "you aren't sick or anything, are you?"

"Huh?" said Jeff.

"You don't seem to feel well—what's the matter?"

"Why—why—I'm feeling all right," stammered Jeff

"I didn't know," said Delaney solemnly. "You look all right, but you don't seem to have any appetite. Won't you have another chicken?"

A Tough Battle.

Another great old-timer was Billy Madden, once manager of John L. Sullivan, later of Charlie Mitchell and then Gus Ruhlin. Billy Madden was an old-time bare-knuckle fighter himself. He knew the game as it was played under London Prize Ring rules.

Breaking with Sullivan, he went to Ireland and England to hunt up a man to whip John L. and brought back Charlie Mitchell, a middleweight. Mitchell was a wonder for his size. He fought Sullivan a 39-round draw at Chantilly, France, in 1888, the fight ending when both men were too weary to lift their hands.

Madden nearly made Gus Ruhlin, the Akron giant, a champion. Gus knocked out Tom Sharkey and many others, but was knocked out by Fitzsimmons and beaten by Jeffries.

Sam Harris was a great manager. Sam was driving a laundry wagon in Brooklyn when he became acquainted with Terry McGovern, a kid working in a lumber yard and boxing with the other boys after working hours. Sam, hardly more than a boy himself, undertook to make Terry a real fighter. He put Terry into some amateur bouts, and Terry knocked out the amateur champions in a hurry. Then Sam made professional matches for Terry, who knocked out a lot of great fighters in a hurry.

Harris Made Money for Terry.

After a couple of years, McGovern was near the champions—and the country was full of great little men in those days. In 1899 Terry knocked out Casper Leon, Patsy Haley (now one of the best referees in New York), Sammy Kelly (afterward a Wall street broker), Harry Forbes and Pedlar Palmer.

Harris got the match with Palmer, who was English champion and regarded as a marvel, by outwitting the Englishman's manager, who wanted a soft match before taking on Featherweight Champion George Dixon for his man. McGovern finished Palmer in less than a round. That got him the fight with Dixon in which he knocked out "Little Chocolate" in eight rounds and won the world's championship.

Harris made a raft of money with McGovern, and looked out for Terry's interests as long as Terry lived. Under Sam's direction, Terry made more money in the ring than any little fighter of his time. Harris branched into the theatrical business and became one of America's greatest producers, and partner of George M. Cohan.

William Muldoon, now a New York Boxing Commissioner, at one time managed John L. Sullivan. He was the only man who could control John L. when John was drinking and running wild. Muldoon was world's champion wrestler.

"Iron Jawed" Nolan flashed across the map as manager of Battling Nelson. Nolan was one of those gents who said something and refused to argue. He took pride in being obstinate. Nolan came East with Nelson shortly after Nelson had twice knocked out Young Corbett in San Francisco, and matched Nelson for a six-round fight with Abe Attel, then featherweight champion of the world.

"Iron Jawed Bill" stubbornly demanded $1500 for Nelson's end that night, threatening to take his man out of the club unless he got it—and he got it.

Would Demand $30,000 Today.

Imagine Battling Nelson fighting Abe Attell TODAY—both at their best and Bat taking $1500 for his end. A modern manager would demand and get at least $15,000 for Nelson's end in such a bout—probably $30,000. "Iron Jawed Bill" did better when he matched Nelson with Gans. He demanded $20,000 for Nelson's end, thinking that would stop all talk about the match for he didn't want Nelson to fight Gans, having little idea then that Bat could beat the great black champion. But he was bluffing Tex Rickard—and Rickard thought no more of paying $20,000 to a fighter than of buying a two-bit cigar.

The fight drew $69,715, then a world record for lightweights, and Nelson, with a bonus and expense money, received $23,000.

Bat Nelson soon quarreled with Nolan. Bat usually managed his managers. No manager could put anything over on the hard headed Dane. He had a manager once, Murphy by name, who forgetfully started East from California without first splitting up a purse Bat had won. Bat ran around to see the San Francisco Chief of Police and the chief wired to Stockton and had the absent-minded manager taken off the train and brought back to settle up.

One of the unluckiest fighters, so far as dealings with a manager goes, was Frankie Neil, who won the bantamweight title from Harry Forbes. Neil's father managed him. The old gentleman liked to bet on the ponies, so Neil never got any money to show for a lot of hard ring work.

Wray's Column

Which Would Win: Zbyszko or Dempsey?

A MIDDLEWEIGHT wrestler of considerable note recently stepped on a tender spot of Jack Dempsey's when he stated that he would not be afraid to meet Dempsey in the ring, the contestants to employ only the methods of their respective crafts.

The bad news was conveyed to Dempsey, who immediately mounted his high horse, so a Western reporter stated, and declared that he would not consider the challenge from the New York middleweight; but he added that he did think that World's Wrestling Champion Zbyszko would last but a few short moments, if opposed to world's ring Champion Jack Dempsey, both styles to be legal.

Of course such a match is impossible; but the suggestion originates an interesting discussion as to whether wrestling or boxing is really a better protective accomplishment, in an emergency.

What Gotch Thought.

The subject of discussion is not new. The writer once put it to Frank Gotch, who expressed the view that the boxer would have no chance whatever with a wrestler of equal weight; and very little chance against a mat expert of inferior tonnage.

"The only chance for the boxer," Gotch said, "would be to land a knockout before the wrestler was prepared. Granting that both men were watchfully facing each other, the wrestler would win nine times out of ten. The first thing the matman would do, would be to dive for the boxer's legs, spill him to the ground and apply a hold from which there was no chance for the boxer to work out, unless he, too, happened to be a wrestler of merit. The matman is always stronger than the boxer, and his knowledge of holds, most of them unknown to the ring man, would leave the fistic artist helpless.

"If the boxer resisted after being on the ground, it would go very hard with him, for the wrestler could break his arm with a hammerlock, his foot with a toehold, his neck with a double nelson or his back by picking him up and slamming him to the canvas. It would not be a contest, longer than for a few seconds.

Boxer Easy, Baptiste Says.

THIS view is practically unanimous among wrestlers. George Baptiste, once one of the leading middleweights of the country told a Post-Dispatch reporter that if Dempsey missed his first punch he could be disposed of by a good middleweight wrestler.

"The boxer," Baptiste said, "would have almost no chance to land a knockout at the start, because the wrestler would dive for his legs and upset him. The best Dempsey might do would be to hit him a glancing blow on the top of his head, as he dove. Probably he would not even land at all, before he would find himself on the mat with a fatal hold clamped about him. I don't think there's even an argument as to the merits of the two styles for protective purposes."

The local consensus seemed to be that if the boxer missed a knockout on his first swing he would be through.

Zbyszko vs. Caddock.

WORLD'S CHAMPION ZBYSZKO and Earl Caddock are to wrestle for the championship at New York tomorrow night. Zbyszko, in his match with Martinson here, appeared slow, although in good condition. The stalwart titleholder did not display the speed needed in a world's mat champion, so the wise ones said, after watching him. They figured that his age—somewhere between 42 and 50 years—was sadly against him, and that the first good man would take his measure.

Caddock is to be the first; but Earl weighs only 185 pounds, or more than 40 pounds less than the big Galician. Ordinarily it would be too great a handicap. It has been in the past, as Caddock's matches with other leading stars have shown. But against Zbyszko different conditions will prevail. In a finish match, flying and rolling falls to count, against an ancient but stout-hearted foe, there is a chance that Caddock will come through. However, it is hard to see how the man who defeated Lewis can lose to the man Lewis defeated.

The chances are that Zbyszko, participating in a mere exhibition against Martinson here, did not extend himself, and has something in reserve for his title contest.

Tigers Win Ninth Straight Victory

Missouri Five Comes From Behind to Trounce Oklahoma, 46 to 27.

From a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 4.—Battling from behind in the second period the Missouri Tigers tonight scored their ninth consecutive Missouri Valley conference victory, beating Oklahoma, 46 to 27.

The Tigers held the lead for the first few minutes of play, only to lose it when Waite, Cocke and Gilmer began dropping long shots from the floor into the basket, and the Sooners were out in front, 9 to 8. Browning evened the count, but again the visitors took the lead, and battling fiercely, had it through to half time, the period ending, 22 to 20. It was the first time this season that the first period ended with the Missouri team behind.

Browning deadlocked the score in the first minute of the second half, and John Knight tallied a long basket for a 24-to-22 lead. Then the Tigers pulled away.

AUSTIN HAS SIGNED FOR COMING SEASON

Following the receipt of a query from Boston which read as follows: "New England sporting men score St. Louis club for action with Jimmy Austin. Declare him still for major league," Bob Quinn, business manager of the Browns, was called. Quinn asserted that the Browns knew Austion was still good for the majors and that he had signed his contract for 1922.

Quinn also announced that he would attend the spring meeting of the A. L. at Washington, Feb. 8. However, it is not certain that President Ball will be able to get away.

Penn Five Wins From Princeton

Victory Over Tigers Practically Clinches Eastern Basket Title.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 4.—Pennsylvania University climbed into the lead of the Intercollegiate Basketball League tonight when the Red and Blue five downed Princeton by a score of 20 to 18. The holders of the intercollegiate championship, with 15 straight victories to their credit, now seem assured of another league leadership as the Tiger five has defeated the other strong members of the Intercollegiate Association.

The game was hotly contested, the lead shifting from one team to the other 11 times during the game.

Penn jumped into the lead when Capt. Graves scored with a short field shot and followed with a foul goal. Princeton came back in a hurry and with goals by Jeffries and Klaess took the lead. Fast and brillian playing by both teams marked the first half which ended with Princeton leading, 14 to 12.

The Tigers held the lead until the last minutes of the game, when the Penn captain scored two fouls tying the score and Huntzinger tossed a short basket which won the game.

Loeb for Princeton carried off scoring honors, accounting for 10 of Princeton's 18 points. Huntzinger and Graves scored 6 points apiece for Penn. Brilliant guarding held down the scoring in the last period.

Capt. Wittmer of Princeton was unable to play because of his recent illness. Three substitutions were made for the Tigers and one for Penn.

The crowd of 4000 was said to be the largest ever attending a basketball game here, and the contest was declared by old followers of the Nassau five to have been the most bitterly contested on a Princeton floor in many years.

KABAKOFF AND BUTCH BATTLE IN COLISEUM FEATURE ON TUESDAY

Harry Sharpe has been named to referee.

Wrestling Next Sunday.

Gus Eisel and Steve Pappas, middleweights, will wrestle in the feature match of a wrestling program at the Rock Springs Turner Hall next Sunday afternoon. Eisel was scheduled to meet McEleye, champion of Kentucky, but the latter was injured in a workout. Two falls out of three will constitute the match. The other bouts are on the program. Balkline Stars To Display Skill Here Tomorrow

Horemans and Cochran Have Been Making Good Records on Exhibition Tour.

Edouard Horemans, billiard champion of Europe, and Welker Cochran, whom he is to meet in a 1600-point exhibition match of 18.2 balkline beginning at Peterson's tomorrow afternoon, are both playing strongly, according to reports just received of their work "on the road."

Though an account of their progress credits Cochran with winning a goodly majority of their contests, the most brilliant single achievement by either in some time was a run of 401 by the Belgian in Omaha last week. The young American, with an average of more than 30 and a high run of 107, was overwhelmed, 600 to 156, by Horemans, who went out in five innings for an average of 120.

Two weeks ago, Jake Schaefer, holder of the world's 18.2 title, averaged 114 2-7 for an afternoon and night of play here, the largest ever hung up for two sessions in a single day, with one exception. That was when Schaefer himself averaged 129 and a fraction for the last day of a 4800-point match with Horemans in New York last spring. The 120 mark by the Belgian excels Jake's great day here and is the second strongest complete day of play in billiard annals. The Belgian's five innings netted, respectively, 14, 401, 35, 100 and 50.

Four Blocks Will Be played.

The Cochran-Horemans contest will consist of four blocks of 400 points each, played at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 8:15 at night, tomorrow and Tuesday. At the conclusion of a block, the position of the balls will be marked, and they will be replaced there for resumption of play in the following session by the same man that concluded the preceding period.

No "continuous" game of this kind has been played by leading professional balkliners here since Willie Hoppe defended the 18.2 title against George Butler Sutton at Moolah Temple in 1916.

Horemans and Cochran will strive to outdo each other as fancy shot artists at the conclusion of each block. The Belgian is particularly proficient at powerful masse strokes, at which some consider him the equal if not superior of Charley Peterson, while the youthful American is particularly adept at force follow and masse effects of a bizarre nature.

Hoppe Satisfied With 18.2.

There is slight prospect of Willie Hoppe's defending his 18.1 championship if he manages to regain the 18.2 crown from Jake Schaefer and then defend it successfully against the challenge of Cochran, who is next in line. According to word from New York, Hoppe has confided to friends that he considers it wisdom to stick to 18.2 if he is able to regain the supremacy of this division. It is said that Hoppe believes the Belgian, Horemans, with his peculiar center-table nursing system, would have a decided advantage over him which would not be possessed at 18.2.

Statements by the two in New York recently developed the fact that, if Horemans fails to get an 18.1 meeting with Hoppe by the first of next January, he will proclaim himself champion and announce his readiness to defend the title against all comers. Whether this would force Hoppe out into the open or not depends on Willie's success at 18.2, according to his friends.

Missouri Has Balkline Star.

Probably not a dozen St. Louisans know that Missouri has a promising candidate for professional balkline championship honors. He is Clarence Jackson, one of the leading three-cushion stars, now in Kansas City. Jackson has been giving a great deal of time during the last year to improving his balkline game and now is said to be capable of a steady average of 20 or more. Runs of 150 and up have been frequent, say those who have watched him in private.

Some years ago Jackson was a prominent contender for the national amateur laurels, but when he first turned professional it was in the angle game. Occasionally he would play a bit of ball-to-ball billiards, but outside of purely local competitions in Detroit a short time back, he did no public playing. Now he is bending to his purpose assiduously.

Jackson is 35 years old, but for a billiard player this is by no means too advanced an age to attain high profficiency. Horemans was 26 before he played billiards at all, and Edward Gardner, several times holder of the American amateur title, never had a cue in his hand until he was 41 years old.

'Seeded Draw' Is Made Mandatory By U. S. Net Body

Amendment to Prevent Players From Reporting Tournaments for Papers Defeated.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—A resolution adopted by the United States Lawn Tennis Association today expressed overwhelming disapproval of so-called "charity" matches for which an admission fee was charged, and voted to sanction such matches only when the case was "extraordinarily deserving."

William T. Tilden II of Philadelphia, national champion, was the most vehement opponent of the resolution. He asserted that while he was one of the strongest upholders of amateurism, such a resolution would place an indirect stigma on tennis players who took part in charity matches, and would deprive them of the right to judge which were for worthy causes.

The resolution was passed following a statement by Julian Myrick, president, that it "simply was meant to emphasize the danger of promiscuous matches and the disapproval of the association."

Writing Amendment Defeated.

A proposed amendment to the amateur rules prohibiting players from writing newspaper accounts of the tournaments in which they play was defeated. Although a majority of the delegates favored the amendment, it failed of the necessary two-thirds vote.

The "seeded" draw was made mandatory in all tournaments and championships in a resolution passed unanimously.

Officers were elected as follows: Julian S. Myrick, New York, president; Dwight F. Davis, St. Louis, vice president; Charles Garland, Pittsburg, secretary; Abner Y. Leach Jr., Washington, D. C., treasurer.

Sectional delegates were elected as follows: Southwestern, J. B. Adoue Jr., Dallas, Tex., Northwestern, W. B. Burton, Minneapolis; New England, E. Sheafe, Boston; New York, L. B. Day, East Orange, N. J.; Missouri Valley, C. D. Jones, St. Louis; California, S. Hardy, San Francisco; Middle Atlantic, N. H. Bundy, Norfolk, Va.

Principal tournament dates were designated as follows:

June 26 to July 1—National intercollegiate championships, Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia.

July 10 to 15—Men's clay court singles and doubles, Western Lawn Tennis Association to select club.

July 17 to 22—Rhode Island State championship, at Providence.

July 24 to 29—Longwood Cricket Club invitation tournament, Boston.

July 31 to Aug. 5—Seabright, N. J., invitation tournament.

Aug. 7 to 12—Southampton, N. Y., invitation tournament.

Aug. 14 to 19—Women's national turf championship, Forest Hills, N. Y.

Aug. 21 to 26—National doubles and mixed doubles championship, veteran doubles, father and sons' and junior and boys' championship, Longwood Cricket Club, Boston.

Sept. 1 to 4—Davis Cup challenge round, Forest Hills, N. Y.

Sept. 8 to 16—Men's national singles championships, Germantown Cricket Club, Philadelphia.

In the event that a number of Davis cup ties will be played off in this country, the association provided that they should be held on Aug. 3 and 5, 10 and 12, and 17 and 19.

Drastic Measures Outlined as Plan To 'Save' Football

Notre Dame Official Says Colleges Must Meet Threat Fairly and Squarely.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 4.—Father William Carey, chairman of the athletic board of Notre Dame University, which recently felt the full effect of the football scandal, in a statement tonight declared that "the only salvation of colleges is to meet the threat of professional football fairly and squarely" and outlined drastic measures to combat the inroads he said professionalism is making into collegiate sports.

Father Carey asserted that the chief reason professionalism has gained a foothold is that high school and college lads realize it is "easy to get away with." He urged that it be made so "hard to get away with" that there would be virtually no infringements.

Father Carey's suggestions for making professionalism "hard to get away with" included:

1. Organizations of alumni and letter men to combat professionalism.

2. Pledges from every graduating athlete not to play in pro games in which men still in college are used. Withdrawal letter privileges from violators of this rule.

3. Pledge each man in college eligible to athletics not to play pro games whgile in college. Dishonorably expel violators.

4. Publish each fall the name, home town and high school of each high school athletic prospect entering college.

5. Disqualify men playing contests after leaving high school and before entering college.

6. Remove the belief that it is unfriendly for one college to notify another of rumors concerning its players.

Go-Betweens on Some Squads.

Notre Dame's investigation into the football scandal which disqualified eight of its players and nine from the University of Illinois proved that emissaries from professional promoters frequently visit universities to tempt their athletic stars, even hockey players being offered inducements to violate college regulations, Father Carey said.

The investigation also showed there were go-betweens on some football squads who tempted the players, he said, adding that a wholesale cleanup might deal a severe blow to prospects for the immediate future, as it did at Notre Dame, but in the end would purify athletics.

Father Carey pleaded that high school and college athletes "stop, look and listen" before deciding what to do when attempts were made to lure them into professionalism against school rules.

"I have never known a young man to choose wrongly to whom the inevitable regret did not come," he said. "The disappointment which he knows he must have caused his faculty, the resentment which he is aware his fellow men feel, the remorseful reminders which he continually meets, should be an example. When the temptation comes he will do well to hestitate and ask himself: 'Is it worth while?'"

The section of the statement outlining the reform proposals follows in part:

Father Carey's Statement.

"An important step toward reform would be to enlist organized support of the alumni, particularly the monogram men, or those playing professional football. Alumni would be glad to help the colleges not only in the prevention but in the discovery of professional escapades.

"Monogram men could be depended on for their share in this service to their alma mater. I feel certain they would sign an agreement, at least have an understanding, never to play in any game in which men from a college are used. It might be worth while to extend to them the same penalty recommended for the men in college—erasure of their names from the monogram list.

"Fuller co-operation on the part of colleges where there is question of a breach of rules and removal of the impression that reporting violations is an act of unfriendliness are essentials for the maintenance of athletic regulation.

"If all colleges agree on a definite penalty and enforce it uniformly and effectively, athletics soon will be returned to the only legitimate basis on which they can hope uncompromising amateurism will exist.

"There are two methods which might help prevent professionals from entering college. The first would be a uniform policy of refusing to accept as eligible for competition men who have played football during the time between completion of high school and entrance to college. The second would be publication each fall of names, home addresses and the high school every man considered eligible for competition that season. A pledge then could be secured that the men would not participate in professional games while in school with the understanding that violation of the pledge would be a cause for dishonorable dismissal.

"Finally, before the student is given a monogram, promise could be exacted that after graduation he will neither play with nor countenance the participation in professional games of men still in college."

FRANCIS APPLEBY WINS

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Percy N. Collins of Chicago, former amateur 18.2 balkline billiard champion, lost his final match of the national amateur tournament tonight to Francis S. Appleby, local player, 300 to 265. The loss placed Collins in fourth place with Emil Renner of Youngstown, O., third.

A Perfect Exercise.

In swinging golf clubs the sedentary business man, the woman who does not get enough exercise, and the boy or girl to whom a good physical foundation is of paramount importance all find a splendid exercise—a body builder. This great advantage of the game can be enjoyed during winter months in the indoor schools as well as out on the courses during the playing season. Indoor schools never were so popular as they have become this winter.

Golf exercises and tones muscles, developing the lithe, sinewy type rather than bully muscles. There are many fine, big, strong golfers but no one has ever yet developed the muscular strength of a prize fighter or a professional wrestler by playing golf and to the great majority of people it may well be doubted whether huge bully muscles are an asset. The game does not over-develop either the heart or any other part of the body and by the same token it does not leave in a state of physical exhaustion those who share its pleasures in anything like moderation. Golf is the great tonic of the sport world. That is why it is pleasurable for players of all ages, young or old or of either sex.

Athletes of great muscular development are rather handicapped when they get on the golf links. It is true that many of our prominent athletes take up golf but very few of them ever acquire any pronounced ability. Golf is a game of tone and rythm rather than power.

Sometime ago I learned some very interesting facts about golf as an exercise. A player who had been golfing for a long time took up wrestling. Wrestling is a violent exercise and this player went to a gymnasium each day for practice. He wished to uncover any weak spots he might have in his physical makeup and figured that wrestling would do it quicker than anything else. This man had never taken any physical exercise except golf, being a student of the game, he had wondered at times just what muscles played the most important part in the golf stroke. He had assumed that the forearms and wrists were the all-important muscles.

To his surprise he found that in wrestling his forearms and wrists tired first. His upper arms and shoulders had the greatest strength.

This particular player, however, had always used a hard-holding palm grip in his playing and had thrust great shoulder strength into his drives. I have always used the feel and touch for accuracy and I am sure that just the reverse will show up were I to experiment with wrestling.

Bob Gardner is another example of the touch golfer and his forearms have responded wonderfully to the exercise. It should be borne in mind, however, that he has played a great deal of golf and his wrists and forearms are correspondingly more developed than the average player's would be.

Golf requires smooth, easy-acting muscles, not great strength. The finely developed muscles resulting from golf are like high-strung wires. They mean endurance and energy not only on the playing field but in the ordinary walks of life. The game gives to the devotee a rythm of movement and a perfection of body carriage and anyone can enjoy these advantages as well right now as next summer. The fees for teaching in the golf school are very modest and after a series of lessons the player can very easily rig in the basement of his home or out in the backyard a place big enough to carry on the daily practice.

Golf is in truth the all-year-round sport of America today. Get your share of the fun.

DE ANDREIS TEAM TO PLAY MILLER ELEVEN IN TODAY'S FEATURE

The De Andreis team, leader in the St. Louis Soccer League, will be put to a severe test today, when the green-jerseyed athletes oppose the Ben Millers. The Scullins tackle the Screw Co. in the other battle. Kickoff at 2 o'clock.

The Ben Millers have been coming rapidly in the past few weeks and have made an improved showing over their exhibition in the early part of the season. The moving of Nick Reidy to goal has helped the team greatly. Joe Hand of Gillespie, Ill., will again be at outside right for the De Andreis.

The Scullins will again be without the services of Oellerman and Cliff Brady. Diel will again be between the uprights, while there is a chance that Danny Murphy will be in the halfback line instead of McKenna.

Today is the first day the professional teams will be allowed to use Municipal athletes, and several may show with the aggregations.

McDonald Shoots Brilliant Golf to Win Texas Title

Chicago "Pro" Scores 281 for 72 Holes, Which Is Believed to Set U. S. Record.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 4.—Bob McDonald of Chicago won the championship in the Texas open golf tournament at the municipal golf links today. McDonald shot a 281 at the end of two days' play. Cyril Walker of Englewood, N. J., was second, with 282, and Leo Diegel of New Orleans third, with 286.

McDonald said after the match that he believed he had established a new United States competitive record for a golf course exceeding 6000 yards long. Iron nerve was responsible for his victory, since in both days' play he was the victim of unfavorable breaks. His score this morning was made in spite of a six on number three as the result of hooking into a patch of trees; and a five on number 12 as the result of a shot into the rough and an approach which fell short.

At a dinner tonight given by the Tournament Committee of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, under whose auspices the tournament was held, McDonald was given first prize of $1500 and a gold medal; Walker, $750, and Diegel, $500. Twenty other players received smaller sums.

72 Victor's Highest Score.

McDonald's victory was one of the age, experience and cool nerves over more brilliant youth. His maximum score for any of the series of 18 holes was 72. Both observers of the matches and fellow-professionals say McDonald played one of the most consistent series of games ever witnessed in a medal tournament.

At the end of Friday night's play he faced a one-stroke lead by Cyril Walker and was unable to overcome it at the end of the first 18 holes this morning. So close were the two rivals that a missed putt on the eighteenth hole o fthe last round cost Walker a tie for first place.

McDonald was playing with Clarence Mangham, local professional, and Walker with Abe Espinosa of San Francisco. The two teams were an hour apart and as McDonald faced the opening of the final 18 holes this afternoon he had to set the pace.

Finishes Like a Machine.

Coolly he drove off and made a three on the difficult number one, following it with another three on the somewhat easier number two. Number three, which had been his bugbear several times because of the 200-yard canal hazard paralleling the fairway, and which cost him a six in the morning, again proved difficult and required a five. The short number four was made in three and number five, which Diegel made in three Friday, needed a five for McDonald. Number seven, 130 yards, was made in two, the first two scored by any professional on the hole since the matches started. From that time McDonald played like a machine and finished the 18 in 70, a mark which up to the present tournament has been made on the course by only two professionals.

The eighteenth hole of the last round was Walker's Waterloo this afternoon as on Friday. The fairway is narrow and is paralleled by the same canal which runs along number three. Walker went out in 36 and came in with the same figure, but the 72 was not good enough to win. A putt missed by inches on number 18 cost him a 71 and a tie with McDonald. Diegel, whose bad start Friday cost him possible first place, equaled McDonald's 70 in both morning and afternoon rounds today.

Elmer and Donald Harrison, St. Louis, withdrew at the beginning of today's play.

The scores follow:

Bob McDonald, Chicago	139	142—281
Cyril Walker, Englewood, N. J.	138	144—282
Leo Diegel, New Orleans	146	140—286

Hutt Martin, Los Angeles	146	146—292
Pete O'Hara, New York	149	143—292
Oto Hackbarth, Cincinnati	146	148—294
Charles Hall, Birmingham	145	150—295
Bob Peebles, Louisville	150	145—295

ENGLISH WOMAN TALKS HERE ON LABOR UNREST

Mrs. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale Blames Factory System for Present Conditions.

The story of the grave dissatisfaction of workers the world over in their particular vocations was said yesterday by Mrs. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale in a lecture at the City Club to be merely the story of the stamping out of romance and thrill and satisfaction in work through the introduction of the factory system and its piece work. Mrs. Hale is a sister of Sir J. Forbes-Robertson, English actor.

Speaking on "Labor Unrest: Causes and Cures," she related how the factory system, which followed the invention of the steam engine, had replaced the home worker, who was his own boss, into a mere pieceworker, unacquainted with the product he was making, except for his one or two minute operation in its making.

"During the war the English expended tremendous energy in their jobs," said Mrs. Hale. "There was a stake at hand. They consequently worked. Officials, realizing a letdown would come with the slump after the war, created a commission to investigate conditions.

Wanted More Money.

"The commission discovered one outstanding fact. That was that every worker wanted more money.

"But a desire for more money is not the sole desire of labor. Behind this there must always be an urge, which has to do with the soul, the mind, the spirit, as well as the merely material things of life. The truth is, industrial workers are bored, bored to death with their jobs.

"In England when a worker gets bored and weary of his job, he has horse race betting to amuse him, to take his mind from his job. Or maybe he'll go to a ball game. In many states here there's no horse racing, and something seems to whisper to me that our American workmen are not even allowed to take it out in drink, as their British cousins frequently do.

"The commission found that machinery was here to stay. There was no likelihood of again introducing the home worker who manufactured his particular article himself. Yet it realized the interest of the worker must be stimulated in his particular industry if efficiency was to be maintained.

Formerly Owned Own Tools.

"Throughout all the ages, but our modern one, the workman has always owned his own tools or machine. Modern industry has taken this from him.

"Elimination of industrial troubles, the commission, found, so far as England was concerned, rested on the recognition of the trade unions. In England there is no such thing as associations of manufacturers, who have banded together here to waste time chasing the rainbow of the open shop or what they prefer to call the "American plan." For 150 years England has faced the problems of modern industry. The United States has only been a manufacturing nation since the Civil War.

"When the factory system was introduced in Britain, the employers indulged in the well-known abuses, overworking and underpaying. As a result the fear of these abuses returning have welded workers there into efficient unions. Unions are so old and so strong that none dreams of undermining or working against them. Unlike the United States, manufacturers and great business heads do not believe labor unions can be coerced, their members forced to work by court injunctions and the like.

"The commission evolved a plan which all labor unions except the 'big three' have accepted. The 'big three' are the transport workers, the railroad brotherhoods and the miners. Its plan consists of voluntary creation of committees of workmen and employers in the shops.

"These committees meet sometimes daily and at least weekly. They discuss, before any friction arises, the problems confronting their particular industry and shop. Should a dispute come up between employes and employers, the committee attempts to settle it. Should the shop committee be unable to agree, the dispute is passed on to the district committee, composed of representatives of employers and employes of the entire district. If agreement is not reached here, the question goes to a national committee. Should the national committee be unable to decide on it, then a Government adviser or umpire is called in. There is no strike of employes until the national committee, after the Government has stepped in, reports its failure to agree on a solution.

Shop Committees Successful.

"Ninety per cent of the strikes have been settled by the shop committees. This system has built up an esprit de corps which has increased production and has made the workers more contented.

"There has also grown up in England great co-operative societies which are composed of the workers and which have their own stores, factories, farms and the like. This is like a return to the old guild system that existed up to 1848. The Co-Operative Wholesale Society is the largest of these, having about 4,500,000 members. Last year its banks reported handling 600,000,000 pounds sterling.

"These associations and the co-operative plan in industry have in a way been able to bring back to the workers in England some of the interest in their occupations of which they were deprived. While some well-visioned Americans are trying similar systems here, the majority of them are content to go along irritating the labor problem by trying to down labor unions, instead of trying to co-operate with them."

Germany

Walking in a Circle to Miss Financial Ruin

Harden Says Only a Loan Can Save Situation, But Forcing It Would Cut Tax Revenue..

By MAXIMILIAN HARDEN,
Germany's Foremost Publicist.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World. (Copyright, 1922.)

BERLIN, Feb. 4.

"MY country, right or wrong!"

This saying has become a world menace. It was only acceptable when the world of separate political and economic states had little intercourse of commerce, each of the states arranging its own affairs as it pleased. Of course, even today a certain partiality toward a mother country, especially when it is in distress, is quite natural.

But in this modern world, with the states economically independent, while it is undesirable to suppress different folk types and attempt to make all the human flower gardens resemble one another, we must seek international understanding and not accentuate our differences. All channels of reason would be closed if all patriots proclaimed it as holy duty blindly to defend everything their chance Governments decreed in foreign intercourse, like a warrior would defend his flag or a priest his chalice.

If half a dozen furious patriotisms clash, peace is preservable only by elaborate artifices. Those not adhering to the rules of the game, or the blind rites of false patriotism, must be prepared for excommunication or abuse.

But my own experience along this line will not prevent my saying openly that the most recent answer of the German Government to the Reparations Commission is inadequate, like nearly all the previous actions taken in this matter.

The proposed forced loan is a substitute for a reichsnotopfer, or voluntary contribution to the nation's distress. I have vainly proposed as a name for the voluntary contribution fund the "Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial." I wanted the name to remind the people of the origin of the charity and thus combat the monarchy through the purse.

Under the new scheme large and small capitalists would be forced to lend to the Government a portion of their property, up to one-third of the whole. But by this plan the income tax would be so lessened that new paper money would have to be issued, increasing the inflation, since many would be obliged to sell their homes and mortgage their valuables to meet the loan. The flood of paper money would be harmless if none of it had to cross the frontiers. But as foreign countries already glutted with marks must now take more on account of our needs for provisions, raw materials and foreign bills, with which to pay our debts, money depreciation and consequently exchange dumping become an endless chain.

Taxation Not a Remedy.

The notion that Germany's financial misery can be abolished through taxation is so childish as not to bear discussion. This hasty measure, designed to show again Germany's oft-repeated "good will to fulfill her promises," has only one sure consequence. Every tradesman will shift the tax to his customers. Everybody must shift to someone or perish. Thus prices will rise, salaries and wages be increased and the money presses speeded up. The coal tax has been doubled, bread is 75 per cent higher. The mark which now purchases in Germany about 7 pfennigs' worth has fallen to an international exchange value of 2 pfennigs.

Any housemaid can see how, under such conditions, the need for paper money must grow.

Would France get her money then? The raven answers "nevermore." France claims to have advanced 80,000,000,000 francs to her people on account of reparations owed by Germany and therefore cannot balance her budget or pay America, unless Germany is kept punctually to the schedule of payments.

Loan Could Come Only From U. S.

But Germany, sentenced to pay 132,000,000,000 marks and now, at the fourth billion, asking for a moratorium, can only pay through the negotiation of a great reparations loan. This loan, of course, could only come from the United States.

Imagine America, after unselfishly deciding the war, with immense sacrifices of blood and money, granting a huge loan during a domestic crisis, so that France might obtain the necessary money from Germany! I am afraid there is no exit from this reparations problem, which hinders the world's productive work, through any such labyrinth as this.

The treaty of Versailles is a mass of contradictions. Article 232 demands damages for civilians. Annex article one demands compensation for military and naval victims. The first Germany can do; not the second. It is madness to imagine that indemnity for a whole continent after such a war can be squeezed from a single nation's labor.

France

People Piqued Over Attitude on War Debts

German Failure to Settle, Although Prosperous, Is Not Comprehended—Nation Bewildered.

By ANDRE TARDIEU.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World. (Copyright, 1922.)

(The picture of world affairs is a very dark one to France. She sees Germany making progress everywhere except in the direction of paying the reparations bill. She sees efforts to embroil France and the United States. The French public is bewildered as to what has happened during the three months of the Washington conference. It wonders what can have happened to turn the American press so bitterly against France. The man in the street is demanding to know what is the truth.)

PARIS, Feb. 4.

CONTRADICTORY whims rather than contradictory purposes have made the last week again one of confusion. Nevertheless, certain clear tendencies stand out.

The date for the Genoa conference approaches. One cannot guarantee that the conference will not open at the appointed time, but I think it quite possible it won't. Lloyd George is much less enthusiastic about Genoa since it was decided to postpone the general elections in England. For the time being he does not need an issue.

Meantime the Premier's Near Eastern conference has adjourned. There is no explanation. But how can the Near Eastern problem be solved apart from all the other problems? If certain nations must yield in the East they must be compensated elsewhere.

Genoa Prediction Made.

In other words, as I have often insisted, no worth-while understanding is possible between France and Great Britain, unless there can be an understanding on all subjects such as was reached in 1914 between Edward VII and Delcasse.

At present it looks very much as though the Geona conference will be postponed. The recent statement of Tchitcherin, the bolshevik Foreign Minister, is scarcely reassuring and France is justified in fearing that the Genoa conference would not reconstruct Europe, but would forever destroy what remains of the European peace treaties.

The United States declines the Genoa conference, and what economic reconstruction is possible without the United States? If the American farmers cannot sell their wheat, the European situation is the principal cause, and that's only one of hundreds of examples.

Germany has sent a rather evasive answer to the Reparations Commission. Chancellor Wirth announces a financial program eight months late. Walter Rathenau becomes Foreign Minister and thus Big Business is installed at the Government's summit.

Attitude Toward Germany.

More and more Germany turns from politics to business. But long ago somebody truly said that sound politics was the necessary foundation of sound business. So, if Germany, after two years, now gives proof of a will to pay, we will be the first to hail it, for the will to pay is more than anything else.

France has read with interest, however, the German statistics just printed showing a great progress in agriculture, mining and even railroad operation up to the present temporary strike. There is progress, progress, everywhere except on the reparations payments. So long as this remains true, France cannot get enthusiastic.

Meanwhile, there are efforts to embroil us with the United States. The cable dispatch saying that President Harding had refused to receive Ambassador Jusserand was so absurd that not even the most credulous believed it, but it shows that we must be on our guard against excitable people who spread news, when they know it is false.

Happenings Not Comprehended.

The truth is the French people do not comprehend what has happened during the three months of the Washington conference. The first cables reported an immense success for the American policy. Now we are told that the Senate will combat the Washington treaties more ardently than the treaty of Versailles.

We are told that our delegation maneuvered badly and produced a bad impression. Does this explain the disagreeable tone so many American newspapers have adopted toward France?

Our man in the street does not believe this and asks what is really the truth. Europe truly is groping in the clouds of uncertainty.

When will the sun break through?

Ireland

Prospect Good for Settling Boundary Row

Difficulties Are Being Ironed Out in Spite of Civil War Talk—Era of Peace Foreseen.

By G. N. BARNES,
Former British Minister of Labor and Now Leader of the Labor Group in Parliament.

Special Wireless Dispatch to the Post-Dispatch. (Copyright, 1922.)

LONDON, Feb. 4.

DESPITE the flurries of the last two days over the boundary between the North and the South, I say that all goes well with Ireland.

Certain hotheads already are talking of a civil war between Ulster and the Free State, but it was ridiculous to think that the boundary problem could be solved in a day. The negotiations were broken off for the time being in the best of spirits.

There possibly have been some misunderstandings, but I cannot conceive of the sane men at present in charge of Ireland's destiny attempting to force certain parts of Ulster under South Irish control against the will of the majority of the peoples in the affected counties.

I believe the Irish will be able to work out their own problems. There probably will be some stiff pulling and hauling, with David Lloyd George, as usual, the storm center, but the spirit of the great mass of the Irish people is today a spirit of conciliation and reconciliation. The people have had enough war. For 700 years they have resisted the rule of England. The peace the country has enjoyed the last six months is not to be destroyed.

Strong Hands at Work for Peace.

It is true that Eamonn de Valera and his following, although defeated in the Dail Eireann, have not accepted the new position, and it is true that imported gunmen are still running amuck, but strong hands are at work. Michael Collins and Arthur Griffith are doing all that is possible to build a bridge from the nebulous republic of guerilla warfare days to the more placid haven of the Free State. And, although at first glance the flareup of the last two days would point otherwise, Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, has been helping and co-operating in the solution of many difficulties.

There will soon be a general election in the Free State territory, and although a stiff fight may be put up for a republic, there is little doubt but that the conditions of the treaty with England will be acepted by a large majority of the voters. Great Britain believes that Irishmen have set themselves to carry out the agreement.

Era of Power in Prospect.

I believe that an era of peace at home and power abroad is dawning for Ireland and that Irishmen will avail themselves of the opportunities opening to them.

Henceforth, if the provisional government gets support at the coming elections, Ireland will control her own destinies. She will sit in the imperial councils on equal terms with Canada and in the League of Nations with France and other great nations of the world.

Ireland may even have a duly accredited representative at Washington, and Irish sentiment in the United States, instead of being as heretofore a disturbing factor and a source of weakness to Great Britain, may become a power in both countries in helping to solve the terrible problems which now confront our common civilization.

If it will relieve Irish feelings for the common good, the Anglo-Irish treaty will have proved one of the most beneficent instruments of modern times.

One incident mentioned in the recent Dublin debates is worth putting on the record here. It is the story of Compton Smith, an English Captain, shot in reprisal for the death of a Sinn Feinn officer. Capt. Smith gave his watch to his executioner as a token of disbelief in the executioner's sincerity. The story has made a deep impression on the generous Irish nature.

Compton Smith, British soldier, might well rank with John Brown of Harper's Ferry, in the manner of his death and its effect upon events. Of him it may equally be said that "his body lies moldering in the grave, but his soul goes marching on."

CROWD EXPECTED AT PRINCESS' WEDDING

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch. (Copyright, 1922.)

LONDON, Feb. 4.—It is hoped that the expected crowd of provincial and foreign visitors to Princess Mary's wedding will give the coming season a fine start, so that it will not be such a frost as last year.

The usual encouragement is being held out to visitors by newspaper predictions of a general increase of prices for their benefit, but there is no sign that any special entertainments will be organized to attract them.

THE SOLDIER COMPENSATION PLAN, PROBABLE COST, AND ARGUMENTS FOR AND AGAINST ENACTMENT

Whole Congress Between the Devil and Deep Blue Sea on Question of Doing Something More for Those Who Served in War; American Legion Men Insistent.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.

CONGRESS is again searing unwilling fingers with one of the hottest potatoes that it has ever been the political misfortune of a legislative body to pick up. Even the Dyer antilynching bill, which the House passed without enthusiasm as a political expedient, was not so embarrassing as the measure it has had thrust into its hands by the active protagonists of "adjusted compensation" for veterans of the World War.

Congress is again between the devil and the deep blue sea—the devil of threatened opposition by ex-service men if it fails to pass the bonus bill; the blue sea of oblivion which many members fear will await them if they increase taxes (as they must) in order to pay the bonus.

In voting on the bonus bill the average Congressman will be guided not by its intrinsic merits or demerits, but by his judgment as to the relative potency of the two evils confronting him. Whichever way the individual decision goes, it will be, in most cases, politically inspired. Present prospects are that the bill will be passed at this session, though lately the supporters of the bill have taken some alarm from the growing volume of protests which are being poured in against it by business interests and individual taxpayers, including many of those whom it is intended to benefit. It is almost certain that the House, which will first deal with the bill, will pass it; less certain, but probable, that the Senate will follow suit.

If it is passed, President Harding will be faced with the embarrassment of having to decide between the action of a Republican Congress and the advice of the chief financial officer of the Government, his own appointee, Secretary Mellon of the Treasury, who, like his Democratic predecessor, Secretary Houston, is flatly opposed to the measure in the present state of the national finances.

So there's plenty of embarrassment all around, from the White House, through the Cabinet, down to the lowliest new Congressman casting up his chances for re-election in the fall.

American Legion Campaign.

Meantime the energetic young men who head the American Legion, the biggest single force back of the bill, are carrying on a vigorous, effective and devoted fight for the bonus. It is impossible to talk with the men at the legion headquarters here and doubt their sincerity and devotion. They are for this bill with every ounce of their strength, believing that the former service men and women are entitled to it as a measure of simple justice. They are not interested in political consequences; what they want is results, quick results, and to that end they are conducting a whole-hearted and wholesale drive on Congress, by means of personal interviews, testimony before committees and printed propaganda, with as much vigor and singleness of purpose as ever they showed in storming a German trench. You don't have to agree with them to admire their enthusiasm and effectiveness.

If the promises which the legion claims to have received from Republican leaders are carried out, the bonus bill, in the form advocated by the legion, will be reported to the House from the Ways and Means Committee within the next two weeks, will be passed by the House about a week thereafter and by the Senate with as much promptitude as can be expected from that body. They admit that opposition will be encountered in the Senate, based largely on the financial situation as set out by Secretary Mellon, but they don't admit the possibility of ultimate defeat.

Among the Senators whom they claimed to have lined up definitely for the bill are McCumber, Republican, chairman of the Finance Committee, who will be in charge of the bill in the Senate; Bursum, Republican; Poindexter, Republican; Lodge, Republican leader; Watson of Indiana, Republican; Capper, Republican; Kenyon, Republican; Pittman, Democrat; Sutherland, Republican; Walsh of Massachusetts, Democrat, and Willis, Republican.

McCumber Predicts Passage.

"I am absolutely certain that a soldier compensation bill will pass, and pass very soon," said McCumber recently on the floor of the Senate. McCumber was opposing an effort made by Senator Simmons, Democrat, to have the bonus bill attached as an amendment to the then pending allied debt funding bill. He said the bonus bill should be handled separately, and should carry with it the means of raising the revenue it would require. Properly passed through the Senate, predicted McCumber, the bill would "receive the approval of the President, with whatever taxation we may attach to it."

This is the nearest to an authoritative statement of the President's position that has been made. It is not likely that McCumber, whose place at the head of the Finance Committee makes him one of the Republican inner circle, would misrepresent the President's attitude. The statement tallies, moreover, with information given out at the White House Friday.

Without entering into the merits of the bill, this article will give (1) a synopsis of its provisions; (2) the best available information as to what it will cost; (3) the arguments for it; and (4) the arguments against it.

What the Bill Is.

The bonus bill, or, to use its official title and the one preferred by its supporters, the adjusted compensation bill, which is now the subject of hearings before the Ways and Means Committee of the House, is substantially the same bill as that passed by the House in May, 1920, subsequently twice reported favorably by the Senate Finance Committee and eventually sent back to that committee by the Senate, by vote of 47 to 29, after the President in his address of July 12, 1921, had asked Congress to delay action, lest the financial burden imposed by the bill should "break down our treasury from which so much later on is to be expected."

The bill excludes from its benefits all those who were given commissions while performing merely clerical service in the departments. No payments are to be made to persons who may otherwise be eligible for the period in which they served with higher rank than Captain in army or Marine Corps, or Lieutenant in the navy, or corresponding rank in other branches.

"The purpose of the bill," according to Senator McCumber, in reporting it from the Finance Committee last year, "is to correct the inequalities suffered by those who performed actual soldier duties and received meager wages."

For all time in the service above 60 days, the bill grants compensation at the rate of $1 a day for home service, and $1.25 for overseas service. The maximum for an overseas veteran is $625, and for one who did not serve abroad, $500. The cash payment, if $500 or over, is to be made in ten quarterly installments; if less than $500, in quarterly installments of $50 each.

This is the cash feature of the so-called five-way plan. Any one of the five plans may be selected by the beneficiary. The others are as follows:

1. "Adjusted service certificates," amounting to 40 per cent more than the veteran would receive under the cash plan. These run for 20 years, with interest at 4½ per cent, compounded annually, making them worth 3.38 times the amount of the cash pay. The face value is payable Dec. 31, 1942, or upon the prior death of the veteran. A revolving fund is created, out of which the veteran may borrow against his certificates under appropriate restrictions, paying the same rate of interest that is allowed on them.
2. "The vocational training aid" option authorizes the veteran to receive training at the expense of the Government to an amount 40 per cent greater than his cash pay would be.
3. The "farm or home aid" provision entitles the veteran to his cash pay plus 40 per cent to be applied toward the purchase of a home or farm.
4. The "land settlement aid" feature gives the veteran preferential rights on reclamation projects or on public or Indian lands when thrown open to entry.

The last-named provision is in the McCumber (Senate) bill only. The Fordney (House) bill carries, as an alternative, a provision for the creation of a Veterans' Settlement Board, which shall establish projects for reclamation and settlement of lands.

What the Bill Will Cost.

The bill, if passed, will be in substantially the form indicated.

Estimates prepared for the use of the Senate Finance Committee show that 4,546,688 veterans will be entitled to benefits as of Jan. 1, 1923. On the basis of the several options, the cost has been computed by an expert of this committee as follows:

Cash plan, if accepted by every veteran, $1,560,166,330.

Certificate plan, with no borrowings and making allowance for annual payments on account of deaths, total by 1943—$5,273,345,563.

If 20 per cent accept cash plan and 80 per cent certificate plan, and one-third borrow the limit, total by 1943—$4,356,338,615.

If one-third accept cash and two-thirds certificate, with allowance similar to above—$3,808,282,142.

If half take cash and half take certificates, total by 1943—$3,303,153,231.

The latest authoritative estimates are those of Secretary Mellon in his letter of Jan. 24 in opposition to the bonus. Mellon said the minimum cost, in case substantially all should elect the cash plan, would be $1,500,000,000, and the maximum, in case substantially all should take the certificate loan instead of cash, $5,250,000,000. If an unexpectedly large proportion should choose cash, Mellon thought the cost within the first two years might run well over $1,000,000,000. On the basis of a "reasonable certainty" that at least half would elect the cash plan, he said the cost in the first two years would be $850,000,000, and the total cost would fall between the two extreme estimates, or at about $3,330,000,000.

In this connection, it should be noted that in testimony last Thursday before the House Ways and Means Committee, Adjutant-General Peter C. Harris and Brigadier-General H. M. Lord of the Finance Division of the War Department said the cost of administration of the bonus act would be a maximum of $1 a person. This would mean, if all the veterans accepted the bonus, a total cost for administration alone of more than $4,500,000. Gen. Harris said that of this sum $1,250,000 would be required for the work of his office alone.

The American Legion has published no estimates of the cost of the bonus. It has similarly refrained from entering into the discussion of means of raising the money, taking the position that the country is well able to pay the bill and that it is up to Congress, in its wisdom, to find the way.

Plans to Raise Money.

Various plans have been offered, but none decided on. The suggestion has been made that the money be raised by a tax on light wines and beer. This would involve an amendment of the prohibition laws to permit the sale of wines and beer—a contingency which, to put it mildly, is most improbable in a Congress which still cowers at the crack of the Anti-Saloon League whip.

The administration holds it would be impracticable to make the payments out of the proceeds from the foreign debt.

A general sales tax has been suggested, only to be met with the sharpest kind of opposition.

There remains the possibility of a miscellaneous assortment of taxes, such as those suggested before the Ways and Means Committee last Thursday by Secretary Mellon. Mellon was careful to state that he was not suggesting revenue sources for bonus purposes, but only showing how money could be obtained. About $300,000,000 a year, he said, could be raised in the following manner:

From a one-cent increase in first-class postage, $70,000,000; increased second-class postage to wipe out a deficit of $30,000,000 now incurred in that branch of the postal service; increased tax on cigarettes, $25,000,000; increase on documentary stamps, $40,000,000; two-cent tax on bank checks, $30,000,000; license tax of 50 cents per horse-power on motor cars, $100,000,000. He intimated that the balance necessary to make up the $425,000,000 estimated as the total cost of the bonus the first year could be raised by a tax of 3 cents a gallon on gasoline.

The argument on which the greatest stress has been laid by the American Legion and Congressional supporters of the bill is that the soldier who risked, or offered to risk, his life for his country, is entitled to be recompensed for the

About 140,000 Missourians Eligible to Benefits Under Soldier Compensation Law

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.

THE American Legion's Washington office has no figures to indicate how many men in Missouri and St. Louis would profit by the soldier bonus, but according to the Provost Marshal General's report, about 140,000 men were mustered into the service from Missouri.

Practically all of these, with the exception of those who served less than 60 days, would be eligible to benefits.

Subject to the same qualification, the number of St. Louisans in this category is estimated here to be between 40,000 and 45,000.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Complete Pardon.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE Governor of Missouri has granted a parole to a prisoner who has served seven years of a life sentence on the ground that the "wrong man was convicted," that the prisoner is innocent and never should have been imprisoned."

This doesn't seem just right to me. It is not a fitting "amende honorable" for a great wrong. Nothing that can be done can wipe from his memory the seven years of servitude for a crime that he did not commit. Nothing can restore those seven years. The State is not civilly liable to him for blunders of this kind, but it does seem that it could do better than dole out a parole. Paroles are granted to the guilty as a clemency or an indulgence. The culprit is allowed his personal liberty under certain restrictions. Another known as "next friend" or "sponsor" supplants the warden of the penitentiary as jailer, and this person is supposed to have a "watch and care" over the released convict, who must report from time to time. That is all very well for a guilty man. Is it justice for an innocent man?

A pardon corrects a wrong as far as it can be corrected. For the good name of the State, the Governor should right this wrong and give this man a full and complete pardon. JOHN C. ROBERTSON.

Booze and Hard Times.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"LABORING MAN" insists that he must have his beer. He can't stand a cut of 20 per cent in his wages, but what per cent will go out of his wages when he gets to going to the saloon for his beer?

Some of us know by sad experience what happens when the man gets his pay and then goes into the saloon. What per cent of his wages goes over the bar? And how do his wife and children fare? There are several good people in our land, laboring people and others, who get along without alcoholic drinks, and who have little sympathy for men and women who have hard times because they squander their money for drink.

A WIFE AND MOTHER.

Finds It "Good Stuff."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HOPE you won't mind my writing to thank you for your literary page—especially as it has been done in recent issues. I have needed something of the kind; that is, something here at home which doesn't savor of "far-off, half-forgotten things." I feel sure there must be several thousands of persons in St. Louis who are genuinely interested in books and writers, and who will read with interest a page which is neither perfunctory nor apologetic. The Post-Dispatch literary page seems to me alive and democratic and common-sense. It is a "people's" column—or page. I predict that it will create, hereabouts, a healthy interest in books—that it will give to St. Louis the aspects of a center instead of a mass of people dwelling at the end of a tangent. It affords what is needed—a rallying point. In the immortal language of the streets, it is good stuff. LOUIS DODGE.

Bootleggers Benefit.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IF THE real American people (wets) would trace the high salaries of the officers and speakers of the "Thieves-of-People's-Rights" organizations I think they would find that they (the wets) are the very victims. When a new speaker for the antisaloon outfits is brought from productive industry or a raise in salary is given an old one, the price of "hooch" rises. The more workers the prohibitionists have in the field the more confident is the bootlegger of the longer life of his product.

The only difference in the two sides is that the "wets" want a revenue placed on intoxicants and the "drys" do not.

If the Hon. Wayne B. Wheeler, "Pussyfoot" Johnson and others would turn their health and energy to production, we might have a chance to get the price of "hooch" and "white kicker" back somewhere in the neighborhood of normalcy. If they don't we are doomed to drink our own making.

Wheeler, in his "tear-forcing" speech the other day, mentioned that drunkenness has decreased, but didn't say anything about the increase in alcoholic deaths and the number of patients received in our city hospitals for alcohol poisoning during prohibition as compared with the same period any time before prohibition. He also states that SOME of the ex-service men have declared on the floor of Congress that they didn't want a bonus with "dirty money." Probably one or two who wear the same make of corsets that he does, but that is a very small per cent of that vast army who went over and saved old man Wheeler's skin from imperialism. I was one of them and in the next war, if the outlook promises anything in appreciation for our gallantry that even sounds like prohibition, or income taxes, I am one of the many thousands of ex-service men that will do like Wheeler in the last war: (Stand on the corner, wave a little flag and shout "Go to it boys.")

Anyone who reads the daily news of today and can remember the general run of news before prohibition does not have to wear strong glasses to see that prohibition is a national failure. Wonder what Columbus would say if he could see what Wheeler and his gang are doing to "free America"? Might add that my strongest beverage is milk; water as a chaser. H. G. KELLY.

CHURCH VS. CONSTITUTION.

A letter in yesterday's Letters From the People, headed "Churches After Aldermen," reveals the prohibitionist in his most dangerous aspect—that of a practical politician wielding the big stick of the church over all officials and all candidates who refuse to subscribe word for word to the whole prohibition creed.

Our correspondent quotes a "business man of calm, clear judgment," who is also a Methodist, as saying that the 10,000 Methodist voters in St. Louis will repudiate those Aldermen who supported the beer and wine resolution. And the Methodists are not the only Christians, says our correspondent. There are those of other denominations, all of whom are now appealed to by our correspondent to join with him "in marking those treasonable men for defeat."

It may be, as our correspondent asserts, that the church membership of St. Louis now holds the balance of political power and can retire or promote whom it will. But suppose the churches organize themselves into a religious bloc, and openly function as such? What then? With prohibition thus securely established and its enforcement guaranteed the support of all office holders, will the church members as prohibitionists feel that their anxieties are ended and they may now proceed to such other civic or political conquest as beckons? If so, the church members will be woefully mistaken. Their anxieties, instead of having ended, will have scarcely begun. Let the Methodists of St. Louis undertake to vote as this unknown Methodist business man has agreed to vote them and a war would be on that would rock the city. Our correspondent and his friend, the Methodist business man, ought to realize that the Aldermen who voted for the beer and wine resolution have a following. Are those Aldermen to accept political execution by decree of the Methodists or any other denomination? Some of them might. Some of them might retaliate. It is a certainty that candidates sooner or later will appear that will match a fight with any church membership that attempts as such to exercise the balance of political power. That retaliation will spread wide and cut deep. It will not be confined to politics. It will contaminate trade, embitter social relations, corrode every phase and activity of life.

When the church, as such, enters the rough-and-tumble of politics let it get ready for such a war as it never has had to wage before in the United States. The founders of this Government knew the tyranny of a state church and they thought they had protected the citizens of the United States forever against such a monstrous institution. But the tenacity and ingenuity of organized intolerance appear to be bringing about by amendment what the bill of rights declared should never be. We are approaching, if we have not already arrived at, a de facto state church. The letter of our correspondent is a document in evidence.

The church has a great power and a great field. Its power is spiritual, its field the moral needs and aspirations of humanity. Should the church exchange its spiritual power for police power and instead of inspiring humanity by precept and example should assume to regulate human conduct by the coercion of law, the choice would be unfortunate for both the country and the church.

THE TARIFF SOPHISTRY BARED.

The Department of Commerce makes the astonishing revelation that our foreign trade in 1921 exceeded that of 1913, the last pre-war year, even allowing for the lower value of the dollar! What is more, the excess was entirely in exports, imports showing a shrinkage. Exports to Europe last year were estimated at $2,380,000,000, as against $1,500,000,000 for 1913 while imports were placed at $760,000,000 as compared with the 1913 figure of $865,000,000.

Such is the fire which Congress is called upon by the Republican party and the administration to put down with a high-tariff bill to protect our wage standards against the pauper labor of Europe! Markets for our products are what make jobs for our workers and a greater demand for farm produce. High import duties do not make markets. They make American consumers and wage earners the victims of a manufacturers' monopoly.

The high-tariff barons are not interested in making jobs for workers, but in raising the prices of their products. This can be done only by keeping out foreign competition. European nations cannot buy from us unless we provide them with part of their opportunity for making money by buying from them. It is all as plain as the nose on one's face. The story is told in the trade figures given out by the Republican administration itself. How long will the people, in the face of the plain facts, be buncoed by the moth-eaten sophistry of "protection" for the American working man?

AN ILIAD OF THE SOIL.

If you look over the shoulder of the man with a book in the street car these days you will find, in the majority of instances, that he is reading "Growth of the Soil." And if you have read the book yourself you will experience a curious pleasure in watching how Hamsun's latest reader is affected by the story. Is he as absorbed in this jerky, graceless recital of the primitive as you were? Does he hurry on through page after page of drab, laborious sameness, relieved only rarely by a bit of simple color; through dreariness occasionally intensifed by intimacies blared baldly out—does the reader swing eagerly along, interested, expectant, to a climax that can never be? He does. The book has gripped him, just as it gripped you.

What is the secret of Hamsun's book? The question may engage and even pique litterateurs, but it is not an academic inquiry that we are propounding. Is not the popularity of this book attributable, in part, to the mood of the times, to the agrarian unrest and discontent, to the farmer's determination that agriculture henceforward shall be on a par with other industries in sharing the spoils of war or peace? Or has Hamsun, with the thrust of his natural genius, probed down through the tangle and scrub growth of civilization and struck an elemental human chord?

Whatever else it is or isn't Hamsun's book is an epic of the earth earthy. It is one man's story, but it is an Iliad of the soil, nevertheless. Isak, like every other great pioneer, is "fellow to an emperor and brother to a poet." Is the time coming when no such Isaks can be imagined and no such Iliads can be written? Is agriculture to lose its individuality? Is farming to become, what Henry Ford predicts, the avocation of the farmer who will give 20 days out of the year to his fields, putting the rest of the time in a factory established on one of Ford's ubiquitous damsites? Perhaps Ford is right. And it would be maudlin sentimentalism, of course, to want to exclude the farmer from the easier way which science is platting for all industries because of pastoral charm and bucolic legend.

Still, the Growth of the Soil, as Hamsun records it, is man's predestined job, incomparably bigger than any other thing to which he may set his hand. It is fundamental. It exacts a heavy price but it pays as no other labor pays in terms of psychical "majesty and authority." If farming is ever reduced to the certainty and celerity of the Ford factory its dignity will necessarily disappear and the nation will have lost an invaluable spiritual sturdiness.

MUSIC AND THE CHILDREN.

As 3500 school children settled in their seats at the Missouri Theater yesterday morning, prior to the opening of the second Post-Dispatch free concert by the Symphony Orchestra, the scene was such as to stir the imagination of a sensitive observer. Particularly was this true as it concerned the permanent influence which these events might leave in the minds of the little guests.

From the stage, one saw a huge lake of gleaming faces, stirred by a thousand fancies, and sparkling with as many fleeting expressions. Or, more aptly perhaps, it was a field of daisies ruffled by the wind, each upturned flower a face touched with expectation, gayety, wonder, wistfulness or gratitude.

The orchestra begins. The expanse becomes portentously still; the undulations cease; an impressive calm descends. Gazing, one sees the field become a blur, soft, but charged with a tense animation. Before our eyes a vision of the future is slowly burgeoning. The trumpets sound the march from "Aida," celebrating, not the return of a victorious warrior, but the triumph of a generation coming into its heritage, the exultation of youth that at last has found the secret of how to live.

For this scene, if significant, means that here is a miracle—the miracle that is called the awakening of the spirit. To put it more intelligibly, it signifies that the next generation is being introduced to a larger world. They are learning, those who do not already know, that existence is not all strife and trouble and envy; that even disappointment and failure cannot deprive them of a rich inheritance bequeathed by the geniuses of the past.

Translating in yet more practical terms, it portends a more contented and peaceful St. Louis, in the everyday future. It must be plain that boys who grow up as friends of Bach, Beethoven and Mendelssohn will not find satisfaction in frivolity and dissipation; that the women of tomorrow may avail themselves of higher interests than are afforded by the current round of petty social trivialities. It means that they are here making acquaintances that they are likely to cherish, and create influences that will ennoble them.

And so the very program represented, in a way, the unrolling of that better life for which we hope. In the melancholy beauty of the "Largo" we are recalled to the sorrowful old days of the past, when men strove and died for objects unworthy of a single thought, while the poets and prophets vainly cried out and finally succumbed to the massive forces of ignorance and persecution.

But this passes, as do all memories, however haunting and sad. There flashes out the "Spring Song," sprightly with hope and the fragrance of a new season. And then the dazzling, full-faced brilliance of the "Intermezzi," symbolic of the ripe beauty of a new age, followed by the ballet selections, picturing the graceful revels of a generation that has learned to be at once gay and innocent.

Such was the vision. It will become a reality, no doubt, when the things of this world are at last estimated at their true values. Before that time arrives, however, men and women will learn to fix ideals, and to judge conduct by those ideals. Such a race will not permit the ideals of its own children to become established by accident or chance environment. They will learn to love good music. It will be an indispensable part of their education.

EUROPE IN 1923.

An English scientist, Sir William Henry Beveridge, declares that Europe, now in a self-pitying mood over what it conceives to be hard luck, will presently be looking back upon these niggardly days as abundant, gay and festive times. Sir William predicts that 1923 will be a cropless year in Europe; the worst the continent has known since 1315.

Depressed as one might well be with the European outlook, it is comforting to us who live on this side of the water, far from what Hiram Johnson calls the "Old World imbroglios"—it is comforting, let us repeat, to know that our affairs are in safe hands, that neither want nor unhappiness can camp on our doorstep. We know that eventually the Republican majority in Congress will bring forth a tariff law that will so apportion the sunshine and rain as to make the Northwest an Atlantic of wheat, the Middle West a Pacific of corn, the South a sea of cotton.

Should 1923 turn out as bleak as Sir William forecasts it is not improbable that Europe will want to borrow our Republican party. And while it might be inconvenient to lend Europe our G. O. P. in 1923 it is not improbable, from the signs and omens, that we shall gladly do it in 1924.

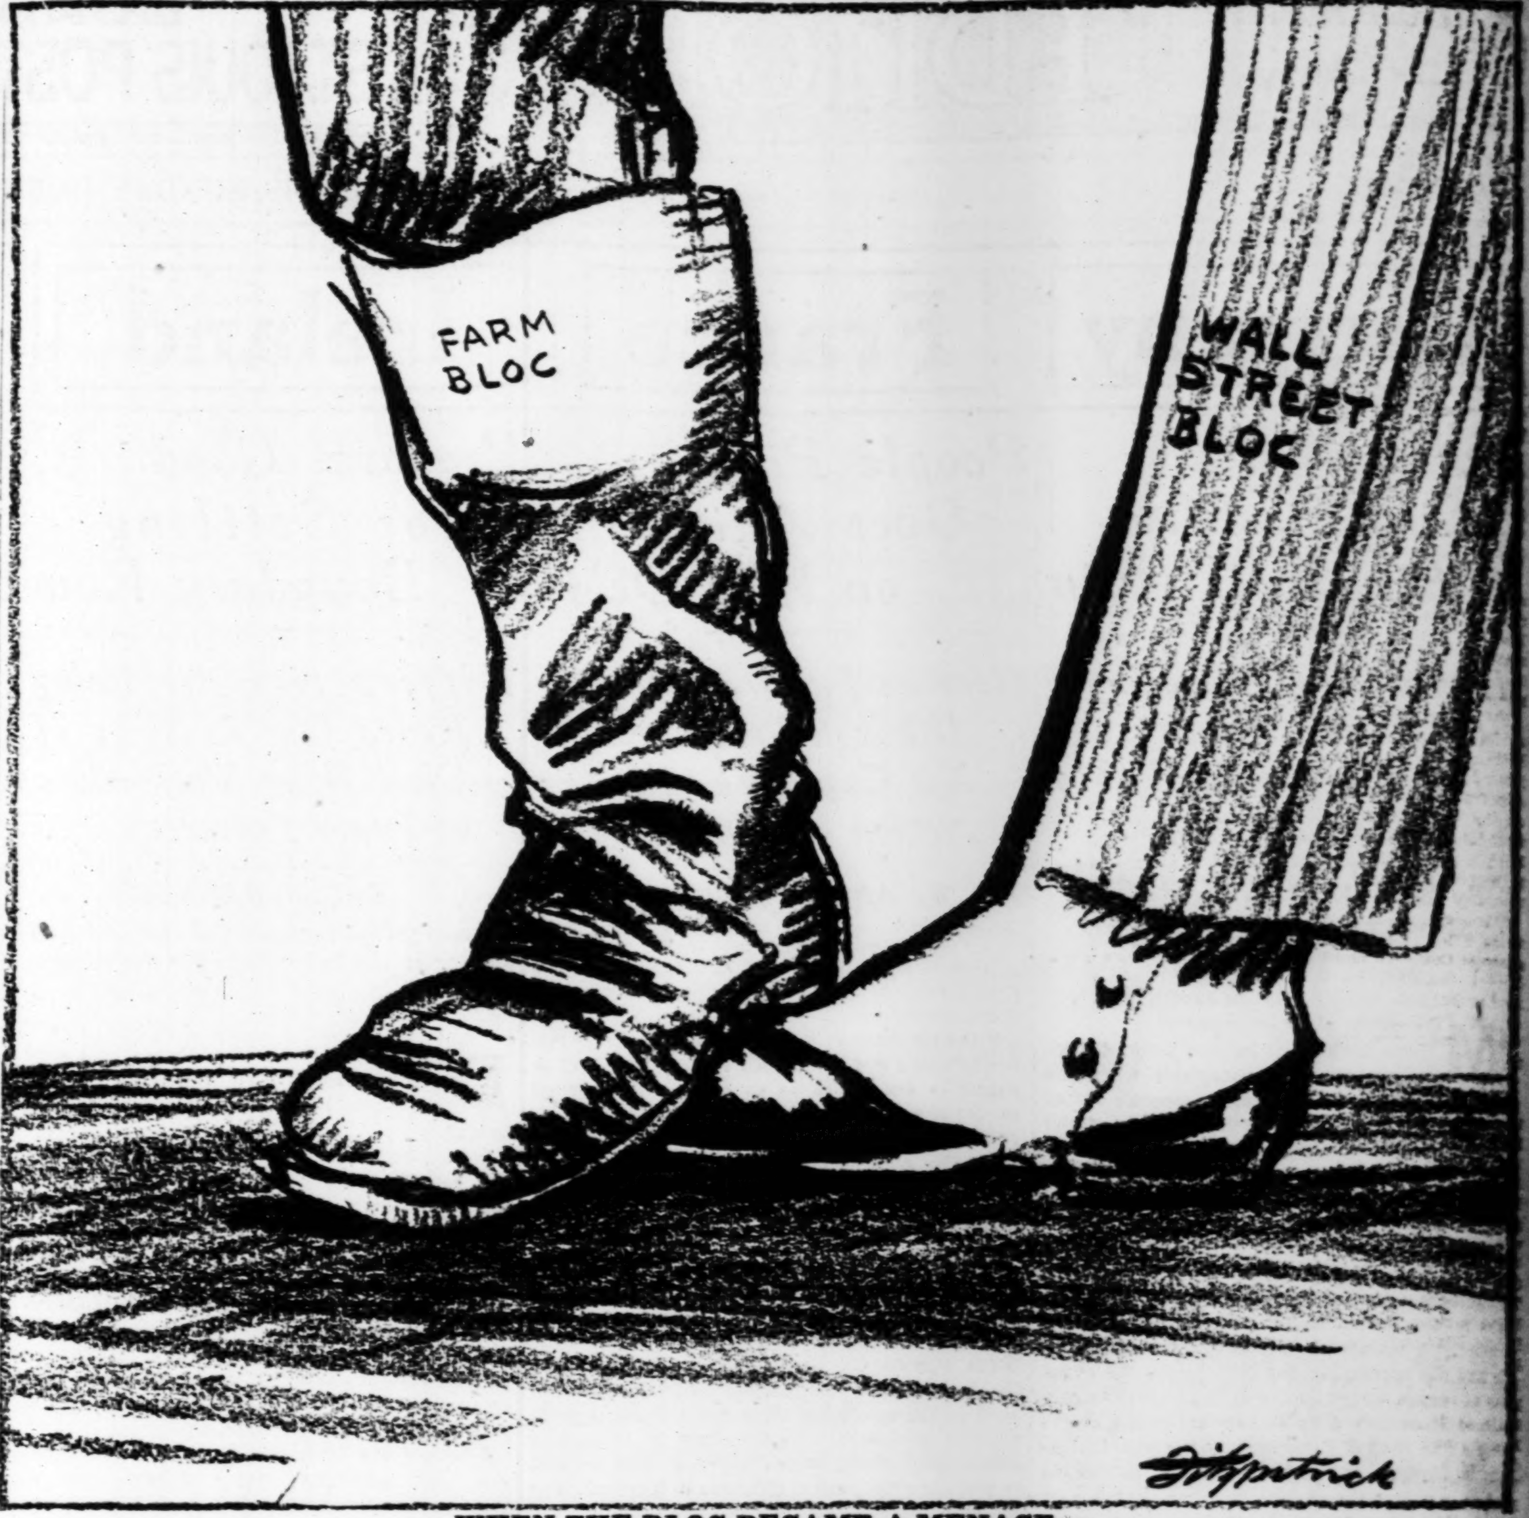
"TELL IT IN STATUES."

We learn from the London Telegraph that "Americans have a delightfully expressive phrase which one often observes over their florist shops, namely, 'Tell it in flowers.'" The writer is commenting upon Sir Charles Wakefield's offer to present statues of Edmund Burke and Lord Chatham to this country, and suggests, in that connection, that England adopt the paraphrase, "Tell it in statues."

Continuing, he calls attention to the almost total absence of British art, plastic and pictorial, in the American capital. He found Lafayette or Rochambeau on almost every corner in Washington. Even our late enemy was represented by the heroic figure of Frederick the Great in front of the Army War College. But Great Britain was chiefly remembered by various reproductions of the unflattering incident wherein Cornwallis turned his side arms over to Gen. Washington.

Sir Charles' offer is timely and generous. The choice of Burke and Chatham as subjects is felicitous and appropriate. Meantime let us divert ourselves with that characteristically native phrase, "Tell it in flowers." How American! It fairly reeks of the plains and forests. Oh, Albion! Oh, fancy!



WHEN THE BLOC BECAME A MENACE.

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
By Clark McAdams

KIPLING said he would rather have written "Tom Sawyer" than all his own books. One day this past week Just a Minute was in Hannibal, Mo., where Mark Twain spent his boyhood. There is on the hill above town a monument built by the State to this most celebrated of Missourians; and a sign "Mark Twain's Home" beckons the tourist in one of the streets. This latter is a small frame house presented to Hannibal by one of her citizens. It lacks the traditional ruggedness and picturesqueness of most of the humble beginnings of our great men, and suggests a Sears & Roebuck knockdown of an earlier and simpler period.

Nevertheless, it is a shrine. If it handicapped Mark, there is no proof of it. They tell me that more and more people come there to see it, to ask questions about the characters in "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn," to visit Mark Twain's cave and to climb to the point where the bronze effigy of the man who made Hannibal famous looks out upon the theater of such a comedy of boyhood as no one else ever wrote. Nobody complains of its unlikeness to the Grant cabin and other pillars of the American legend.

The story of Hannibal and Mark Twain is unusual. They entertained for one another the greatest affection. Not many men who have won fame have regarded their boyhood homes with affection, nor have those places often so regarded them. Usually the great man feels that he wasn't appreciated by his own people, and his own people retaliate by believing themselves held in contempt. If you get into this you probe some of the deeps of human nature, and down there many a stone has been bitterly cast. Did not Jesus say that a prophet is not without honor save in his own country and in his own house?

It was not so with Hannibal and Mark Twain. Mark was taken there from his birthplace at Florida, Mo., 36 miles west, when he was only 3 years old, and he remained there until he went on the river as a cub pilot at the age of 16. He always loved Hannibal, and on the occasions when he went back to mingle with his old friends Hannibal expressed her pride in him as the old homes of few great men ever have done.

Can you imagine another occasion quite like that on which Mark Twain, with his old friends in Hannibal gathered about him, identified for them the originals of the characters in "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn"? That happened about the time of the St. Louis Fair, when Mark made his last visit to this part of the country. Hannibal is laughing still in the recollection of his humor, the way in which he plagued the people he had known since boyhood and the spirit of banter and affection which existed between them.

So the memory of Mark Twain is very dear to Hannibal. One feels that in going there, and when the roads are better and Hannibal is more accessible more people shall feel it. This is the finest thing about going there, as a matter of fact. The relation between Mark Twain and his home was just right. It would have surprised Jesus, who knew us better than we know ourselves. For here, for once anyway, the prophet was with honor in his own country and his own house.

Chicago's building boom is expected to start at once, following labor's acceptance of the Landis award. Our own building boom in St. Louis cannot get started because we have not learned that arbitration is the only way out of the deadlock in which we find ourselves. Chicago has had more experience than we have had, she bears more scars of combat, and she has paid more for the great deal she knows about it than we have paid for the little we know about it. We have just as good and as fair arbiters as Judge Landis, but we can never know who they are until we get to the place where they can serve. Our painters will take a reduction in wages, but since the painters cannot paint anything until somebody builds something to paint, one wonders if we aren't trying to back out of our impasse instead of working out the right way, as Chicago has done.

"—NEEDS NO ACCUSER."

An editor of a small newspaper in a prohibition town found his courage fast ebbing toward a point where it must presently fizzle out. In pre-Volstead days he had occasionally thought of a few jokes that had helped him to put his paper over. Now, also! nothing to inspire glad thoughts was to be had at any cost; even if he had the cost. In this contingency he did what many better men have done before, and, doubtless, will do again—he brewed a few gallons of plain hootch. That nothing should be left undone to complete the full development of its power, he placed the keg in which it was contained, in his woodshed, to "age". After two days' time he decided to sample the fruit of his labor. He found the keg in the woodshed; but the hootch "had went." The next issue of his paper contained a short notice:

FELLOW CITIZENS!

A keg of whisky, owned by the editor of this paper—and intended to be used for medicinal purposes only—was stolen from his woodshed. The gents who drank this whisky are known to the said editor—to the last man.

It is the intention of ye editor to appear on the streets of our city, on Saturday next. He shall be armed with a shotgun and a cornknife. When he chances to meet up with one or more of the thieves mentioned above, it is his purpose to visit mayhem on them; either with the said cornknife or the shotgun; events shall decide which. Those of our citizens who are in no wise guilty, are invited to be present and witness this summary ladling out of justice. Those who know themselves to be of the number wanted had better take to the tall timber.—Editor.

The following Saturday, according to his promise, the editor went forth armed with cutlery and shootlery; though he tramped the streets for three mortal hours, the only living being he saw was a cur dog.

Song in Winter.

O WINTER'S a widow, dressed in black,
With veils of gray, and her voice, alack,
That sweetly sang, assumes the tone
Of the harsh north-wind that makes loud moan.
And we see no more her flashing eyes
In freezing stream, nor somber skies.
But, ah, this Spring you will find, I fear,
How fickle the heart of the year.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

MUSCLE SHOALS.

From the Columbus Dispatch.

AFTER many months of preliminary negotiations, Mr. Ford's proposal for a long lease on the Muscle Shoals property of the United States Government is at last ready for approval or repection by Congress. Mr. Ford thinks that he sees in the property a fair profit for himself and those who shall follow him, together with an enoromus benefit to the agricultural and other industries of a large section of the country. Of course, Mr. Ford's other business interests are such that any general lift in the prosperity of the states grouped around the Muscle Shoals region will bring still other profits to him than those which will come from the Alabama plant itself. It is to be hoped that Congress will conciler the proposition solely on its apparent business merits. And one element in such a consideration must be the question of possible alternative. It is quite apparent that present opinion is adverse to going on with the project under Government ownership and operation. In war, Government operation of many things was an absolute necessity, because results had to be more swiftly secured than was possible through private agencies; but the enormous cost at which they were secured did not tend to popularize Government operation.

PRISON REFORM.

Frank Tannenbaum in Atlantic Weekly.

THE prison is a reflex. It mirrors our hardness, our weakness, our stupidity, our selfishness, our vengeance, our brutality, our hate—everything but love and forgiveness; everything but our understanding and sympathy, everything but our intelligence and scientific knowledge. Properly conceived, the prison should be our special means of redemption. It should be a healing ground for both the spirit and the body, where the unsocial should be socialized, the weak strengthened, the ignorant educated, the thwarted made to grow; where a kind of resetting takes place for the tasks of life, and where the strength to meet responsibility is returned to those who have lost it and awakened in those in whom it has remained dormant; a place where the joy of living and laboring is born anew. Crime is a consequence. It is not a cause. We are responsible for its existence.

CROP INSURANCE.

RICHARD SPILLANE, in Philadelphia Public Ledger.

THEODORE H. PRICE, in an open letter to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, suggests the establishment by the Government of crop insurance. He points out what the British and American Governments did in the war period to insure vessels and cargoes. Without this insurance commerce would have been extremely hazardous. Insurance, he explains, is true Socialism, distributing the losses of the few among the many without diminishing the incentive to private efforts. The farmer, more than any other business man, is compelled to take extreme risks against which he now cannot protect himself. Why, he asks, should he not be able to buy indemnity against crop losses as well as against the loss of his home or his barn by fire? The idea is already partially applied in the issuance of hail and rain insurance, but never has been developed broadly. While opposed to putting the Government in business, Mr. Price sees no reason why Washington should not establish a crop insurance bureau from which the farmer could buy policies that would indemnify him for his actual expenditures and from which, after a few years, the larger insurance companies could obtain data upon which to base rates. If he has done nothing else, Mr. Price has offered a suggestion worthy of earnest study. The farm today is the most speculative of major industries. To minimize the risk in any degree would be of great benefit, for if the farm does not prosper all other branches of industry are more or less affected.

Events in the Social World

Ball, Bridge and Tea Benefits to Obtain Money for Four Enterprises Occupy Principal Places on Social Calendar for February.

ALTHOUGH there are many social affairs scheduled for February probably those commanding the most prominence will be four benefit parties which have been planned as sources for raising money for as many worthy enterprises. The organizations sponsoring these parties have paid a great deal of attention to the arrangements of the programs.

The first one of these will be the ball to be given Friday night at the Hotel Statler by the Margaret A. E. McLure Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Particular interest and popularity attaches to this party because of its significance to what is known as the "Old Southern Set." The proceeds of the program will go toward maintaining the scholarship created by the chapter.

The St. Louis Art League will give its second annual bridge parties Saturday afternoon and evening at the Planters Hotel, to establish and maintain a tearoom, and to assist in the upkeep of the downtown art galleries.

The third affair is the bridge tea at the home of Mrs. I. D. Kelley, 35 Portland place, Feb. 18, given by the junior members of the Maryville Alumnae Association. The proceeds of this affair will go to a $35,000 fund the association is raising to build a gymnasium as a jubilee gift to the Sacred Heart convent at Maryville.

Plans are under way for an invitation bridge party to be given by a group of matrons at the home of Mrs. Robert Holmes, 34 Portland place, for the purpose of replacing the roof on the Protestant Orphans' Home, which was recently destroyed by fire.

Great-Granddaughter to Lead.

The ball Friday evening is the twenty-sixth annual affair of its kind to be given by the U. D. C., and is of particular interest to what is known as the old "Southern set." Miss Mary Denman Clark, great-granddaughter of the woman for whom the chapter was named, will lead the grand march, and Mrs. Zell Gibson Roe will be matron of honor. The list of maids includes the Misses Hazel Nelson, Margaret North, Annie Laurie Bloodworth, Katherine Starr, Elanor Purdon, Susie Wood, Mary Elizabeth Flynn, Marion Cornatzar, Dorothy Stewart, Florence Lohman, Edith LeGrand Jones, Justine Ottofy, Mildred and Florence Gibbons, Leticia Breck, Faye Salisbury, Edna Belle Flitcraft, Mildred Dickey, Mary Holden, Marie LeGear, Alice Blood, Genevieve Plummer, Nancy Warner, Mary Alice Murphy, Adelaide Cannon, Margaret McLean, Margaret Hagar, Louise Larrabee and Lucie Marston.

Mrs. Thomas F. Browne, chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, will open the ball with Seymour Stewart, chairman of the Floor Committee. The patronesses will include Mmes. Richard McCulloch, Robert Lund, C. G. Petrie, Shelby Curlee, W. T. Ferguson, W. H. Hudson, Waller Edwards, J. P. Higgins, Houston T. Force, John C. Roberts, H. S. Atkins, B. C. Bascom, J. U. Menteer, J. C. Crowdus, A. C. Meyer, C. A. Moreno, H. P. Hanley, L. M. Ottofy, E. T. Smith, Frank B. Coleman, C. S. Aehle, R. A. Byers, Hunter B. Nelson and T. L. Horn.

Other Parties Arranged For.

The Art League bridge party is being arranged by a committee made up of Mmes. C. P. Headley, Horace Rumsey, Morris Skrainka, H. H. Wagoner, E. M. Kerr and Edward N. Beach.

At the Maryville Alumnae bridge, 140 tables have been reserved, with a corresponding number of prizes. The committee, which hopes to raise $1000 in this manner, consists of Mrs. Maurice Lonsway as chairman, assisted by Miss Louisita Moser, treasurer; Miss Katherine McTague, refreshments; Miss Alice Giraldin, printing of tickets; Mrs. Bernard McMahon, assisted by Miss Juliette Reyburn, in charge of the prizes, and Mmes. Francis Curlee, Charles O'Neil; I. D. Kelley, Con P. Curran Jr., John Farrelly, Edgar Moser, the Misses Dorothy McBridge, Elizabeth Smith, Elizabeth Benoist, Lenore Cahill, Lucille and Marjorie Cornet, Damaris McBeth, Marie Baker, Frances Clover, Anne Hunt, Annie Laurie Bloodworth, Rose and Ruth Muckerman, Miriam McMahon, Mildred Hadley, Celeste Michel, Miriam and Alice Darst, Elise and Olivia Harbaugh.

Tickets may be obtained from Miss Louisita Moser, 3725 Lindell boulevard.

Of equal interest to society, although not as large, is the party to be given at the home of Mrs. Holmes. There will be 40 tables for cards, and punch will be served in the fountain room during the afternoon. The following are sponsoring the affair: Mrs. Henry Boeckeler, in charge of tables, and Mmes. Alden Little, Howard Holmes, Clinton Whittemore, Albert T. Terry, James Ford, Ingram Boyd and James T. Caradine.

One of the important weddings of the season was that of Miss Elizabeth Holliday, daughter of Mrs. Joseph G. Holliday, 6249 Cates avenue, and Charles Lucas, which took place at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles E. Bascom, 52 Portland place. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Gilfillan of the New Cathedral before a bower of Easter lilies and palms which was built before the French doors in the dining room of the Bascom home. A reception for several hundred guests followed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Bascom as matron of honor, and her other attendants were Mrs. John Hart, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Stuart M. Butler, Miss Eleanor Stanard and Miss Roberta Lewis. Morton Lucas was his brother's best man, and the groomsmen were John Keehan, Theodore Fowler, Frederick H. Coester and Taylor Bryan, Elizabeth and Marie Louise Coester, nieces of the bride, were the flower girls.

The bride was educated at Mary Institute and served as a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball in the year of her debut. She is a member of the Junior League.

Mr. Lucas is the son of Mrs. J. B. C. Lucas of 4543 Forest Park boulevard. He is a graduate of St. Louis University and served as a Lieutenant in the army during the war. He is a member of the University and Racquet clubs.

After a honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Lucas will be at home at 6837 Kingsbury boulevard.

Added to the list of interesting mid-winter weddings is that of Miss Mildred King Smith, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Franklin Smith of 5535 Waterman avenue, who became the bride last evening of Archibald Chester Loud. The ceremony was performed at St. John's Methodist-Episcopal Church, South, by the bride's father, assisted by Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, in the presence of several hundred guests. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. A. Mansfield Kidder of New York, as matron of honor, and her other attendants were Miss Jessie Ault of Kansas City, and Mrs. T. Granville Rutledge. Harold L. Loud served his brother as best man and the groomsmen were August Loud, Douglas Allen, A. Mansfield Kidder and Frederick Herman. The bride's niece, Lucy Emily Kidder, was flower girl.

The chancel of the church was banked with ferns and palms with clusters of Easter lilies at either side.

The bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her away. She was gowned in ivory Callot satin and pearl-embroidered tulle, made on long Grecian lines. The square draperies of the skirt falling in points were caught in folds to the left side with an elaborate pendant of pearls and crystals, and revealing at the hem an under slip of French thread lace. The longwaisted blouse was embroidered with pearls in a chrysanthemum design and the Jenny sleeves of the same material extended gracefully to the finger tips. A satin court train lined with silver cloth and draped from either shoulder, was five yards in length, and was weighted with orange blossoms. The tulle bridal veil which swept to the end of the long train was held to her coiffure with a coronet of imported rose point lace and orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

The attendants were gowned alike in ecru Chantilly lace over chiffon. The bodices were bloused at the lowered waist line, and the lace of the skirts was cut in squares forming points reaching to the floor. The girdles on the gowns, each of a different color, Mrs. Kidder's of blue, Mrs. Rutledge's of orchid and Miss Ault's of pink, were finished with bows, with the loops fastened high on the bodices and the ends forming trains. The bouquets were made in Marie Antoinette style, set in filmy tulle, the matron of honor carrying Ophelia roses, and the other attendants sunset roses. The flower girl wore a frock of white lace and carried a French basket of pink roses.

The bride's mother was gowned in orchid chiffon velvet made on directoire lines, with a clinging draped skirt and the bodice trimmed with deep crystal fringe. There was a garniture of crystals at the side of the skirt reaching to the floor and the same trimming adorned the long tulle sleeves. A long court train lined with silver cloth was hung from the shoulders and she wore a corsage of orchids and violets.

Mrs. Loud was gowned in soft gray and wore orchids and two-toned sweet peas.

A reception at the St. Louis Woman's Club followed the ceremony. The bridal party, with Mr. and Mrs. Loud and Dr. and Mrs. Smith, received in a bower of flowers and palms built against the mirror in the drawing-room. Assisting were former Gov. and Mrs. Lon V. Stephens, former Senator and Mrs. Xenophen R. Wilfley, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Calfee and Mr. and Mrs. George Radford.

The bride was educated at the Margaret Allen School in Birmingham, Ala., Lenox Hall and Washington University, where she is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. Mr. Loud is an alumnus of Columbia University in New York and a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

After a honeymoon trip in California Mr. and Mrs. Loud will be at home with Dr. and Mrs. Smith until their apartment is ready for occupancy.

An engagement of interest in St. Louis, announced in New York today, is that of Miss Katherine Terry Thornton, daughter of Mrs. Dessie McDonald Russell of 25 Fifth avenue, and Francis Winslow Willett. Miss Thornton is the descendant of two prominent Southern families. Her maternal grandfather is the Rev. James Angus McDonald, D. D., retired, and her father was the late Charles Fitzhugh Thornton of Austin, Tex., son of Judge Paul Fitzhugh Thornton of Nevada, Mo. She is a graduate of Miss Merriman's School for Girls, in Oakland, Cal., and has attended the University of Texas, completing her education at the Gardner School in New York. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

Mr. Willett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Willett of Norwood, Mass. He is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1920, and a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity. During the war he served overseas as a Lieutenant in the Chemical Warfare Service.

The wedding will take place at the Grace Church in New York the latter part of June.

The prospective bride and her family made their home in St. Louis for two years, and have visited here several times as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Edwards, 5979 Enright avenue.

One of the notable weddings of the season in Fort Smith, Ark., and of interest in St. Louis, was the wedding Wednesday of Miss Dorothy Read, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Read, and Wendel A. Robertson. The ceremony took place at 8:30 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. William Wirth Harrison, pastor, officiating. He was assisted by the Rev. Malcolm W. Lockhart, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church. Miss Betty Robertson, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Elizabeth Mounton, Julia Albers, Fannie Echols and Mary Martin.

William S. Shadrach was best man. The ushers were Cecil Warner, Sam Wood, William Martin Eads and William Spear.

The bride wore an imported gown of ivory chiffon embroidered in irredescent beads. The bodice was made decollete and sleeveless. The skirt was made with panels which fell below the hem and her veil, which was of net bordered with old point lace, formed the train. She wore the bridegroom's gift, a platinum bracelet set in diamonds, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and bride's roses. The attendants were gowned alike, in orchid chiffon and their bouquets were pink sweet peas and snapdragons.

Mr. Robertson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Scott Robertson and was Week's Calendar in Capital Virtually Abandoned Because of Theater Tragedy Which Left City in Mourning.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The Missourians in Washington, many of them who have lived here for many years, joined in the wave of sorrow that swept over the national capital following the Knickerbocker Theater disaster, in which 98 persons lost their lives. The social calendar was virtually abandoned for the week because of the accident, which reached down into every stratum in the capital and took its toll of victims.

The only Missouri victim was a Missourian by adoption only, Joseph Wade Beal, son of a veteran newspaper man of the capital, who had lived in St. Louis. The young man, who was a violinist of promise and was a member of the Knickerbocker orchestra, had been married only three days when he was killed.

The diplomatic corps was affected by the death of the brilliant Signora Feraud, sister of the Guatemalan Minister; the President's official family suffered a loss in Assistant Postmaster-General Shaughnessy, and the army several of its officers, including Col. Charles Tucker, formerly of Kansas.

Lead Taken by Senators' Wives.

Mrs. Reed, wife of Senator Reed, and Mrs. Selden Spencer, wife of Senator Spencer, were among the first of the senatorial women to announce that they would not be at home as usual on Thursday, out of respect to the dead.

Mrs. John B. Henderson, wife of the former Senator from Missouri, had invitations out for a dinner and found it impossible to cancel it. Among her guests were the Ambassador from Brazil, Mr. Alencar; the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Bryn, Mr. and Mrs. George T. Marye, Representative and Mrs. Alanson Houghton, Representative and Mrs. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. William Eric Fowler, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Mrs. Charles F. Foulke, Mrs. Theodore Boynton, Baron de Vose and John B. Henderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Coles, who are frequent visitors in St. Louis, will entertain at dinner before the Southern Relief ball Monday night.

Princess Cantacuzene, great-granddaughter of President Grant, who is head of the American Society for the Russian Relief, presented Mrs. Harding with a tea cloth and doily made by Russian refugees in Poland, on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long entertained at a dinner and dance last week, but have canceled all other social engagements during the next 10 days on account of the Knickerbocker disaster.

Portrait of Champ Clark.

A center of interest for all visiting Missourians to the capital is the splendid portrait of Champ Clark, which has been placed in the marble lobby for members, back of the House of Representatives chamber. The portrait is by a well-known artist who was entrusted with the work during the lifetime of the late Speaker, and has succeeded in presenting the distinguished statesman in a very lifelike manner. He is pictured in one of his most characteristic poses, and as a little page boy expressed it, "Looks as if he might talk to you right out of the picture."

The former Speaker's keen interest in those page boys was ever demonstrated in many ways. Frequently he would speak of the opportunity it gave to a boy to learn of science of government at first hand, and he was fond of illustrating his remarks with stories of the page boys in Congress who had later become statesmen and legislators in the very chambers where their boyish duties were cast.

Miss Elizabeth M. Anderson of St. Louis, who is in Government service in Washington, has been made a member of the Plaza Council of the Government Hotels for Women. Miss Anderson will represent the Missouri girls in the council. A special reception will be given for them in the Administration Building No. 2 next Thursday night when prominent members of the Missouri delegation in Congress will be present and make short addresses.

Date Canceled by Harding.

The first to move in canceling official engagements because of the theater tragedy, were President and Mrs. Harding, who regretted to the Ohio State Society banquet at which they were to have been honored guests on Monday night. The Congressional Club reception in honor of Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge was also canceled. The President and Mrs. Harding, however, did not cancel the official dinner on Thursday night for Chief Justice William Howard Taft, and the associate Justices of the United States Supreme Court. A notable company was gathered together for this event. Invitations were als, received during the week for the usual reception in honor of Congress at the White House on Feb. 9.

Mrs. C. C. Calhoun, well known here as the founder and organizer and the first president of the Women's National Foundation, has started the delighted innovation of informal after-dinner speaking at her exclusive little dinners. At a recent one, which was attended by a number of Senators and their wives, including Senators King and Sutherland, Col. John Temple Graves and other notables, brilliant impromptu after-dinner talks were given. Mrs. Calhoun, who is a cousin of the Earl of Mar and the possessor of the historic Claymore of Bonnie Prince Charles, was the only private personage on whom the Prince of Wales called during his recent visit to Washington.

Mrs. Andrew Carnegie was a visitor to Washington as the house guest of Senator and Mrs. Lawrence L. Phipps.

A Suit for Spring Is Quite the Thing. Buy Now and Save!

We might have held this sale a week or ten days ago. It would have been a big one, too, as sales go, even at that time. But we had planned for something far greater. Our purchases exceeded our usual sale requirements by hundreds of Suits. Our New York corps of buyers was instructed to exert even more than their usual care in the selection of every Suit chosen for this event. They were told to select Suits to meet a standard, not a price. Tomorrow, every woman who attends this sale will appreciate the efforts we made to make this our greatest sale of Suits. The co-operation received from America's leading manufacturers is a tribute to our buying power and prestige, and we doubt if Suits of the quality and beauty of these have ever been offered at so low a price.

Happiness in Every Step

if you wear Cantilever Shoes.

Have you said, "Every step is torture," when you walked in ordinary shoes that bind the foot and fail to provide the support which the arch needs?

A change to Cantilever Shoes will relieve your foot troubles.

There is room for the toes, and the natural inner sole line permits them to point straight ahead in their natural position. In a shoe that twists the foot to turn the toes outward all the weight falls on the weakest part of the arch and pain soon results. But in the Cantilever Shoe the weight is shared by the heel, the ball of the big toe and the outside of the foot, thus taking the usual unnatural strain off the arch.

The flexible shank of Cantilever Shoes bends with the movement of the muscles. The foot is not restrained by a metal appliance nor by a rigid sole, but is free to exercise and srengthen in walking. Using the muscles which surround the small bones of the arch prevents and corrects flat foot.

Cantilever Shoes are good looking, too.

WHITE LIGHT FROM OIL LAMPS NOW

Government Tests Prove New Light Beats Electric—Sensational Invention

A new lamp has recently been invented which burns common kerosene oil and produces a soft, white light said to be even better than electric or gas. Tests by the Government and leading universities prove this new light is superior to ten ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise, is simple and economical, requires no pumping up and has been approved by the Underwriters for insurance.

The inventor, J. W. Johnson, Room 222, 609 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill., is offering to send one of these new lamps on ten days' free trial, or even give one to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for particulars. Also ask him to explain his agency proposition.

SURVEY OF SOLDIER BONUS AGITATION AND PROBABLE COST

economic setback he received as a result of his service. In the words of Senator McCumber, the purpose is to give the former service man "a compensation that will more nearly approach that of the laborer who remained at home, secure from danger, and whose compensation increased from 200 to 300 per cent and, measured by the amount of labor actually performed, far beyond these figures."

Sentiment has figured in arguments on the floor of the House, but not in those presented by spokesmen of the legion. To say that the bill seeks for the former service men a gratuity, they hold, is to insult him. This is the view reflected in the McCumber report, which declared that in fairness both to the country and the soldier the word "bonus" should not be used in referring to it.

The amount sought for individuals under the bill is predicated in part on figures which show that the average savings bank accounts of those who stayed at home increased $400 during the soldiers' terms of service.

The American Legion denies the contention of some opponents of the bill that a large minority of the former service men are against it. Ninety-five per cent or more of the legion's membership of 1,250,000, it is asserted, want the bill passed. Attention is called to the fact that of the 11,000 posts of the legion none has voted against it. Resolutions indorsing the bill have been unanimously adopted at the three national conventions of the legion—at Minneapolis in 1919, Cleveland in 1920 and Kansas City in 1921. This position was reaffirmed at a meeting of the National Executive Committee of the legion at Indianapolis on Jan. 21 last.

Bonus Legislation in 19 States.

Not only the former soldiers, it is contended, but the people generally are in favor of adjusted compensation. In support of this, legion officers point to the fact that 19 states have adopted bonus legislation while virtually all have voted benefits of some kind. The bonus was adopted by referendum in 11 states, by majorities of from 2 to 1 to 8 to 1. Sentiment in favor of the bonus, the legion says, has steadily mounted throughout the whole country.

Against the report of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States opposing the bonus, legion workers started a backfire all over the country, with the result, it is said at Washington headquarters, that many local chambers have repudiated the action of the national body. Every local chamber in Iowa that has been heard from, it is said, has gone on record for the pending bill. Iowa is the home of the present national commander of the legion, Col. Hanford MacNider. The legion claims that in its statements about the bonus the National Chamber of Commerce gave an erroneous impression of its cost, by mixing up the cash feature with the paid-up insurance feature.

The legion points to what other countries have done for their former soldiers. Canada, for instance, gave her returned soldiers adjusted pay running, in the case of married men, as high as $600 a year; in addition, Canada allowed them $75 a month while awaiting employment.

The assertion has been made that the bonus bill, if passed, would be an entering wedge for other demands, which would eventuate in a general service pension. Replying to this, Daniel Steck, of Iowa, chairman of the Legislative Committee of the legion, told the House Ways and Means Committee the other day that the executive body of the legion had adopted a resolution declaring that the bill would be considered a "quit claim" from all non-disabled men.

Education Campaign Planned

The legion estimates that between 600,000 and 900,000 former soldiers are out of employment and in actual present need of assistance; almost every man who was with the colors, it says, suffered some economic loss compared with the stay-at-homes.

Steck told the Ways and Means Committee that he believed 50 per cent of the beneficiaries would elect the cash plan. This is the same proportion that Secretary Mellon used in figuring the probable cost of the bonus at $3,300,000,000. At a referendum among legionnaires in Illinois one-half said they would take cash.

If a man feels that he should not taken the bonus the legion invites him to put his share into a revolving fund which it purposes to establish after the passage of the bill. It expects to get in this way several million dollars, out of which it will lend money to needy or disabled veterans without security.

In answer to the criticism that the administration of the bonus will require a tremendous sum wholly apart from the amounts disbursed, the legion offers the Government the free aid of its 11,000 posts.

As soon as the bill has been passed the legion will begin an educational campaign designed to show service men that it is to their interest to elect some other plan than the cash. It is purposed in this campaign to send men to every city block and every country township to explain the bill to its beneficiaries.

"Payment of debts," said Commander MacNider the other day, "is always irksome, but that does not relieve the obligation of the debtor, and the debtor in this case, the nation that Mr. Mellon is supposed to be serving, wants the debt paid. The people want results and not objections. In addition, Mr. Mellon has taken no cognizance of the fact that the benefits of the bill will strengthen the economic condition of the country because it allows the beneficiaries to build homes, buy farms and farm machinery, train themselves for useful vocations, and in accepting paid-up insurance, make

Woman Seeks Her Brother

Mrs. Ivor Duncan of 300 Main street, Russellville, Ark., has written policewomen asking a search be made here for her brother, Glenn Fitzgerald. She said he wrote her some time ago that he came here to enlist in the army in January, 1917, but had been rejected at Jefferson Barracks, and said he intended to "try the navy." The navy records fail to reveal any trace of the boy here.

SURVEY OF SOLDIER BONUS AGITATION AND PROBABLE COST

themselves better and more contented citizens."

So much for the affirmative.

Objections to the Bill.

The objections to the bill are on purely financial grounds. As Secretary Mellon has shown, it can only be financed by an increase in taxation. Further, it is contended, the bill would increase the cost of living, seriously hamper the unprecedented refunding operations that the Government must shortly undertake in order to meet maturing obligations, tend to depress the price of Liberty Bonds, postpone vitally needed public improvements for years to come and generally disorganize the whole financial system.

The average veteran, it is asserted, would lose more by expansion of the tax system than he would gain by the bonus. Moreover, it is pointed out, the quarterly cash installments of $50 would do the average man no material service toward getting him established in life, but in many cases would be quickly dissipated without any beneficial results. Finally, the argument is made that the Government owes whatever it can spare not to the able-bodied, but to the disabled.

Col. Charles R. Forbes, director of the United States Veterans Bureau, is authority for the statement that the Government is now paying out more than $1,000,000 in cash daily, including Sunday, to ex-service men and their dependents. "The United States," says Forbes, "is doing more for its disabled veterans than any other country in the world, despite the fact that their losses were far heavier than ours."

Mellon's arguments, according to opponents of the bonus, are unanswerable. His view now is the same as when the bonus was first proposed—that is, briefly, that the consequences of the bill would be disastrous to the country.

Mellon's Showing.

Mellon shows, among other things:

1. That the 1922 budget estimates indicate a deficit of over $24,000,000 and for 1923 a deficit of over $167,000,000 without making any allowance for $50,000,000 requested by the United States Shipping Board for the settlement of claims, $7,000,000 to be spent for authorized Russian relief, $5,000,000 to be paid as the first installment under the treaty with Colombia, and a possible $50,000,000 as additional compensation to Government employes:

2. That at the same time the Government faces a heavy shrinkage in revenue receipts, due to business depression.

3. That in the fiscal year 1922 the Government will spend for the relief of disabled veterans about $450,000,000, or more than for any other one purpose except interest on the public debt.

4. That the gross public debt of the United States is about $23,500,000,000, of which about $6,500,000,000 falls due within the next 16 months.

5. That this debt offers complicated refunding problems, to say nothing of the problems involved in handling $2,200,000,000 of outstanding Treasury certificates and the $700,000,000 of War Savings Certificates.

And so on and so on. He piles fact on fact to show the difficulty of the financial situation facing the Treasury.

"In these circumstances," he says, "should Congress determine to adopt the policy of paying a soldiers' bonus, it would become necessary to impose general taxes on broad classes of articles or transactions in order to pay it. For such taxes, in their nature of wide application, much might be said as substitute for existing taxes, but the Treasury would hesitate to recommend them as additional taxes, except to meet some extraordinary purpose.

Question of More Taxes.

"Whatever additional taxes might be levied, provision for them would have to be made in the same bill with the bonus. The budget system is now firmly established, and the budget already submitted has pointed out the relation between receipts and expenditures for this year and next year. If the Congress decides to authorize large expenditures outside of the budget, it is fundamental that it should make simultaneous provision for the additional taxes necessary to meet them.

"It is also well to keep in mind that no indirect means of financing the bonus could make it any less an expense, that will have to be borne in the long run by the taxpayer. Thus it would be futile, as well as unwise, to attempt to provide for the bonus through the use of the principal or interest of the foreign obligations held by the United States or through the sale of any such obligations to the public. For the most part the foreign obligations are still in the form of demand obligations and it is impossible in the present state of international finance and in advance of funding arrangements to estimate what may be collected on them in the near future by way of principal or interest.

Government Obligations.

"The obligations are not in shape moreover, to sell to the public and to offer them to investors with the guaranty of this Government would seriously interfere with our own refunding operations, upset the security markets, and in the long run prove more expensive to this Government than would the sale of its own direct obligations. At the same time, it would enormously complicate the international situation and certainly embarrass the funding negotiations. Even if enough could be realized on the foreign debt in time to pay the bonus, it would accomplish nothing to set it aside for that purpose.

"As the law now stands and in justice to the millions of Liberty bond holders, the Government is bound to apply any principal payment by foreign Governments as well as any proceeds of sale to the retirement of outstanding Liberty bonds, about $10,000,000,000 of which were issued in the first instance to provide for the advances to foreign Governments.

"Interest collected on the foreign obligations should likewise go to provide for the interest on Liberty bonds, and it has been the Treasury's plan in the funding to adjust the dates and amounts of the interest payments as nearly as may be to the interest payments on our own bonds. In any event it is clear that if the proceeds of the foreign obligations should be applied to different purposes, the Government of the United States to that extent would have to provide for payment of the principal and interest of the Liberty bonds from other sources, which means that the people would have to pay taxes for this purpose that would otherwise be unnecessary. The plan to use the foreign obligations to pay a soldiers' bonus, therefore, would still leave the burden on the shoulders of the American taxpayers."

That is the case against the bonus.

SOME SANCTITY FOR THE HIP POCKET

Liquor Law Violators Reasonably Safe From Prosecution in St. Louis.

That old reliable hip pockets, originally designed as a gun-toting receptacle, but now devoted to concealment of the furtive flask, is reasonably safe from intrusion by the strong arm of the law, as was made clear yesterday by John C. Dyott, Special Assistant United States Attorney-General in charge of prohibition law prosecutions in St. Louis.

Dyott said he was not disposed to prosecute so-called hip-pocket violators taken in recent raids on cafes, the most spectacular of which was that on the Alamac Hotel Thursday night, when 109 persons were arrested.

Statement by Prosecutor.

In a dictated statement Dyott made it clear that at the present the principal effort is being made to enforce the law against those who make and sell whisky and not against individuals who carry a small quantity in their hip pockets, although under strict construction of the law, flask carriers might be prosecuted. His statement follows:

"The bare statement that I do not intend to prosecute hip-pocket cases is misleading and in error. I will prosecute violations whether of the hip-pocket or otherwise, but the facts must conform to the rulings of our courts. Persons who have not been placed under arrest prior to search or for whom a warrant has not first been issued are not issued against by us.

Prosecution Is Possible.

"There is a lawful way to get at these cases and I shall try to keep within those lines, but persons making a practice of hip-pocket violations may find themselves embarrassed, for when the cases are properly made we shall prosecute. Our courts are already badly congested and the persons who commercialize the whisky business are the violators receiving our first attention.

"But it may be well for persons who are buying whisky by the case from bootleggers not to forget that the purchaser is as guilty as the seller, and because a man is able to pay $150 per case for Scotch, he is not different from the fellow who can buy only a half a pint of hooch at a time. Hip-pocket transportation is the same, regardless of the price of the clothes. Men by respecting the law will save all hands from embarrassment, and keep their morning's mornings and their nightcaps on their bed posts."

Margot Asquith Still Exploding T. N. T. Bombs

She Has Plucked Fine Crop of Feathers During First Week in U. S. and Does Not Care a Tuppence How Her Comments Are Received.

By JANE COMPTON.

Special Dispatch to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1922.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Did you ever drop a handful of T. N. T. into a chicken yard? Margot Asquith has been in the United States less than a week and for several days now the feathers have been flying. Of course, Margot was exhausted after the ocean trip. Normally she might have accomplished more. But, all things considered, her week's collection of feathers was adequate.

If women are the equal of men, why haven't they created tall buildings and painted pictures? That got the feminists.

"A woman in politics is a mistake," that got the suffragists.

"Who is Carrie Chapman Catt? that got the rest of the suffragists.

"Who is Jane Addams?" that got the champions of Hull House.

"Distinguished American women? Who are they?" that got everybody.

The T. N. T. having done its work, Margot sat with a whirlwind of metaphorical feathers all around her and said the interesting thing about this country was its railroad stations. Calmly she sat, a surprisingly tiny figure in gray, pigskin cigarette case at elbow, cigarette in one long, thin hand—and observed that for cleanliness, spaciousness and general utility the American railroad station was the most remarkable thing she had seen yet. Better than the tall buildings. Better than Broadway. Who but Margot would have said it?

Calm Only Temporary.

Her calm, however, was the calm of T. N. T. not for the moment in action. And it was calm of the mind, not of the body. Margot is the most energetic woman in the world. Her vitality is enormous—hasn't she broken every bone riding to hounds; and helped steer a Premier through wartime policies; and married off three daughters, one to a Prince, and written the frankest and most discussed memoirs of two decades; and here she comes, alert as ever, to smile on us one moment and poke her finger in our eye the next. Springing up with a swift "I can't stay still," she paced back and forth, stopping before the pictures of her three children and her step-daughter, flicking a cigarette ash into the tray, gesticulating with a wide, graceful sweep of the arm.

As her hazel eyes gleamed with sardonic mirth at this and that and her mouth twisted down into its peculiar but fascinating smile, you thought of the time at a dinner party when King Edward called: "Come, take this chair beside me, dragon fly," and when she answered blithely: "Of course, I will, Tummies," and smote him amidships with a spoon.

"Divorce—yes," she was saying in her interesting voice, cigarette poised to point an epigram: "In your country a person may cross from one state to another and marry at every crossing." She shook her head over that, for as a wife and mother Margot is the tenderest and most fiercely affectionate of human kind. "Your men are very capable," she proceeded. "I mean to say, I like them so much better than your women. American women are spoiled—their men did it, of course. American men are better sports about everything. But men are so much broader than women, aren't they? And women aren't as honorable as men, are they?"

Bing! Another handful of feathers. Just as easy!

You slid away from the subject. American manners, now.

"Wherever Americans got the reputations of not being polite I can't understand," she answered. "I have been shopping and the saleswomen are so attentive, yet not insistent. People are considerate. In England people are polite if you attract their notice, but generally they just don't notice you. Progressive? Of course, you Americans are progressive. Perhaps your progress is even in advance of your civilization?"

Did another feather float gently thereabouts?

Firmly you got back to the subject of politeness. "Oh, my audience wasn't discourteous." This, even though cries of "Louder!" interrupted the first lecture and one woman walked out in the midst of it, tossing disdainful remarks over her shoulder.

Audience Merely Bored.

"She was just being natural. I like people to be natural. And the audience was merely bored. I don't blame them. I was bored myself, but I couldn't leave."

Anyone, added Margot, pacing to and fro across the room, ought to have had more sense than to tell a fox-hunting anecdote to a New York audience. "New Yorkers don't hunt. Silly of me, wasn't it?"

Very likely it was, because the hero of the fox-hunting anecdote was a horse named Dandelion, which proved to have a powerful kick, anyway, conversation reached prohibition. Margot admitted it was actually true that she favored prohibition—such a splendid experiment—and then repeated her opinion that prohibition ought not to exclude light wines. This is striking because it is the only subject upon which she takes both sides, or if you like, neither side.

In English society, which she has rocked with amusement and horror even since days when she used to flirt with guards on passing trains, Margot is known as a "wild one." She says herself that "conventions mean nothing," and that public opinion means exactly the same. So it is startling to have her declare that what people need today is more religion. "They lack reverence." For the rest of us, however, a daring tongue and an all too understanding mind, "I'm truthful, irirtable, punctual, nervous," she has said to herself; "but not dull, vain or touchy." It makes you chuckle, and perhaps frown. If you chuckle all the time or frown all the time at her two-edged brilliance, the fault is your own. The invariable frown is the more stupid.

Between you and me—Margot doesn't care a tuppence.

MAN FATALLY WOUNDED AT "MOONSHINE" PARTY AT STILL

Rescued From River Where He Had Been Thrown but Later Died.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEBANON, Mo., Feb. 4.—Ace Berry, about 40 years old, was killed in the eastern edge of Dallas County, about 25 miles from here, Wednesday night.

The killing occurred at a place where it is said there was a still located and several persons were congregated there and most of them were drinking the "moonshine" and they got into a fight and Berry was beaten over the head and dragged to the Niangua River, only a few steps away, and thrown into the water. A boy, whose name has not been learned and who was unconscious from the effects of the liquor, revived and found himself all alone and, after making an investigation, found a bloody trail which he followed to the river. There he found Berry partially in the water but still alive. Not being able to rescue him he called the nearest neighbors and he was taken to his home where he died soon after.

No arrests have been made as yet.

Song Service at St. Peter's.

The choir of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue, will give its regular monthly song service at 4:30 p. m. today.

C. L. DEVOY VACATES CATES AV. HOMESTEAD

Occupant Who Resisted Removal Since July Said to Have Moved "by Agreement."

Charles L. Devoy, who has been resisting removal from the Edward Devoy homestead at 5837 Cates avenue, has vacated, Sheriff Mohrstadt reported yesterday. The furniture has been moved to storage and the house can now be rented.

Devoy has been holding possession while he and two brothers have been contesting the will of their father, seeking to dispossess their sister, Mrs. Mary Estelle Cartwright, chief beneficiary. Last July he was ordered by the court to vacate. He stayed on and was cited for contempt and the Sheriff was ordered to evict him and take him into custody. Devoy filed a habeas corpus proceeding in the Court of Appeals. It was decided against him and he appealed to the Supreme Court. In the meantime a citation was asked against the Sheriff for failure to carry out the court's order. His excuse was the habeas corpus proceeding and appeal.

Sheriff Mohrstadt says Devoy moved out by agreement. This will terminate the expense of $5 a day for a watchman, which has been charged to the estate for the last nine months.

COMMUNITY COUNCIL ELECTION

At its organization meeting Friday afternoon the children's department of the Community Council elected Mrs. E. H. Steedman of 5394 Waterman avenue as chairman. Representatives from more than 30 organizations interested in child welfare work were present.

The program for the year as outlined by the department members will include a study of standards and methods of children's institutions, and the plan of working out closer co-operation between these agencies and to a study of illegitimacy in St. Louis.

BENEFIT FOR ART GALLERIES

Students of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, local artists and the St. Louis Art League will co-operate in a Greenwich Village celebration for the benefit of the league's downtown art galleries next Saturday afternoon and evening. It will consist of three distinct features. The students will maintain a tearoom in the south gallery, where tea and light refreshments and homemade candy will be sold at the "Sign of the Purple Parrot" from 3 p. m until midnight.

The Art League will sponsor two bridge whist parties, afternoon and evening. The artists have co-operated by painting and donating pictures which will be disposed of at the bridge parties. No admission will be charged to the tearoom. Reservations may be made for the bridge parties at the galleries or through any member of the league.

REED TO ANNOUNCE ELECTION PLANS SOON

Missouri Senator in St. Louis Conferring With Political Friends.

United States Senator Reed, who is in St. Louis conferring with local and State Democratic party leaders, said yesterday he had not decided whether he would be a candidate for re-election, but would shortly make announcement as to his intentions. He said private business on this trip would engage about as much of his attention as his political fences, and that after meeting friends here for a few days he would go to Kansas City and attend to some personal matters.

In Washington Reed's visit to Missouri is looked on as a trip to determine whether he shall decide to oppose Breckinridge Long for the Democratic nomination in the August primary.

It is taken for granted among Missourians in Washington that if Reed does not run, Congressman Harry Hawes of St. Louis will make the race. Hawes has not publicly committed himself, but he is known to be watching developments. Hawes would not be a candidate should Reed decide to run.

Within the last few weeks Hawes and former Gov. Folk, who is practicing law in Washington, have been given information about the situation in Missouri, and it is known that Folk does not intend to enter the race.

What Hawes Has Heard.

Hawes has been told that if Reed runs against Long the fight will tear the party wide open and make Republican success virtually certain. Hawes' friends say he would have a better opportunity of uniting the party against the Republican candidate than would either Reed or Long.

The Republicans would like to see Reed and Long fight it out, it is being said at Washington, believing that their nominee would be accordingly strengthened.

Former Gov Gardner also has been mentioned as likely senatorial material for the Democrats, but no one at Washington professes to have any knowledge of his intentions.

Reed on Political Situation.

Discussing the national political situation, Senator Reed said the party in power had wasted a year in bungling vital legislation and to a great extent had jeopardized our war-time loans to foreign Governments.

"Unless the administration greatly improves its performances," said Senator Reed, "the next election will be a political revolution. It started to pass a bonus bill for the soldiers, and within a few weeks withdrew it and put it in cold storage where it has lain ever since.

"It declared it would reform the tariff, but the tariff bill was pushed in the background after a few months of consideration. Then the revenue bill was brought forward, and as submitted to Congress was a bold attempt to reduce the taxes of the very rich without granting any substantial reduction to the people of moderate means. After a prolonged debate this bill was purged of only some of its iniquities and then only over the protest of the party machine.

"Most of the administration's time has been employed in trying to force through a bill which, as introduced, gave the Secretary of the Treasury the unlimited power to do anything he wished with our foreign loans. He could have extended them for any length of time, at any rate of interest and on any kind of security. He could have accepted for the indebtedness of Great Britain and France the bonds of Germany.

Secretary's Power as to Loans.

"This, I believe, was part of the plan. I am convinced that Great Britain and France wanted us to become creditors of Germany, first, to reduce their own indebtedness, but chiefly, because if they knew we would accept a large amount of German bonds, they could then threaten Germany dire punishment if she failed to meet her obligations, and could insist that we unite with them in collection of their debts.

"Nearly a year has been lost in an effort to pass a bill containing these unlimited and unjustifiable powers, and nearly $500,000,000 of interest on our loans has accrued in the meantime.

"Congress stood willing to give any necessary power to the Secretary of the Treasury to settle these loans within reasonable limitations. Indeed, the power already exists to settle every loan, except, perhaps, the matter of deferred interest.

"As a rsult of these tactics the whole of our foreign indebtedness has been jeopardized. It is as bungling and indefensible a piece of business as I have ever seen. What is back of it I am unable to say, but it cannot be pleasing to the American people.

"These occurrences seriously affect the whole American people, who may be depended upon to express themselves forcibly when election time comes around."

SONS OF REVOLUTION BANQUET

Affair Will Be Held Feb. 22.—Special Church Services Feb. 19.

Plans for the annual banquet of the Missouri Society and St. Louis Chapter of the Sons of the Revolution, to be held Feb. 22 at Hotel Statler, were made at a meeting last week of the officers of the St. Louis chapter, of which H. J. Pettingill is president. Gov. and Mrs. Hyde and Mayor and Mrs. Kiel will be invited to attend the banquet.

At the annual church services commemorating the birth of George Washington, to be held Sunday, Feb. 19, at the Second Presbyterian Church, the Rev. John W. MacIvor and the Rt. Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle will conduct a special service for the Sons of the Revolution.

COMPLICATED MOTOR LAWS ARE EXPLAINED

Legal Department of Automobile Club Is Kept Busy Answering Inquiries of Owners.

The new Missouri motor vehicle law has proved somewhat of a Chinese puzzle to the motorists for whose guidance it was drawn, according to the legal department of the Automobile Club of Missouri. Since the code went into effect the legal department has been kept busy answering queries made in person, over the telephone or by mail.

Counsel for the club estimated that each driver who does not understand the vehicle law, violates its provisions from 10 to 20 times in a day's riding.

The most baffling of the law's 31 sections appears to be Section 21, defining the rules of the road. The most commonly used signals are those made in extending the left arm. The club has experienced great difficulty in explaining to its membership that the arm extended horizontally means "I am about to stop," and not "I am about to turn to the left."

Signals Explained.

To indicate a left turn the code requires that the arm be thrust outward and downward at an angle of 45 degrees. Thrust upward and outward at an angle of 45 degrees it means, "I am about to turn to the right." For backing up the law specifies only that ample warning, either visible or audible, shall be given.

The part of the section having to do with lights specifies that from half an hour after sunset until half an hour before sunrise, all motor vehicles shall carry two white lights at the front and at least one red on the rear.

These provisions are not to be construed as barring such white lights on the rear as are necessary for the illumination of the number plate. The law requires that they must not be of intensity enough to conceal the number or to blind drivers following.

Muffler Cutouts Barred.

That paragraph dealing with horns and whistles prohibits their use for anything other than warning. Muffler cutouts cannot be used at any time.

When the operator cannot see behind him, his machine must be equipped with a mirror to reflect traffic approaching from the rear. White cloth or paper must be suspended from tow lines. Both towing vehicles and that being towed must be equipped with lights at night.

Swinging aboard a moving motor vehicle and holding onto it while riding a bicycle are prohibited by the code.

Any motorist who drops or throws an object from his machine is required by the law to stop and clear the highway of the refuse. Cars must not be left unattended on the highways unless the motor has been stopped and the electric current turned off.

Passing another vehicle proceeding in the same direction must be done to the left of the vehicle to be passed if traffic approaching from the other direction permits it. The section provides that no passing from the rear shall be attempted on a curve or at the summit of a hill. The driver wishing to pass must sound his signal and the driver to be passed must comply by moving as far to the right as he can.

In moving from private property or an alley into a line of vehicles proceeding along a highway, the automobile horn or whistle must be sounded.

All cars that do not permit their drivers to display the arm signals must be equipped with electrical or mechanical signaling devices in municipalities of more than 10,000 population, but pending final court decision, this section is not being enforced.

The right of way is given to a driver approaching an intersection from the right.

Must Stop for Street Cars.

Motor vehicles must be stopped no fewer than five feet from the rear of a street car that has halted to take on or discharge passengers, unless there are safety zones or a space of eight feet clearance at the stopping point. Through safety zones the motor car must proceed slowly and cautiously. Where an automobile has been compelled to stop for a trolley car, it must not again start until the street car is in motion.

Another paragraph requires that a certificate of ownership identify each motor car in the State. They must be filled in either by the dealer, when the car purchased is new, or by the vendor, when it is bought second hand. If the seller cannot be found or has died, the owner must supply his name so it may be compared with the files of the Secretary of State's office. These blanks are furnished by that office.

The new vehicle law differs from the old in that when a car changes hands, the original owner keeps the license plate. It cannot be transferred to the buyer, as was done in the past.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Hon. Richard and Mrs. Norton have sailed for New York where the former's younger sister, Hon. Catherine Norton, is passing the winter with their American relatives. Hon. TRY THIS IF YOU HAVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

NEW METHOD OF PASSING ON BAIL BONDS ADOPTED

Judges of Criminal Courts Agree on Card Index System to Curb Activities of Professionals.

MUST QUALIFY IN EACH INDIVIDUAL CASE

Unethical Practices or Exaction of Extortionate Fees Hereafter to Result in Disqualification.

Professional bondsmen, who in the past have been accorded the greatest latitude in their operations in the Circuit Court for Criminal Causes and the Court of Criminal Correction, will be called to strict accounting, beginning tomorrow, under a set of rules and regulations agreed upon yesterday by the five Judges of these courts.

No more loose methods will be tolerated in qualifying bondsmen and determining their financial responsibility, for the new system will have besides the blanks for qualification a card index setting forth a detailed statement of the exact status of each bondsman in relation to his ability to secure the interests of the State.

Bondsmen hitherto have always been required to qualify after a fashion as surety on bail bonds, but there has never been a comprehensive and binding system that would prevent them from being surety on bonds amounting in sum to more than a reasonable excess of their ability to pay.

Card Index to Be Kept.

Under the new system a bondsman must qualify satisfactorily with each application for a bond, and each bond on which he is surety will be set down in the card index and totaled against the amount of his financial responsibility. When this has been exceeded by exactly 100 per cent, he must not go on any more bonds until some of those making his total have been duly released.

Under the new rules a bondsman cannot list among his liabilities any property upon which his wife may have a claim nor can he list his homestead, and it is provided that a forfeited bond must be made good by the bondsman before he will be allowed to become surety on another bond.

An unwritten rule, determined on by agreement among the Judges, provides that any bondsman who engages in unethical practices or who may exact an extortionate fee for a bond will be disqualified, and the professional conduct of bondsmen, it has also been agreed, as it may involve the protection of the public or the security of the State, shall be subject to scrutinizing inquiry of the Judges.

Object of New Rules.

Judge Franklin Miller, who, with Judge William H. Killoren, suggested the new system, said the reforms in no way infringed the rights of persons to bail bond, but are designed chiefly as a protection to the State by strengthening the guarantee of the appearance in court of persons under bond and, further, will serve to regulate the conduct of any bondsmen who may be inclined to levy excessive fees for their services.

The others who entered the agreement are Circuit Judge Granville Hogan, and Judges Calvin N. Miller and Anthony Hochdoerfer of the Court of Criminal Correction.

MASSAGE SCHOOL FOR BLIND

Part of New Extension Program of State Commission.

Blind adults in Missouri wishing to become self-supporting will be taught to massage under the new extension program of the Missouri Commission for the Blind.

Eugene E. Condon of Kansas City, a blind masseur, has been brought to St. Louis by the Federal Vocational Training Board to teach the class, said to be the first of its kind organized in the Middle West. Three men and a woman have already registered for the course. Registration may be made this week at the office of the Missouri Commission, 326 Metropolitan Building. Requirements for acceptance in the class are perfect health, poise, judgment and a pleasing personality.

Sothern's Shylock Is Featured in Week of Shakspearean Dramas

Julia Marlowe and Co-Star Give Four Plays in Seven Performances—Frances Starr in Revival of "The Easiest Way."

BOTH the American and Shubert-Jefferson Theaters will be dark tonight, and will begin the week's engagements tomorrow evening. At the Jefferson, Miss Julia Marlowe and E. H. Sothern will initiate seven performances of Shaksperean repertory with their new production of "The Merchant of Venice," in which Mr. Sothern offers his much-debated conception of Shylock. At the American, Miss Frances Starr will be presented in a revival of Eugene Walter's "The Easiest Way," a mordant picture of theatrical life in New York; and Miss Starr will be seen once more in the role which she created originally, that of Laura Murdock.

"The Merchant of Venice" will be played tomorrow night and at next Saturday's matinee; "Twelfth Night" will have one performance, on Tuesday evening; "Hamlet" will be given on Wednesday and Saturday nights, and "The Taming of the Shrew" will be played on Thursday and Friday evenings. Playgoers are requested to note that the curtain will rise at 8 o'clock for the evening performances, and at 2 o'clock for the Saturday matinee; and that no late-comers will be seated until the scene in progress is ended.

Julia Marlowe as Portia, in "The Merchant of Venice"—Jefferson.

In his study of the text of "The Merchant of Venice," Mr. Sothern relates that he came to a conclusion diverse from that of Sir Henry Irving, who pictured Shylock sympathetically, as a symbol of a persecuted race. The money-lender, declares the actor, "is the villain of a play who happens to be a Jew. Shylock is not the Jew, but a Jew. It was not Shakspeare's intention to maintain that all Jews were Shylocks, but that Shylock, a Jew, existing under certain conditions which prevailed in the Middle Ages, behaved as his envious, hateful and evil nature prompted. To present him as a type of his race is to distort the text."

Florence Reed, in "A Royal Rendezvous"—Orpheum.

Cite Macbeth and Richard III.

IT is further pointed out by Mr. Sothern that Shakspeare created a bloody Scotchman in Macbeth and a criminal Englishman in Richard III, without any intention of aspersing Scotchmen and Englishmen in general. Critics in Sothern's Shylock retort that Shakspeare also depicted virtuous Scots and Britons, but that no counterfoil to the Venetian usurer appears in the dramas.

With the exception of "The Merchant of Venice," all of the plays in the week's repertory are familiar in the interpretations given by Miss Marlowe and Mr. Sothern, as a result of their engagement here two years ago. As on that occasion, they employ a modern simplicity of settings, creating imaginative backgrounds by means of draperies and lighting. Also, they are said to have eliminated entirely the orchestral accompaniment with which so many Shakspearean producers distract attention from the poetry.

The stars say they have surrounded themselves with the best classical players obtainable, including Frederick Lewis, Rowland Buckstone Alma Kruger, Lenore Chippendale, Sidney Mather, Elizabeth Valentine Albert Howson, Vernon Kelso, France Bendtsen, Frank Peters, V. A. Granville, William P. Adams, Jerome Collamore, Frank Howson, James Hagan, Harold Webster, J. W. Latham and many others.

A Prosperous Revival.

THE advent of "The Easiest Way" is one result of the panic which seized New York producers this winter, on seeing their new plays dropping like autumn leaves. An epidemic of revivals set in, which, with two conspicuous exceptions, went the way of the new plays. These were "The Return of Peter Grimm" and "The Easiest Way." It is stated that David Belasco's New York production of the latter drama will be brought here intact.

Playgoers of a decade ago will remember Miss Starr's piteous portrait of frail Laura Murdock, and her struggle between good and evil. A young actress with a most sophisticated past, she meets in Colorado a Western newspaper man, who has himself been a great deal of a vagabond, but who awakens in her a true love, for the first time. They agree to let bygones be bygones; John Madison will give up his whisky and light ladies, and seek his fortune; while Laura Murdock sends her wealthy protector, Willard Brockton, a New York Broker, about his business.

How all the girl's hopes of happiness are ground to powder between the millstones of the two resolute men battling for her, is the story of the play, a powerfully constructed work, which has sometimes been praised as the best drama written by an American.

The plays for the next two weeks at the Jefferson will be a return engagement of "Irene" and "The Greenwich Village Follies." The American's next two offerings will be "Two Little Girls in Blue," a new musical comedy, and the "Ziegfeld Follies" of 1921.

MISS FLORENCE REED, a well-known emotional actress, last seen here in "Roads of Destiny" and "The Mirage," has honor position at the Orpheum this week with a playlet by Edgar Selwyn, entitled "A

Catherine the Great Is Heroine of "The Czarina"

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.

ONE of the most gorgeously entertaining comedies of the season is "The Czarina," with Doris Keane in the title role, which opened Tuesday night at the Empire. It is a Hungarian play in which Melchior Lengyel and Lajos Biro penetrate into the royal palace at St. Petersburg in 1765, and make some close and human studies of that imperial termagant, Catherine the Great. Edward Sheldon's adaptation transmits to us a royal tyrant in some of the passionate and humorous moods which the lady herself never intended for public gaze.

This uncommonly interesting and picturesque work ought to put new life into the languishing cause of romantic comedy. It is slyly satirical and delightfully humorous; you feel that the playwrights are poking fun at the potentate of all the Russias even when they are exhibiting her in supreme moments of dignity and majesty. Likewise they jest at the sycophants who wriggle under her heel.

The vulnerable spot in Catherine's character is a flaming passion for the other sex. A certain Lieutenant, Count Alexei, invades the place to warn the monarch against a conspiracy of discontented nobles. Catherine's sparkling eyes measure his sturdy physique, and the Lieutenant is made a Major on the spot. The little lady-in-waiting who thought she was to be Alexei's wife cries her eyes out in vain.

The Czarina's violent appropriation of the Count doesn't result in unalloyed happiness for him. In the middle act he finds that he has captured a tartar. The course of true love seems likely to be to the tattoo of the knout on his muscular back. But after being imprisoned, he is received back into the arms of his infatuated sovereign.

Miss Keane's Triumph.

MISS KEANE, as Catherine, is superb, rising even above the play. Her costumes are of remarkable beauty, but not too beautiful for the virtuosity she displayed as the tempestuous monarch. Her disguise in a powdered wig was complete. She was deliciously feminine in her moods, whether of fun, rage or love. The play, not Miss Keane, faltered in the middle part, but regained its ground in the final scenes.

Basil Rathbone, an English actor, played the helpless lover with fine humor. A finished characterization was that of Catherine's lying old Chancellor, by Frederick Kerr. Ian Keith played with courtliness an Ambassador from France, and Lois Meredith gave a pretty impersonation of the lady-in-waiting.

The first of the British species of musical revue to visit this country, Albert de Courville's "Pins and Needles," came intact to the Shubert Monday night after a year's occupation of the Gaiety Theater, in London. It proved a musical delight, and at times was also corking good fun.

While not so precise in its movements as some of our own choruses, the impression comes over one as these young women caper that a more uniformly stunning set has never come to Broadway. In vigor attractiveness and vocal talent the chorus is rich. And it has been supplied with music of real charm by

What They Are Doing In the Movie Studios

Bertram Grassby, professional villain, who supports Constance Binney, Paramount star, in her next picture, "The Sleep Walker," figured up the other day that he has been beaten up 42 times, thrown off seven cliffs, shot with 12 different kinds of guns and stabbed scores of ways—and all by his best friends.

The first time a flivver has ever been cast in the role of a "heroic" car occurs in "Across the Continent," Wallace Reid's new picture.

Walter Hiers, the heavyweight comedy favorite who plays an important role in "Is Matrimony a Failure?" says that if they had just one more fat actor or actress in the cast they would call it the "thousand-pound comedy." "There's Otis Harlan, who must tip the beam at 225," said Walter; "Sylvia Ashton, who is around 210, and your humble servant, at 240. That makes 675 pounds. We might throw in the overstuffed sofa and call it a thousand. The sofas and chairs suffer most in the scenes.

Since their arrival in Seville with the John S. Robertson company for the filming of the Paramount picture, "Spanish Jade," Evelyn Brent and David Powell have been devoting an hour every day to mastering the steps of a "Sevillian" to their own accompaniment with the castanets. This dance is to be one of the incidents of the big "fiesta" scene which is being staged in the market place of

"Saturday Night," "Love's Redemption," "Ten Nights," "Light in the Clearing," Here

Stars of the Week Are Leatrice Joy, John Lowell, Norma Talmadge and Clara Horton.

Features on Local Screens

Missouri—Beatrice Joy in "Saturday Night."

New Grand Central and West End Lyric—Norma Talmadge in "Love's Redemption."

Liberty—"Ten Nights in a Barroom."

Delmar and Criterion—"The Light in the Clearing."

"SATURDAY NIGHT," Cecil B. de Mille's newest feature production, is the week's principal attraction at the Missouri. The leading idea, said to be brought out in a most amusing way, is that the social fabric is divided into two classes—those who bathe every Saturday night and those who bathe oftener. The main argument is that it is a grave mistake for these classes to form matrimonial alliances. In the cast are Letrice Joy, Edith Roberts, Conrad Nagel and Theodore Roberts.

Iris Van Suydam is a daughter of wealth, who has her daily shower, plunge and rubdown, but the ambition of her life is to marry a poor man, though she is engaged to Dick Prentiss, a young millionaire. On the other hand, Shamrock O'Day, a washerwoman's daughter who bathes of a Saturday night, weather permitting, is equally set on being the wife of a rich man, though she has been "spoken for" by Tom McGuire, a chauffeur.

Through an odd combination of circumstances, each girl realizes her dream, only to find it was a nightmare. Everybody is unhappy until the problem is solved by the divorce court and Iris marries Dick and Maggie marries Tom.

A picture version of the famous old play, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," is the principal attraction at the Liberty Theater this week.

The scenario follows closely the lines of the original play, making only such changes as the screen demanded. The film version is said to permit a much more elaborate presentation than the stage. Such scenes as the log jam and the burning of the inn were left to the imagination by the old time actors.

The part of Elsa will be sung by Miss Anna Fitziu, formerly a member of the Chicago Opera Co. Wagner's opera will be sung in Italian.

DANDERINE GROWS LONG, THICK HAIR

35-cent Bottle Stops Hair Falling Out—Ends Dandruff

Ten minutes after using Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous and just twice as abundant.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

Carmona, Spain. In order that every step and movement of the dancers shall be accurate, they are receiving a special course of instruction from Senor Otero, expert on Spain's national dances.

Who says the stars don't work? Remember "Maud Muller on a Summer's Day" in the meadow pitching hay? They've got Mary Miles Minter, Paramount star, "pitching a few" in "Tillie," the Realart picture she has just completed.

The rattle of small arms from Wanda Hawley's set these days doesn't mean that she is going in for the "lady Bill Hart" stuff. It's the raid of a fashionable New York gambling house which leads to a revolver battle between police and gunmen, in Will Payne's story, "The Truthful Liar."

One thousand feet of canary! And it wasn't a "nature picture,' either. But that much film had to grind through Hal Rosson's camera before the little yellow songster would fly out of his cage and record a pretty bit of symbolism for May McAvoy's current picture for Paramount which has the working title, "Through a Glass Window." The story is by Olga Printzlau. Maj. Maurice Campbell directed.

Three stars, Wallace Reid, Bebe Daniels and Wanda Hawley, and Conrad Nagel, the popular young leading man, will head the cast for "Nice People."

The great American desert is not such a hot, dry sandy place, as is pictured in the story books, that is, at certain seasons of the year, according to Wallace Reid, who, with his company, spent several days on the edge of the Mojave filming road scenes for the new auto race story by Byron Morgan, "Across the Continent." It so happened that Wally arrived on the "burning" sands in the midst of a cloudburst. The members of the company worked in water up to their knees, bogged in wet sand and shivering with the cold.

A baby contest is not unusual in a welfare society, but until recently one has never been held in a motion picture studio. William deMille needed a baby in his Paramount picture, "Bought and Paid For," so a call for babies was sent out from the studio. Nearly a score of mothers appeared with crowing, crooning and crying babies. The task of selection was too much for the producer so he left it to the women in the cast, who chose a blue-eyed, pink-cheeked youngster for the part.

Gloria Swanson's French maid is a barometer for dramatic action in the Paramount west coast studio. Recently when Sam Wood finished directing a tense and dramatic scene with Miss Swanson and Rodolph Valentino for "Beyond the Rocks" he turned from the camera and found the maid, who understands very little Englis.., weeping copious tears. Now every time Wood "shoots" a scene he looks to see what effect it has had on the maid.

"The Brotherhood of Hate," Thomas H. Ince's latest special for Associated First National release, has entered production. Frank Keenan, Marguerite de la Motte, Lloyd Hughes and Edward Bruns are in the all-star cast.

The J. Parker Read Jr. company which is filming Frank L. Packard's story, "Pawned," has returned from San Francisco where, among other things, an automobile was run off the end of an Oakland ferry boat and sunk in the bay for scenes for the production. Tom Moore, Edith Roberts, Josef Swickard, Charles Gerrard and James Barrows were in the party.

"The Hottentot," Thomas H. Ince's comedy special, with Douglas MacLean, Madge Bellamy and Raymond Hatton in leading roles, has been completed.

"Saturday Night," "Love's Redemption," and "Ten Nights." Film Showings

"Love's Redemption." In the cast also are Harrison Ford and Montagu Love. This is the story of a girl of Spanish descent who is left an orphan in Jamaica and is wooed and wed by an Englishman whom she has reformed. All goes well until her husband takes her to England, where she runs against the rocky barriers of unfriendly and snobbish aristocracy. Here it is necesasry for her to show great pluck and resourcefulness to hold her ground. There is a strong climax in which she exposes a card cheat, after which she and her husband start back to Jamaica to live out their lives in their own way.

"The Light in the Clearing," produced by the Dial Film Co., of which Otto Bollman, a former St. Louis piano merchant, is president, is the week's attraction at the Delmar and Criterion theaters. Clara Horton has the leading feminine role. In the list of players supporting her are George Hackathorne, Frank Leigh, Eugenie Besserer and Edward Sutherland. This is described as a tense and melodramatic story in which a woman filled with the passion of revenge tracks down the murderer of her son.

SCHELLING PLAYS HIS "SUITE FANTASTIQUE"

American Pianist and Composer Will Be Next Soloist With Symphony Orchestra.

Ernest Schelling, who ranks perhaps as the leading American pianist and also holds an enviable position as a composer, will be soloist at the Symphony Orchestra concerts of Friday and Saturday, presenting his own "Suite Fantastique," for pianoforte and orchestra.

This work had its first performance at the hands of the Conzertgebouw orchestra, in Amsterdam, under the baton of the famous Willem Mengelberg, with the composer playing the piano part. Schelling has played his Suite with orchestras directed by Mottl, Muck, Fiedler, Richter, Pfitzner, Nikisch, Stock, Damrosch and Stransky. A violin concerto, by Schelling, has been played 10 times by Fritz Kreisler, with various orchestras.

The Suite is in four movements, the last of them a Virginia Reel based on thematic material taken from "Dixie," "Old Folks at Home" and "Yankee Doodle." The other movements are a march, a scherzo and an intermezzo.

Another "first time" number listed by Director Ganz is Brahms' Variations on a theme which Josef Haydn took from the old "Chorale of St. Anthony." The entire program follows:

Symphony in G Major, The Surprise, No. 6... ....Haydn
I. Adagio cantabile; Vivace assai.
II. Andante.
III. Menuetto: Allegro molto.
IV. Allegro di molto.
Variations on a Theme by Josef Haydn, Chorale St. Antoni, Op. 56A—Brahms
(First time.)
Fantastic Suite, for Pianoforte and Orchestra ....Schelling
I. Allegro marziale.
II. Scherzando e molto leggiero.
III. Intermezzo; Adagio.
IV. Virginia Reel: Molto vivace.
(First time.)
Requiem for Orchestra, after Lincoln's Gettysburg Address — Rubin Goldmark

Today's Popular Concert.

Ferdinand Steindel, pianist, a brother of H. Max Steindel, will be the soloist at this afternoon's popular concert at the Odeon, and will play Mozart's concerto in D Minor, Op. 20. The program follows:

Overture to Semiramide.......Rossini
Second Movement, Andante con moto, from Symphony No. 5, in C Minor—Beethoven
Concerto in D Minor, Op. 20, for Piano and Orchestra ....Mozart
I. Allegro.
II. Romanza.
III. Allegro.
(a) Orientale ....Cui
(b) Pierette ....Chaminade
Carnaval ....Tietjens
Waltz in E Flat ....Rubinstein

Paul Tietjens, composer of "Carnaval," is a St. Louisan, who has had much success in writing scores for musical comedies. Another program without a soloist will be that of the concerts of Feb. 17 and 18, when the orchestra is to play Franck's D Minor Symphony and a new symphonic poem, "The Ocean," by Henry Hadley.

Retail Clothiers to Meet Feb. 14.

The members of the Retail Clothiers' Association, at their meeting at the Planters Hotel, Feb. 14 and 15, will be guests of the Men's Apparel Club of Missouri.

Would You Like a More Beautiful Rounded Out Face and Figure With Good, Firm Flesh

Do You Wish to Increase Your Weight and Energy and Obtain a More Beautiful Skin and Complexion.

Hundreds of Thousands Are Taking Yeast Vitamines—They May Be Just What You Need—Get a Free $1.00 Package of Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets From Your Dealer Today as Explained Below. Try Them for Ten Days and Watch the Results.

Science now shows why we may sometimes grow weak, thin and emaciated upon an abundance of food (lacking in Vitamines) while with a much smaller amount of food, rich in Vitamines, we may quickly take on good, firm flesh, increase in weight and make a remarkable gain in strength, energy and endurance, provided, of course, that our blood contains a sufficient amount of oxygenated organic iron to enable us to assimilate our food properly. Without organic iron, both food and Vitamines are absolutely useless as your body cannot change lifeless food into living cells and tissues unless you have plenty of organic iron in your blood. This organic iron takes up oxygen from your lungs. This oxygenated organic iron unites with your digested food as it is absorbed into your blood like fire unites with coal or wood and by so doing it creates tremendous power and energy. Without organic iron in your blood your food merely passes through your body without doing you any good. Therefore, in practically every case where Vitamines are necessary, organic iron is also necessary.

For centuries scientists tried in vain to produce organic iron. At last the problem was solved, so that you may now obtain pure organic iron from any druggist under the name of "Nuxated Iron," which is ready for immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood the moment it enters the system.

If you merely wish to gain greater strength, energy, vigor and endurance we recommend that you take Nuxated Iron only. DO NOT TAKE VITAMINES UNLESS YOU WISH YOUR WEIGHT INCREASED up to what a person should normally weigh. We do not claim, however, that Vitamines will put flesh on everybody. Some people are naturally too thin and will probably remain so in spite of Vitamines and everything else.

Those whose meals consist principally of meat-soups, white bread, meals of various kinds, fish, potatoes, tinned fruits and vegetables, pies and cakes are likely to suffer from under-nourishment and a weakened physical condition due to a deficiency of both Vitamines and Organic Iron, no matter how much they eat, and in such cases both Vitamines and Nuxated Iron should be taken.

Arrangements have been made with the druggists in this city to give every reader of this paper a large $1.00 package of Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets, absolutely free, with every bottle of Nuxated Iron that you purchase. Be sure to take only "Nuxated Brand" Yeast Vitamine Tablets, pure and unadulterated, with Nuxated Iron. Do not be misled by imitations which often contain drugs. Insist upon the Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets, prepared from the original formula of Dr. Catrin of the Faculty of Medicine of Paris.

—Well Rounded Figure Firm Flesh
Beautiful Complexion
—Strong Steady Nerves

It is often surprising what a tremendous amount of pep, vigor and force a little more oxygenated organic iron will give a person whose blood is deficient in this magic-like substance. If after taking Nuxated Iron you do not receive all and even greater benefits than you expect, the manufacturers will promptly refund your money.

London Likes Play About American Revolution

LONDON, Feb. 4.

A NEW play at the Shaftesbury, "The Rattlesnake," by J. E. Harold Terry and Rafael Sabatini, was received with a popular favor which attests not only its dramatic merits, but the tact with which the authors have contrived to present incidents of British discomfiture without offense. The scene is laid in South Carolina, before and during the American Revolution.

We are asked whether Harry Latimer, or his wife Myrtle, or both, betrayed the American plans to the British General outside of Charlestown, in May 1779, and so enabled him to escape the trap which had been set for him. It looked for some time as if both were guilty. They were the only people, apart from the devisers of the plan, who did know.

But then it appeared that the wife had left the house a good quarter of an hour before the devisers had revealed their plan to the husband. Yet, as the audience knew, he had told her. The fact is, he had invented, as a test for his wife, a story about a plan which, a quarter of an hour after his invention, was actually planned. She, then, and she alone, must have been guilty.

And yet she was quite innocent, as it proves after rather too many ramifications and complications. The local color is fresh and amusing. The uniforms of both sides, the British hauteur, the American earnestness, the formal language of the time, are all good fun, and comparatively new fun, except for those who remember "The Virginians."

Incidents Are Stimulating.

THE critical moments of dialogue, too, are frequent and agreeably stimulating—as, for example, when a spy masquerading as a tobacco planter is exposed by a few simple questions about the average weight of tobacco seeds to the acre, and again when the all-important question arises of the exact hour at which Harry Latimer knew the secret and Myrtle left the house.

Also there are picturesque odds and ends of character—you cannot exhibit whole figures in so crowded a portrait-group—but the odds and ends are pieced together as well as may be by clever actors like Fisher White (crazy pro-British enthusiast), Franklin Dyall (British spy), and Milton Rosmer (Revolutionary hero).

Stay! there is one whole-length, a saturnine, sturdy, rough-tongued town-governor—a character "all of a piece," and vigorously played by Edward O'Neill. Miss Cathleen Nesbitt plays the rather sketchy wife a little uncertainly, as not qiute sure whether the lady is to be "intense" or only charming. As for that, we confess to sharing her uncertainty. The lady, in fact, had hardly an independent existence; she was the creature of the plot. Good work was done in comparatively small parts by Aubrey Mather and Jevan Brandon Thomas.

"Blindfolded, I could distinguish the Edison from any other phonograph," said the salesman.

Lady. How can I distinguish the Edison blindfolded?
Salesman. Very easily. Just listen for the phonograph which sounds so natural that you could mistake it for the human voice.

The Real Proof

Edison's new phonograph RE-CREATES the great voices and instrumental art of the world with such perfect realism that human ear cannot distinguish RE-CREATED art from living art, even when the two are heard in direct comparison.

No other phonograph manufacturer dare place the original artist alongside the instrument for comparison as is done with the New Edison.

The Budget Plan

We are working with Mr. Edison, and have adopted the Budget Plan in accord with his wishes.

The Budget Plan is a way for you to get your New Edison now. It doesn't increase your household expenses — it simply distributes your monthly pleasure allowance in a different way. It gets you more for your money. Come in and see us. Tell us how you would like to plan your New Edison budget.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids so they no longer cause irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

FAMOUS OLD RECIPE FOR COUGH SYRUP

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap, but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

CATHERINE THE GREAT AS HEROINE OF "THE CZARINA," NEW PLAY

Ballard McDonald, Rupert Hazell and I. Caesar.

Fun Fresh and Unlabored.

THE revue, in structure, resembles our own "Greenwich Village Follies"—the musical numbers being separated by brief skits. These serio-comic playlets are not always so meritorious as they should be. It may be said without fear of contradiction that spitting orange seeds into the face of a fellow player or kicking a gentleman in the lower part of the back should be left to the varieties. There are moments when "Pins and Needles" is not good entertainment, but much of the humor is fresh and unlabored.

Harry Pilcer's feet dart quite as electrically as in those days when he and Gaby Deslys became famous, and Miss Gould, while not attempting dances requiring unusual ability, is a pleasing partner. Her small voice fits well into one or two simple little songs.

Other new presentations of the week were Robert Hitchens' "The Voice From the Minaret," which marked the American debut of Marie Lohr, an English actress, and which has been reviewed in these columns; "The Chauve-Souris Theater," from Moscow, which had its first public performance Friday night at the Forty-second Street Theater; and a revival of John Galsworthy's "The Pigeon," at the Greenwich Village Theater, Thursday night.

Shaw's "Back to Methuselah" Will Be Presented in Serial Form.

THE Theater Guild of New York will begin, on Feb. 27, a production of George Bernard Shaw's latest drama, "Back to Methuselah." The word "begin" is used advisedly, for the play is so long that it will be divided into three sections, to be given in three successive weeks. In the fourth week, the drama will start over again, and so on as long as the public likes.

Shaw calls this voluminous play "a gospel in the religion of Creative Evolution." The opening scene is in the Garden of Eden, with Adam, Eve and the Serpent as characters. The costumes for this episode will not be elaborate. The plot progresses to the present, with a satirical act between personages evidently meant for Lloyd George and Asquith, and then sweeps farther and farther into the future until the finale is laid in the year 31,920 A. D.

The theme is that man doesn't live long enough to grow up, and that if he could learn to survive to the ripe old age of 300, he might by then put aside frivolous passions and govern himself by the laws of reason. The conclusion is that man must take a hand in creative evolution and learn to extend his span from three score and ten to three centuries. Lee Simonson, the Guild's scenic director, is said to be preparing many imaginative settings.

Genevieve Reynolds Dies.

A FEW days ago there occurred, in Chicago, the death of Miss Genevieve Reynolds, who played heavy mother parts during many of the visits of Robert B. Mantell's Shakspearian company to St. Louis, and will be remembered especially for her playing of the Queen in "Hamlet." The vacancy left in Mantell's troupe by her death has been filled by Miss Violet Hall Caine, niece of the novelist.

Frank Bacon has a play called "Five O'Clock," which he has refused to release to the movies, and which he says he will use himself, if the public ever lets him quit playing "Lightnin'." • • • George F. Kaufman and Marc Connolly, who wrote "Dulcy," have finished a new play, called "To the Ladies," which is to be acted soon by Helen Hayes, Mary Boland and Otto Kruger. • • • Nan Halperin, they say, is to emerge as star in a musical version of Augustus Thomas' "The Witching Hour."

Estelle Winwood has withdrawn from the cast of "The Circle," and has been succeeded by Betty Linley. • • • Miss Laurette Taylor relates that the idea of writing "The National Anthem" came to herself and her playwright husband, J. Hartley Manners, simultaneously after a gay party at Southampton, L. I., at which cocktails were served, and which was followed by a visit to a resort where young girls drank liquor and danced to the infernal racket of

"Brace up!"

"What's the matter?" "Oh, I'm feeling ROTTEN." "Is THAT all? Take LYKO. It'll brighten you up; give you fresh vigor and new life and make a changed man of you in a jiffy."

Every American Needs Nerves of Steel Muscles of Granite and Blood of Iron

A surplus of vigor and strength is required in these strenuous times to maintain your position at the "front." When you allow your mental or physical strength to fall and remain below par you are courting certain defeat in Life's pursuit. The course of human existence demands every ounce of vitality you can muster. The great crying need is and has always been, for ruddy, robust, red-blooded men. It takes strong, healthy brain and brawn to scale the steep inclines of human conflict and still possess the necessary reserve force "to go over the top."

The puny, emaciated, run-down, nervous, overwrought, lack the "punch," the fire, the spirit and the "pep" to accomplish the things worth while; to attain to the heights of sublime endeavor. Cast off, then, the burdensome handicap of a subnormal condition.

Every day "LYKO" is making men strong and swift—vigorous and virile—putting them in the pink of condition—keeping them fit to fight the battles of Life.

LYKO
The Great General Tonic

This wonderful tonic will bring to you the physical vim and the mental keenness of perfect health—the capacity to do and to dare! It will give to you that supreme confidence, that undaunted courage and that winning power that health alone imparts.

Buy a bottle of "LYKO" today! Then keep it on hand at all times in the future. Take it whenever you lack appetite, have indigestion, feel exhausted, worn-out, nervous, "upset" or debilitated from any cause, whether from a general run-down condition or a specific illness. It has wonderful health restoring powers because of its prompt aid to Nature to replace worn out muscle, bone and nerve tissue—the ideal tonic and strength builder.

This Woman Has Wonderful Sleep

After Taking Simple Intestinal Antiseptic Woman Sleeps Wonderful

"After taking just one bottle Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic), Oh, what a relief. I have had not one single pain in my side (due to gas on the stomach) and I now eat good and SLEEP WONDERFUL. I feel like a new person." (Signed) Mrs. Otis McGinnis.

Intestinal Antiseptic

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacili in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and other leading druggists.

What the Week Offers in Manhattan's Theaters

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.

NEW plays promised for the ensuing week are as follows, including two spoken dramas, a musical comedy and a revue:

Monday.

Booth—"The Lawbreaker," a comedy-drama based on a New York "crime wave," by Jules Eckert Goodman; in the cast are William Courtenay, Frank Sheridan, Marguerite Maxwell and John Cronwell.

Astor—"The Blushing Bride," a musical comedy by Edward Clark, Cyrus Wood and Sigmund Romberg; in the cast are Cecil Leon, Cleo Mayfield, Tom Lewis, Clarence Nordstrom, Edyth Baker and Beatrice and Marcella Swanson.

Park—"Frank Fay's Fables," a new revue featuring Frank Fay and Bernard Granville. Its opening date was put over from last Thursday.

Thursday.

National—"The Cat and the Canary," a play in three acts, by John Willard; in the cast are the author himself, Florence Eldredge, Beth Franklyn, Henry Hull and Percy Moore.

a negro band. The next day she said. "Hartley, don't you think you could write a play on conditions like those we saw last night?" Manners replied: "My dear, I began it at 8 o'clock this morning."

Dancer 50 Years on Stage.

MAESTRO CECHETTI, eccentric dancer of the Ballet Russe, made his first public appearance on Jan. 5, 1872, at Petrograd. He celebrated his fiftieth anniversary of that event in London by dancing the part of the wicked fairy in Tschaikowsky's ballet, "The Sleeping Princess." • • • "The Rose of Stamboul" probably will follow "The Chocolate Soldier" at the Century in a couple of weeks.

"The Players' Assembly," the latest group of actors to start out hopefully as producers, will begin in the near future with "Montmarte," a play from the French. • • • Seven theaters were offered to Irene Bordoni for her engagement in "The Little French Doll." • • • "The Bat" was produced last week in London, and Avery Hopwood, one of its authors, ran across the pond to see it. He will proceed to Paris for the purpose of dashing off a couple of new plays.

"The Monkey's Paw" succeeded "The Critics" Monday night as a curtain-raiser for "The S. S. Tenacity," at the Belmont. • • • "Sally" will celebrate its 600th performance Monday night at the New Amsterdam; five companies are playing the work in London and the British provinces, and a sixth is soon to open in Paris. • • • John Gay's famous old work, "The Beggar's Opera," is being produced in English at the Theater Caumartin, Paris, and was enthusiastically acclaimed by the press. Less fortunate was a production in French of Synge's "Playboy of the Western World," in Paris. The critics found it incomprehensible. The French title is "Le Baladin du Monde Occidental."

Fanny Brice to Star.

FLORENZ ZIEGFELD JR. has signed a contract to star Fanny Brice in a comedy next fall. • • • Because of alleged warnings from the Ku Klux Klan, the Southern time allotted to "The Emperor Jones," with Charles Gilpin, has been canceled. The play has gone to Cleveland and Boston, and will travel in May to London. Charlotte Greenwood is rehearsing a new musical show, "Letty Pepper," based on the play, "Maggie Pepper," in which Rose Stahl appeared several seasons ago.

COAL STOCKS AMPLE AS MINERS' STRIKE APRIL 1, NEARS

Supply of Fuel Above Ground Now 80,000,000 Tons and Is Likely to Be 120,000,000 by April 1.

MINERS BEING FORCED INTO STRIKE

Correspondent Asserts They Must Fight at Inopportune Time to Save Union Powers, Now Threatened.

By JOHN J. LEARY JR.,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—According to data, tabulated by the Departments of Labor and Commerce, the stocks of coal now above ground are the largest in the history of the coal mining industry—totaling, irrespective of the considerable amount in the bins of small consumers, 80,000,000 tons.

According to the same figures, the supply above ground on April 1, the date tentatively set for a general strike of the 500,000 union miners of the country, will approximate 120,000,000 tons, equal to the normal demands of the country in the impossible event of every mine in the country shutting down on that date. This stock compares with a stock of 40,000,000 tons on hand Nov. 1, 1919, when the last big strike began.

Still quoting Government officials, the supply which will undoubtedly flow from nonunion mines after April 1, will be not less than 600,000 tons a day, or 3,600,000 tons a week, and may total 4,000,000 tons, or more than 40 per cent of normal weekly requirements.

No Excuse for Increase in Price.

These facts establish that come what may on April 1, there will not be the slightest excuse, save a desire to gouge or profiteer on the part of coal producers and dealers, for an advance of one penny a ton in the price of coal to consumers, this whether they buy in cargo lots at the mine or in buckets from the cellar dealer on the East Side of New York.

This is as true of anthracite as it is of bituminous. Of the stocks now above ground, not less than 15,000,000 tons and perhaps 20,000,000 tons are anthracite.

Furthermore, it is equally true that the Northwest, which is usually short of coal every time a crisis develops, and New England, which like the Northwest lives a hand to mouth existence so far as fuel is concerned, are, to quote a high Government official, "full of coal."

Inquiry Into Situation.

These are only a few of the facts that stick out in a careful inquiry into the national coal situation. They are mentioned first because, hitherto when a strike in the coal fields has been proclaimed or actually begun, the immediate effect is a marking up of prices against the consumer. That may be attempted now—it will be surprising to many if it is not. With the facts as they are, it should be more difficult, though the Lever act, which had some effect in holding prices down at the time of the great coal strike of two years ago, is no longer in effect.

Next in relative importance—it may be of greater importance—is the fact that the Government has no definite policy for handling the emergency of a strike, and save the collection of figures as to the stocks on hand and production during the strike period, is doing nothing. Its policy is one of "watchful waiting."

This statement, I know, is contrary to the impression based upon statements issuing from sources close to the White House, that Secretaries Hoover and Davis "have the situation in hand."

The facts are that while these officials are watching the situation, there is in existence no machinery save that of the mediation bureau of the Department of Labor with which the Government or any of its officials may act either to head off a strike, or settle a strike once it develops. The power of the Mediation Bureau is limited to an offer of its "good offices." If either or both parties decline to avail themselves thereof, the bureau stops there.

So far, Secretary Hoover has limited his public activities to a warning that the "stage is being set for a general strike." This, persons close to him say, was issued for a double purpose, first to warn the country of the needs of stocking up; second, by increasing the demand at this time and in the period intervening between now and April 1, decrease the amount of unemployment and part-time employment existing in the coal fields.

Hands of Officials Tied.

Beyond that, these friends quote him as saying that until Congress acts, his hands as well as the hands of every other Government official are tied.

This brings the inquirer after facts to the Capitol, where it is made clear that any action by Congress depends first on the reaction of the country to the strike directly, and, second, its reaction to the report which Senator Kenyon of Iowa, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, makes on the West Virginia situation. In making this report Senator Kenyon speaks only for himself, owing to the impossibility of getting the members of the committee to agree on what may be needed, and, as the report now stands on his desk, will recommend an "industrial code."

COAL STOCKS AMPLE, AS MINERS' STRIKE APRIL 1 APPROACHES

No bill will accompany this report. That will come later. What it may contain will, there is good reason for saying, depend upon the reception the country gives the Kenyon report.

This report will be in the nature of a test balloon, for, on the response that the country makes to its various recommendations, depends in large measure the form which the bill to be reported later will take.

Inquiry Will Be Provided For.

One feature which this bill will be sure to contain is a clause forbidding coal strikes in advance of an inquiry into the causes leading up thereto, though it will not prohibit strikes after such an inquiry has been completed. It will not, according to members of the committee, carry out the idea of an industrial court on the lines of the Kansas experiment. On the contrary, it will not only try to avoid this feature, but an effort will be made in every practicable way to dissociate the measure with the Kansas act.

Why the Miners Strike.

In view of the large tonnage of coal above ground, and the amount which is to be extracted and will be in stock April 1 as shown by Government surveys the question is asked:

"Why, in the fact of these conditions, admittedly against them, do the miners strike?"

The answer, made by the leaders of the miners, and apparently sustained by the record, is that they have no choice in the matter, that it is a case of strike or have gains won during the war and in the years before wiped out, or by fighting to retain as much as possible if not all of what they have gained. At the worst, they will hold more than they could hope to retain under a policy of nonresistance.

It is the fact that for more than a year a campaign, subtle at times, but of recent weeks in the open, has been under way looking toward the breaking down of the United Mine Workers. The drive has come from many sides—from the professional open-shoppers, from the operators in poorly organized fields, from large manufacturing interests which are demanding cheaper fuel, from operators who keenly feel the competition of the non-union field of West Virginia and other Southern states, and the railroads.

The interest of the open shop organizations in the fight on the miners is greater than in the fight on any other organization for the reason that the United Mine Workers is the largest organization in the American Federation of Labor. If this can be smashed, if it can be forced back a substantial distance the loss to unionism and the corresponding gain to the open shop would be great. At one blow, the largest organization would be reduced in power and the prestige of the parent organization be diminished.

Further, if the bituminous branch of the industry, by far the largest and most important, could be placed upon the open shop basis, then the two largest industries of the country, coal and steel would be nonunion. Here, too, the interests of the United States Steel Corporation enter for that institution and its chief executive, Judge Gary, is not only committed to the open shop program, but is a controlling if not the controlling factor in some of the most important nonunion fields of the country. Directly, the steel corporation mines little coal. Much of that little is mined under union conditions. Indirectly, through subsidiary corporations, it produces an immense tonnage in the nonunion fields of Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Captain Collings sailed the seas for many years; then he sustained a bad double rupture that soon forced him to not only remain ashore, but kept him bedridden for years. Tributes To The Dead Avail Them Nothing.

Show your appreciation and do good for mankind while they live.

The willingness to share your benefits with others less fortunate, is one of the secrets of happiness and success.

While walking the other day in the factory district, in the northern part of our city, a poorly clad little boy stood freezing, holding his dog on a string.

'Johnny, is that your dog? Won't you have an apple?" His face brightened up as he reached for the apple and he smiled as though he rarely ever had anyone speak kindly to him.

A kind word, or a small gift sometimes means so much to others. LET'S NOT FORGET!

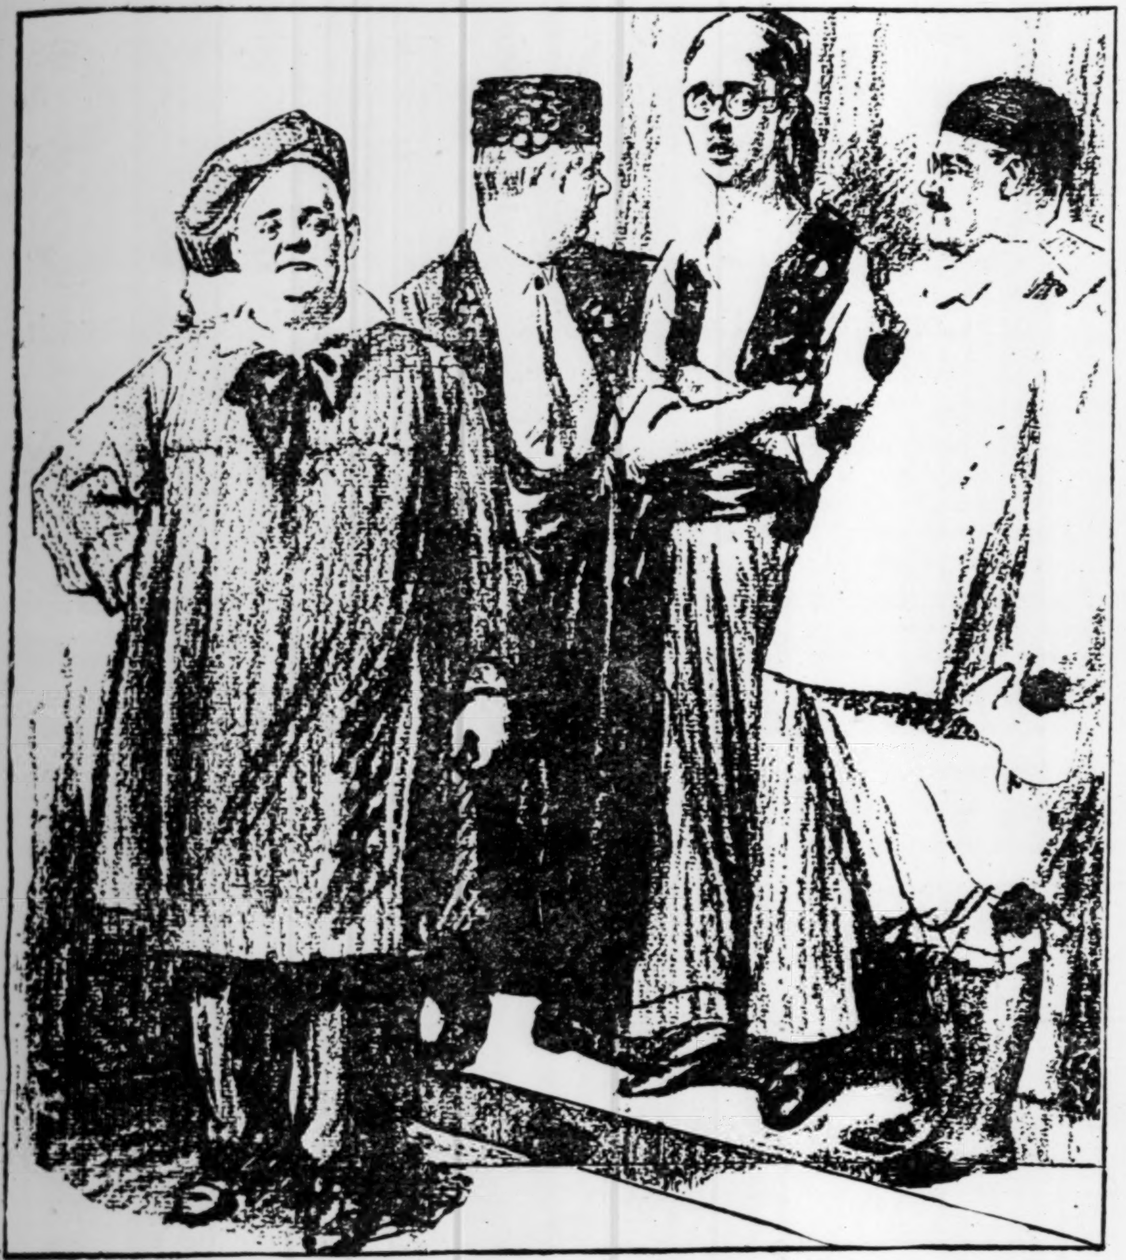
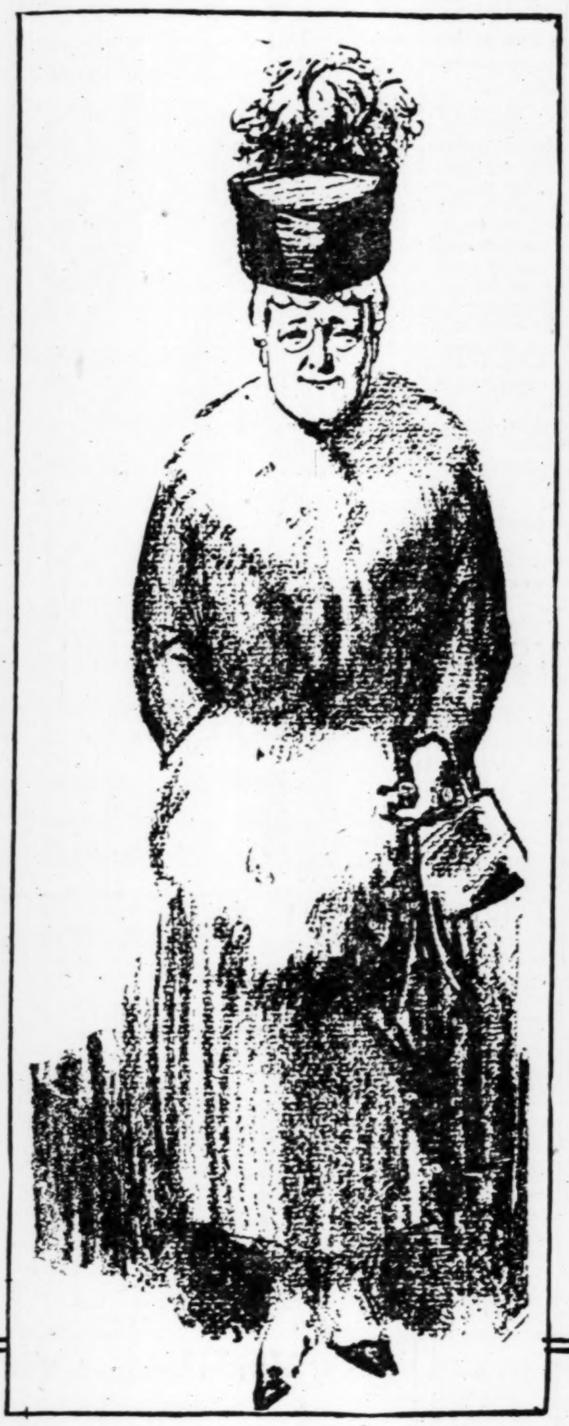
BEAUTY IS SKIN DEEP

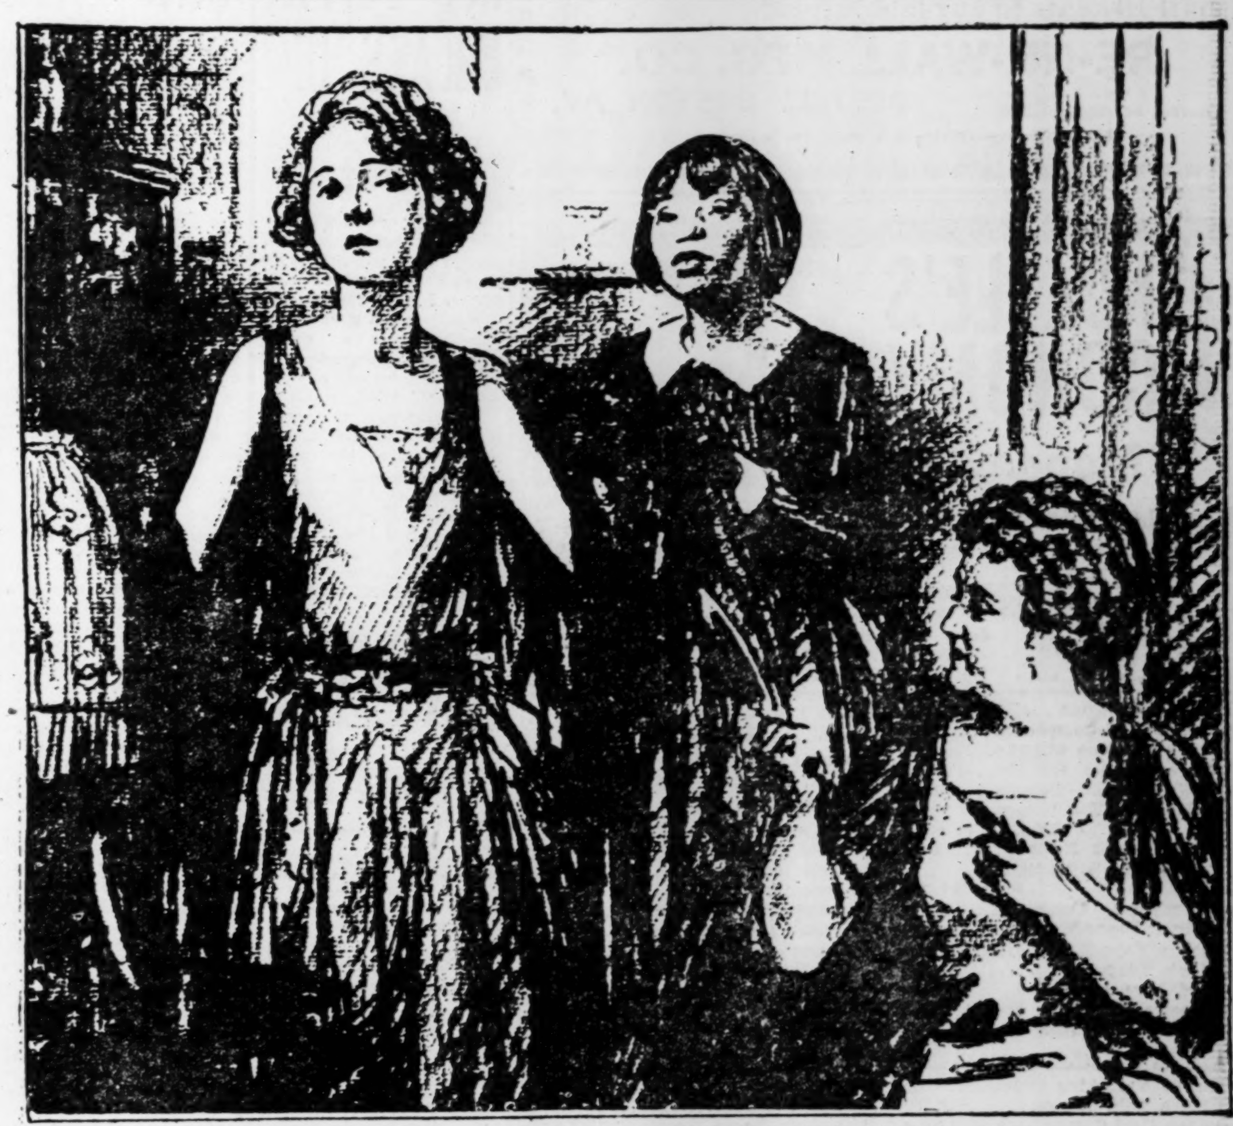
BY W. E. HILL



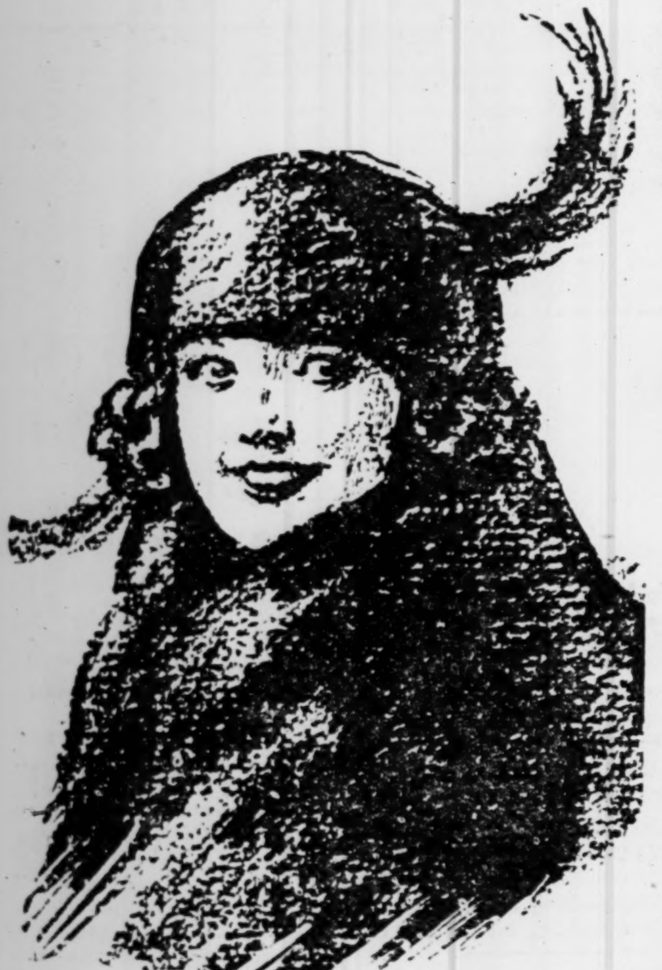
Once in a blue moon the men have their innings, even in this dun-colored world. Believe it or not, the average man is just as anxious to look beautiful as anybody else. He hasn't a chance, however, unless someone gets up a fancy dress ball, and then doesn't he cut loose.



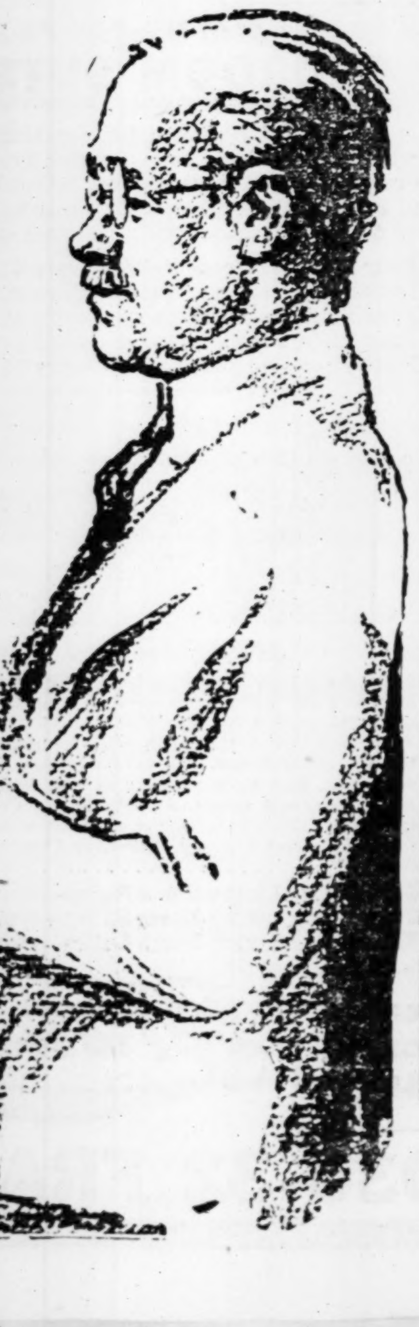
"The mellow type of beauty that comes with middle age" (says Mrs. Fred'k Gridley-Jones in her little talk, 'Is Beauty Skin Deep?' before the Tuesday Afternoon Club) "depends on adapting one's clothes to one's personality." Mrs. Gridley-Jones' entire costume has been thought out carefully and adapted to her type. Even to the hat, which has style and dignity without looking fast.



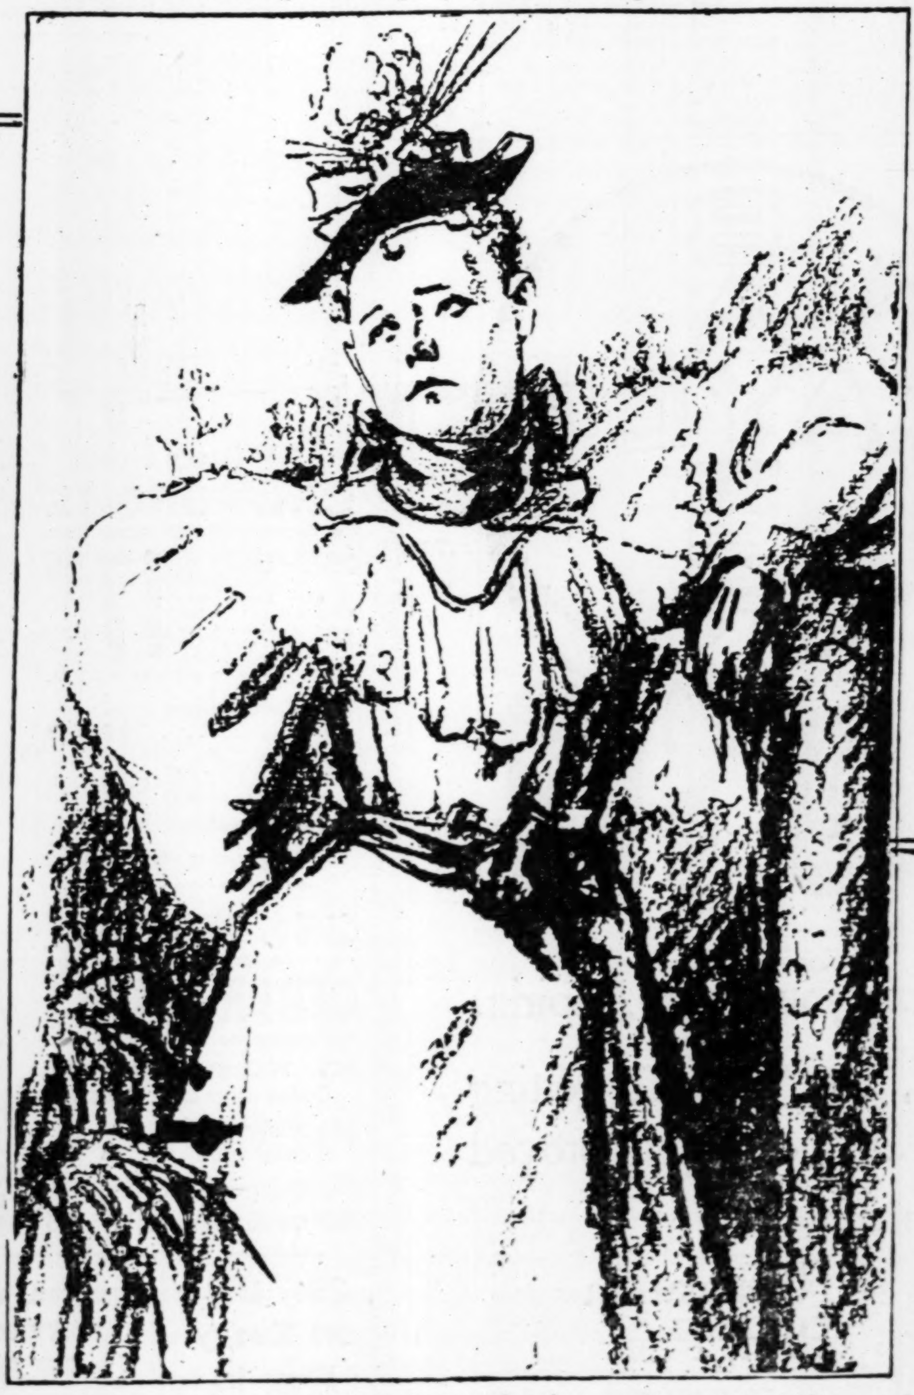
The permanent wave. When lovely woman wants to be thought even lovelier she invests in a permanent wave. Unless, of course, she is a chocolate brown beauty and already has one. In that case she sinks her money in the opposite direction and becomes permanently unwaved.



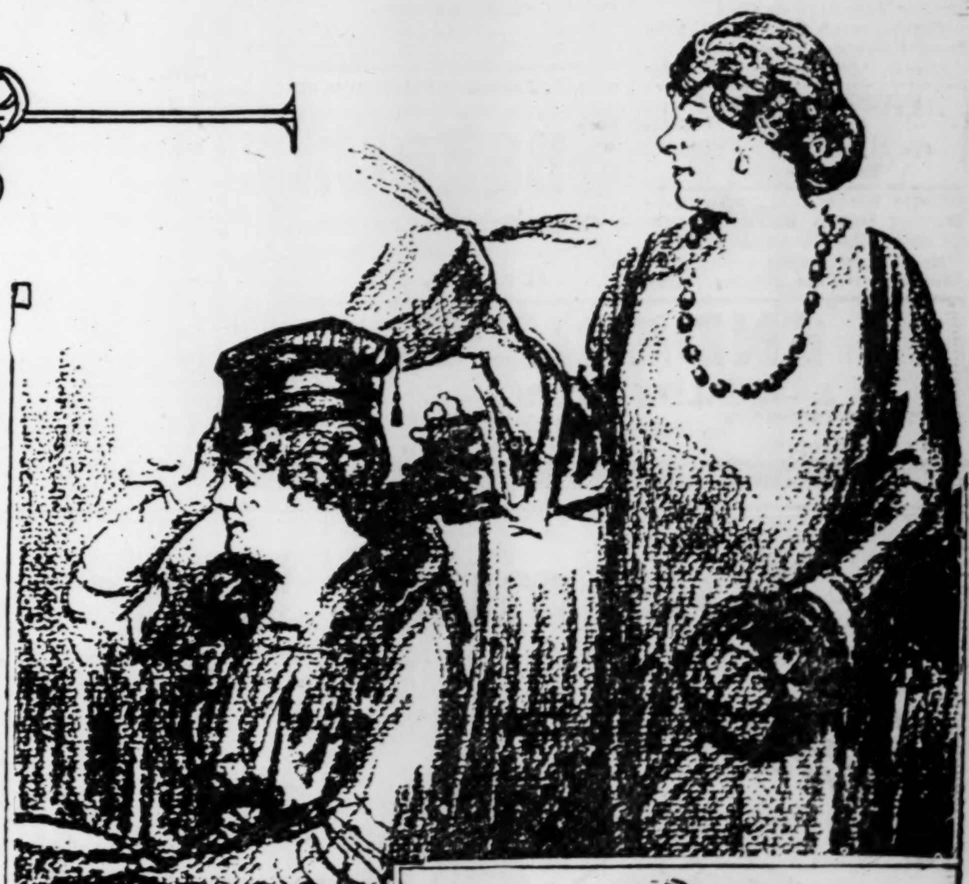
The Gilded Lily. If beauty is only skin deep, then Lilyan is going to make sure of an extra layer—with powder and rouge to work with, "Painting the Lily" is how Lilyan's mean girl friends put it. The cats!



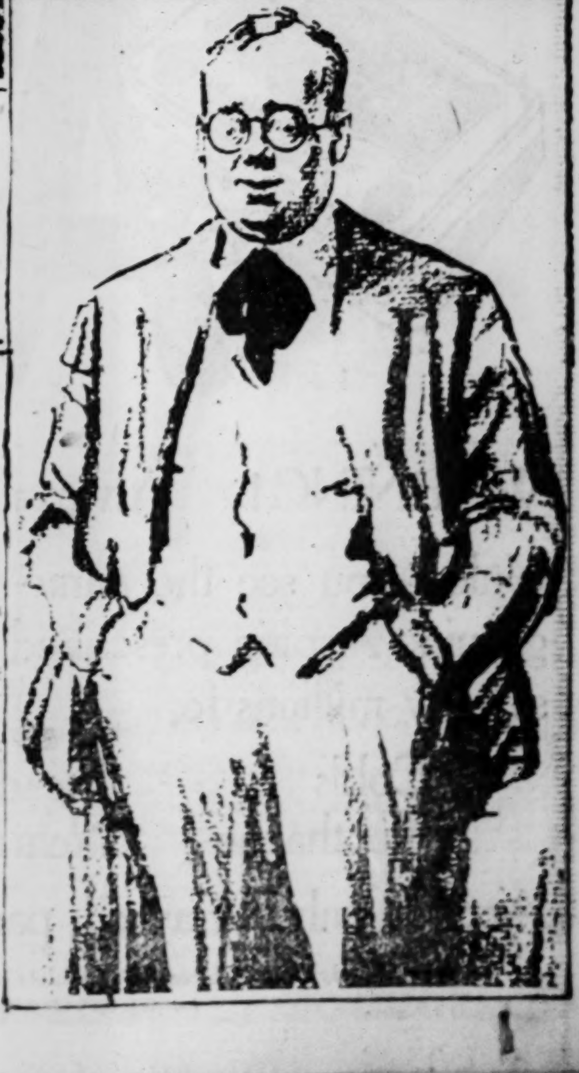
The Barber Shop Massage. Any lady who imagines that her sex has a monopoly on beauty parlor stuff had better look in on the tired business man when the barber is making him a few years younger with massage cream, trick mud, vibrators and hot towels.



A beauty of 1895 or thereabouts, showing pretty conclusively that beauty was just about as skin deep twenty-five years ago as it is today. And doubtless the 1895 girls went around looking beautiful and saying: "I don't see how the styles can ever be any prettier than they are today."



"Hats make the woman," so they say. Well, maybe, but it's our idea that a woman has to be pretty beautiful to get away with some of the hats one sees.



It's fine to talk about beauty being only skin deep, and all that, and murmuring "handsome is as handsome does," when an ugly duckling goes past, but it isn't a darn bit of use to the duckling. For instance what are you going to do with a homely man who has all the inner feelings of an Apollo and an Adonis in one? To say nothing of Cupid, too. And if he isn't perfectly irresistible to the ladies it's not the fault of the cosmic urge. Loves to play "creep mouse" with beautiful ladies in dark corners, where they can't get away when he starts in looking arch, and doing the same things with his eyebrows that Wallace Reid does.

Bobbed Hair Advocates Win.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Girl debaters of the Berkeley High School, who argued in the affirmative of "Should Bobbed Hair Be Generally Adopted as a Fashion for Women?" emerged victorious from the debate the other day. Four of the five boy judges of the question at the school voted that girls could bob their hair if they liked.

AMERICANS AMONG ST. MORITZ VISITORS

Winter Sports Resorts of Switzerland Reported Filling Rapidly.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland.—Lady Ribblesdale (Mrs. John Astor of New York), for several years the leader of a coterie of enthusiastic lovers of the winter sports here, does not come this season merely for enjoyment, but has been ordered here from England by her doctor, to recuperate after three successive attacks of influenza. It is not likely that she will be strong enough to do any coasting, of which she is extremely fond.

Real winter has taken long to settle down, but plenty of snow is falling and sport is becoming general. At Gstaad, Villars Diablerets and the other winter sports centers, at which many visitors have already arrived, the slopes are crowded with young people learning to ski, but at present most of the skiers generally have their heads buried in the snow and their skis in the air.

Some hockey and curling matches have already taken place at Caux, Gstaad and other places, but the players were obviously not yet in form.

The annual New Year's Eve ball of the Montreux Palace Hotel was a brilliant success. A considerable number of Americans have arrived at this hotel, among them Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Rickers, Mr. and Mrs. W. Horton, Mrs. Formis and the Misses Kirk.

The various winter sports resorts are filling rapidly, mostly with English people. The season at Los Avants promises to be the best since before the war. Many English and American visitors are already at the Grand Hotel, among them Mrs. Orford Smith and family, Mrs. L. Garden and family, Mrs and the Misses Curtis.

The Vilars-Chesieres district is as much frequented as ever, a considerable number of families having established themselves for the season at Arveyres, one mile from Villars.

41 FINE HOGS, JUST DIPPED IN OIL, BURNED TO DEATH

Missourian's Valuable Swine Perish in Peculiar Manner After Being Put in Pen.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOONVILLE, Mo.—Mat Cleary, a farmer living south of Boonville, lost 41 head of hogs in a peculiar manner. He had just finished dipping in oil 38 head of pigs and three brood sows and had the entire lot fastened in a small pen in order that they might become more thoroughly saturated.

Leaving the hogs for a short period, he went to look after another lot and when he returned he found the hogs and the pen enveloped in flames. The hogs were burned to death in a few minutes.

Cleary used two gallons of waste oil obtained from a Boonville garage and a gallon of coal oil. This combination previously had proven to be good for oiling hogs. Cleary was smoking just before he approached the pen, and, while he does not recall it, he says he might have lighted his pipe and thus ignited the oil-soaked ground, or a spark of burning tobacco may have fallen from his pipe. The entire lot were pure-bred Poland China hogs.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE WEEK AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

MR. PUNCH'S HISTORY OF MODERN ENGLAND. Vol. 1-2. By C. L. Graves. Two more volumes are to complete this chronicle containing about 500 cartoons and illustrations by famous "Punch" artists. They are selected from the files and arranged and edited so that they form a source book of English history as well as giving the evolution of the paper.

BOOKS AND FOLKS. By E. N. Teal. Informal talks on books in general; a "germ carrier in the contagion of reading." The gist of the author's advice is "Don't be ashamed to like what you like. Don't pretend to like what you don't like. Don't be a slave, don't be a hypocrite."

A DAUGHTER OF THE MIDDLE BORDER. By H. Garland. A continuation of his "Son of the Middle Border," recounting the bringing home of a "new daughter," his wife, and the life that followed. His story, typical of that of many pioneer families in the Middle West, is frankly and exceptionally well told.

THE WAY TO GREATER PRODUCTION. By A. W. Shaw & Co. Great emphasis is placed upon the importance of developing an instinct to produce, in the minds of the workers. The results are given, of practical training and other efficiency methods, as carried on in such companies as the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Armour & Co. and the National Cash Register Co. Prepared under the direction of the Bureau of Business standards of the Shaw publications.

MARKETING AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS. By B. J. Hibbard. The professor of agricultural economy at Wisconsin University here gives the present day practice in selling farm products, discusses farm organizations and analyses the co-operative movement.

DRAMATIZED BIBLE STORIES FOR YOUNG PEOPLE. By M. M. Russell. Twelve stories arranged for use by boys and girls of the "teen" age. They are very simple, suitable for worship services in Sunday schools and elsewhere, and have all been tried out.

TRAVEL IN THE TWO LAST CENTURIES OF THREE GENERATIONS. By S. R. Roget. In the records of actual journeys taken by former members of his family, the author finds interesting accounts of conditions under which traveling was done in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, side lights on European history, as well as glimpses of the life and customs of the time. He has gathered these into book form in practically the style originally used.

FEDERAL ADMINISTRATION AND THE ALIEN. By Fransis Kellor. A supplement to "Immigration and the future." "It seeks to place the responsibility for an inquiry which will assure the foundation of a permanent policy." Deals with the individual as well as the problem of the amount of immigration.

A SERVICE OF LOVE IN WAR TIME. By R. M. Jones. An account of the attitude of Quakers in America to war service and of the work of the American Friends' Service Committee in Europe in 1917-19. It is an instructive account of the conscientious objector, and the author thinks it may possibly make the work of mere peace-makers seem worthy of the gratitude of men.

To Speak on Ethics in Business.

William J. Fischer will speak on "New Ethical Standards in Business" at the Second Baptist Church, King's highway and Washington boulevard, Sunday at 9:30 a. m., before a nonsectarian class of salesmen who are studying "The Application of Religion to Distribution." The class is conducted by Donley S. Lukens.

TABLETS FROM OLD BABYLON IN STATE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Missouri Institution Gets Clay Record of a Bill for Goat Meat in 2350 B. C.

COLUMBIA, Mo.—Two Babylonian tablets purchased for the University of Missouri library by H. O. Severance, librarian, have been placed in the curio case for exhibition at the library. In cuneiform writing, the smaller of the two, which is about an inch square, presents a butcher's bill for one kid which had been dressed for market and delivered on the first day of the month. It is dated about 2350 B. C.

The other, which is nearly two inches square, is a business document dated on the back of the tablet, about 2400 B. C., or at the beginning of the Ur dynasty, which ruled from 2400 to 2100. It was found at Jokha, the ruin of the ancient city of Umma, in Central Babylon. The tablets are from the collection of Edward J. Bank of Alpine, N. J., who is an explorer.

Boys' and Girls' Clubs Planned.

VAN BUREN, Ark.—It is the plan of A. W. Milling, County Farm Agent of Crawford County, to organize boys' and Girls' clubs in connection with all community clubs in Crawford County this year, he announced recently.

HARVARD DEAN ASKS INTELLIGENCE TESTS

Use of Entrance System Last Year Warrants Continuance, Says Report to Lowell.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 3.—So successful have been the experiments in intelligence tests conducted by the Harvard Business School in the past year, that the faculty may use such tests hereafter as a supplement to the existing entrance requirements. This fact was made known through the annual report made by Dean Wallace B. Donham to President Lowell.

"Until we have adequate buildings and physical equipment," says Dean Donham in the report, "the entering class cannot expand beyond 450 men. Whatever the reasons for limiting numbers, the practical problems involved are serious. Shall we admit the first group who apply and present our minimum educational and personal qualifications, or shall we attempt to select the better men? If we wish to select, what method shall we pursue?

"As one approach to a solution of this problem of selection, we have during the past year, with a considerable degree of skepticism, conducted experiments with general intelligence tests of the type devised by the Carnegie Institute and the Scott Company. The results obtained by giving these tests to men in the school surpassed our hopes."

Tests Agreed With Scholarships.

Dean Donham explains that the tests were given to a large part but not to all the students in the school. The groups were chosen at random, and included all men who chanced to be in a given class on the day in question. The tests indicate, says Dean Donham, "a marked correlation between the intelligence rating of the men, as determined by these tests, and the scholastic grades given in different courses."

"The striking fact," he continues, "is that 100 per cent of the men who were rated A on the intelligence test stood in their regular school work above the average grade, and 100 per cent of the men receiving E on the intelligence test stood in scholarship below the average of the school. Moreover, no men in the second-year group who took the test received an E rating. Obviously men of this range of ability are largely eliminated by the ordinary processes of the school or by their own action before the beginning of the second year.

"This conclusion is confirmed by the record attained by the E group in the first-year class. There were seven such men. Two were asked to leave during the year on account of poor scholarship, one failed or stayed away from every examination, two failed in three courses each, one failed in one course, and one passed all his courses with an average grade of 71.5 per cent. In other words, five out of seven failed completely, one made a very unsatisfactory record and one only passed all his work.

"The indications are that these intelligence tests place us in possession of a method applicable to this particular school by which we may sort out in advance the men who are not competent to benefit by the course of study to which they are here subjected. It is hardly worth while for an individual to come to the school who cannot pass at least a D intelligence test on the standard of marking used in these computations. His chances of failure are too great.

To Sort Applicants by Tests.

"Our present intention, therefore, is to attempt on an experimental and tentative basis sorting applicants for admission by the use in part of intelligence tests similar to those above referred to. Of course, in every case we shall also investigate the personal quality of the applicant and use all other available information.

"If the applicant presents a transcript of his college record which indicates that he had thoroughly satisfactory grades and stood well up in his class in relation to other students, no intelligence test is necessary in his case. He could not have had such a record without possessing the ability to pass satisfactorily any such test which we might give him. If, on the other hand, his college record is not clearly satisfactory, we hope to determine through such a test whether this less satisfactory record resulted from the diffusions of his college interests among activities outside the classroom or was due to his lesser mental capacity. If the former, we shall admit him to the school. If his unsatisfactory college record resulted from apparent lack of capacity this record would presumably be repeated in the school. In principle any limitation of numbers not based on the quality of the students eliminated appears to us most objectionable. Through these tests and the careful investigation of personal quality we may make progress toward establishing proper standards for selection. All of the above statements must be considered subject to modification with further experience."

The necessity for limiting numbers at the Business School is due, says Dean Donham, to the fact that the physical equipment is "hopelessly inadequate" and to the necessity of developing properly the case method of instruction.

Students Entertain Soldiers.

The St. Louis University Glee Club and the University Orchestra gave a program for the soldiers at Jefferson Barracks Wednesday night. There are many vocational training students in both organizations. The glee club and orchestra will give an entertainment at the St. Louis University auditorium Feb. 24.

"FOOT INSURANCE FOR THE FUTURE"

Comfort and Beauty combined in this model. Rubber heels for greater foot ease.

THIS wonderful shoe has won the hearts of many thousands of grateful American women.

They have found relief from tired, aching feet, strained or weakened arches, swollen and distorted ankles and insteps. They have found a beautiful stylish shoe that they are proud to wear any day—anywhere.

One of the handsomely styled "Foot Savers" for all purposes. House or street wear.

We are glad to introduce to women this triumph in shoemaking.

The "Foot Saver" is not a "cure" for broken arches—it is however, a boon to humanity because of the comfort it gives to feet injured by misfitted or improperly constructed footwear. This beautiful shoe controls the arch gently, moulding and shaping it to correct lines. The arch control is not mechanically uncomfortable, but scientifically constructed, for greatest ease and foot relief. There are more comfort provisions in this shoe than any other ever made.

The Foot Saver Shoe — Controls the Arch — TRADE THE J&K CO. MARK

Properly fitted and worn consistently, the "Foot Saver" positively insures a perfect foot from youth to age. Any tendency to weakness of the bony structure, flabbiness of muscles, fleshiness or malformation, is corrected and future protection assured. The "Foot Saver" relieves pain at the joint of the great toe (bunion joint). The lasts over which the shoes are built provide for correct expansion and spread of the feet in walking. No slipping up and down at heels.

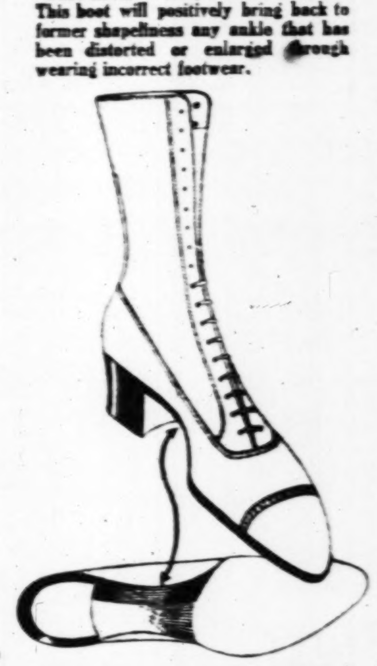
The very popular patent leather, blucher oxford, is a Spring Favorite.

Solid comfort in this wide last. A shoe that many women are finding "wonderful."

CAUTION: There are other shoes being offered with claims similar to those made for the "Foot Saver." Do not accept any shoe that is offered you as "Just as Good" or "The Same Thing." Look for the "Foot Saver" trade mark on bottom of shoe.

The "Foot Saver" is very different from so-called "comfort" or "corrective" shoes which are not very handsome in appearance. The "Foot Saver" is beautifully made. It has style and individuality in every part. Young women are proud of their "Foot Saver" shoes. Elderly women prefer them because of their combined comfort and handsome lines

Your especial attention is called to the "Foot Saver" boot, illustrated below. This boot will positively bring back to former shapeliness any ankle that has been distorted or enlarged through wearing incorrect footwear.



Trim ankles, gracefully curved arches and beautifully modeled feet

Are assured by wearing "Foot Saver" shoes. An eminent medical authority, who has investigated, says: "Consistent wearing of this shoe will, in from three to five weeks, reduce swollen ankles." American women are known by their dainty feet, but too many of them have not given heed to proper footwear. The "Foot Saver" shoe will quickly restore all that has been lost through improper foot dressing.

The blucher oxford shown below is one of the most wonderfully comfortable walking shoes ever made. It will give health protection as well as satisfactory ease and "foot insurance for the future."

Leading merchants sell "Foot Saver" shoes. You are urged to visit your nearest dealer where the shoes will be correctly fitted to your feet. When actual sizes and widths are known, dealers will fill your order by mail, although personal fitting is preferable. The "Foot Saver" shoe is so scientifically constructed that it cannot be worn if incorrectly fitted.

If there is no dealer in your town who handles "Foot Saver" shoes, kindly write to us and we will undertake to supply you through a reputable dealer near you.

AMATEURS INVITED TO TAKE PART IN WIRELESS RELAY

Messages From Governors to President to Be Sent Under League Auspices March 6, 7 and 8.

Every amateur radio telegraph and telephone operator in the United States and Canada has been invited by the American Radio Relay League to participate in the Governors'-President's relay to be held March 6, 7 and 8.

A 10-word message from the Governor of each state will be relayed to President Harding at 10 p. m. on each of these three days. An appointed amateur operator will collect the 48 messages and deliver them to the White House, March 9. The Radio League has given the amateurs three nights in which to relay the messages in order that atmospheric or other disturbances may not prevent all messages from getting to Washington. Participants may use either the wireless telegraph or telephone.

A. L. Benson of the St. Louis Radio Association says there are 400 radio enthusiasts in St. Louis who will participate in the relay. Benson will instruct local amateurs in the handling of the messages from his station at the store of the Benwood Radio Apparatus Co., 1110 Olive street.

Questions on "Nerves"

By DR. LEWIS BAKER

Question: What is IRRITABILITY?
Answer: Abnormal Sensitiveness.
Question: What causes it?
Answer: Briefly, exhausted nerve condition.
Question: Why the "condition"?
Answer: Poor nutrition—lack of nerve fluid.
Question: What is "nerve fluid"?
Answer: It is the "life" of the nerves.
Question: Why is nerve fluid necessary?
Answer: Nerve fluid supplies Nerve Force, and the latter is comparable to electricity—you cannot see it, but you know it exists—it is, in other words, Energy, Power or Vitality—living force. To build up the nervous system, and possess glowing, teeming health, there is nothing that can surpass Cadomene, as it is one medicine containing elements which increases Nerve fluid, which in turn generates Nerve Force.

Build up your nervous system and there will cease to be nervous ailments.

Try Cadomene—and prove it—or get back your money from the manufacturers. Ask for Cadomene tablets.

Proceeds of Special Performance at Metropolitan Will Go to National Foundation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Leading artists, nearly all of whom appeared with Caruso in his operatic triumphs, will pay homage to the memory of the tenor at a special concert at the Metropolitan Opera House, Sunday afternoon, Feb. 19. The concert will be for the benefit of the Caruso American Memorial Foundation, which is raising an endowment of $1,000,000 for a national memorial, dedicated to the work of assisting talented and deserving students of music in America and of promoting wider public appreciation of music.

The artists who have promised to appear include Lucrezia Bori, Geraldine Farrar, Amelita Galli-Curci, Jeanne Gordon, Margarete Matzenauer, Rosa Ponselle, Mario Chamelee, Giuseppe Danise, Giuseppe de Luca, Adamo Didur, Beniamino Gigli, Orville Harrold, Jose Mardones, Giovanni Martinelli and Leon Rothier. The Metropolitan Orchestra will accompany the singers, under the batons of six conductors—Giuseppe Bamboschek, Arthur Bodansky, Louis Hasselmans, Roberto Moranzoni, Gennaro Papi and Giulio Setti.

Program to Be Announced Soon.

The program is being prepared under the guidance of Giulio Gatti-Casazza, and will be made public next week. The Caruso Foundation will dispose of the parterre boxes at $100 and upwards. The National Committee of the Foundation includes President Harding as honorary chairman and Mrs. Enrico Caruso as honorary vice chairman.

The active officers include Paul D. Cravath, president; Otto H. Kahm, Dr. Antonio Stella, Harry Harkness Flagler, Col. W. L. How Thin Run-Down Women May Quickly Build Outdoor Health

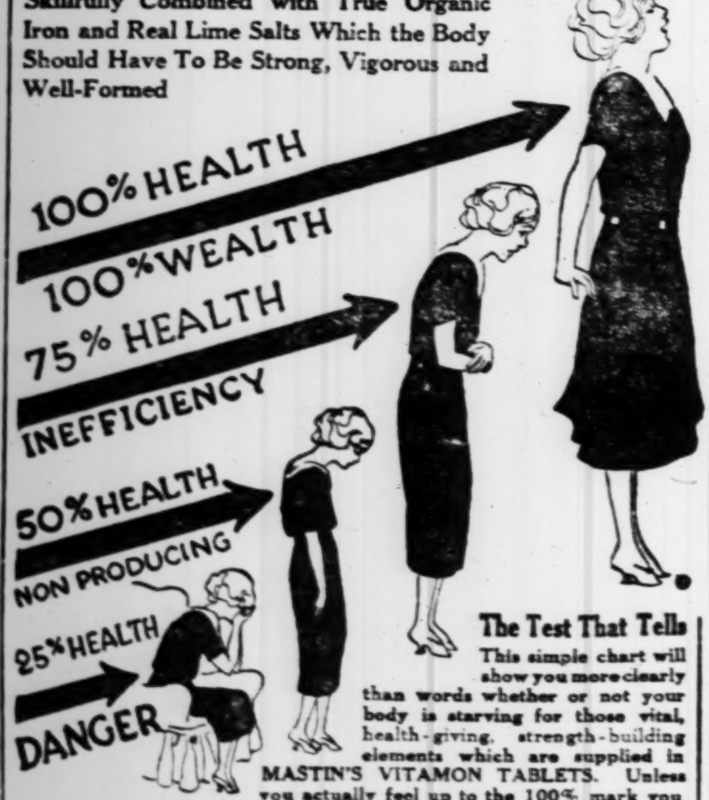
Increase "Pep" and Energy—Strengthen Unstrung Nerves and Fortify Themselves Against Disease

MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS

Contain All Three Necessary Vitamines Skillfully Combined with True Organic Iron and Real Lime Salts Which the Body Should Have To Be Strong, Vigorous and Well-Formed



The Test That Tells

This simple chart will show you more clearly than words whether or not your body is starving for those vital, health-giving, strength-building elements which are supplied in MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS. Unless you actually feel up to the 100% mark you owe it to yourself to find out at once just what MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS will do for you.

Many a woman is thin and scrawny, narrow-chested, with pale lips, dark rings around the eyes and her whole body lacking in endurance and energy, simply because she fails to get from her food the nourishing vitamines which Nature intended should build healthy bodies, strong nerves and provide resistance against disease.

By supplying in concentrated tablet form not only yeast but all three of these necessary raw food elements—the vitamines—combined with the true organic iron and real lime salts, MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS help feed and nourish the shrunken tissues, rebuild the weakened nerve force and strengthen the entire digestive and intestinal tract.

Women who have been ailing for years—the victims of undernourishment brought on by a lack of sufficient vitamines—are often amazed at their astonishing improvement in weight, energy and appearance after only a short course of MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS with their meals.

No matter what tonics or preparations you may have tried in the past or how hopeless you are of ever becoming alert, healthy, properly developed and physically fit—with cheeks glowing with fresh rosy coloring that come from internal health—eyes that sparkle, nerves that are strong, and a body well-rounded and gracefully formed—you should find this simple test well worth trying: First, weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next take MASTIN'S VITAMON—two tablets with every meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS until you are satisfied with your gain in weight, "pep," energy and appearance. It is not only a question of how much better you look and feel or what your friends say and think—the scales and tape measure will tell their own story.

WARNING: Your safety and protection depend upon getting MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS—if it isn't MASTIN'S it isn't the Original and Genuine VITAMON—the world's standard—now used by millions. Beware of imitations, cheap substitutes, or so-called "yeast vitamine tablets." Insist upon MASTIN'S. At all good druggists, such as all Enderle Drug Stores, Johnson Bros., Judge & Dolph, E. A. ANDERSON-STRAUSS CO. TO HANDLE GRAY CAR

Milton B. Strauss announces that the Anderson-Strauss company has been formed, to handle the distribution of the Gray cars for the following territory: Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana, the western half of Tennessee and Kentucky and the southern half of Illinois.

The Gray Motor Corporation of Detroit, at the head of which is Frank L. Klingensmith, formerly vice president and general manager of the Ford Motor Co. of Detroit, Mich., are now manufacturing the Gray car in Detroit, and deliveries will start in the early part of March. Associated with Mr. Klingensmith at the factory are E. F. Beall, formerly vice president in charge of engineering of the Packard Motor Co., now vice president and general manager of the Gray Motor Corporation, and William Knudsen, formerly manager of production of the Ford Motor Co.

The Gray touring car, which will sell for less than $500, will be equipped with self-starter, demountable rims, one-man top, ventilating wind shield and will be of selective type of sliding gear transmission, three speeds forward and one reverse. The transmission, front and rear axle bearings are all Timken. There are many features incorporated in the gray car that have never before been offered to the buyer in a car listing under $500.

Warren C. (Fuzzy) Anderson is president of the new Anderson-Strauss company. Anderson for many years was branch manager for the Ford Motor Co. in St. Louis and Chicago, and also manager director of all Fords of foreign interests up to February, 1921, at which time he resigned in order to devote more time to his outside personal interests. Milton B. Strauss is treasurer and general manager.

Tires With 500 Nail Holes Leak No Air

A new puncture-proof inner tube, which in actual use was punctured 500 times without showing the loss of any air when tested by a tire gauge, has been invented by Paul B. Coats, an electrical engineer of Chicago. It is inflated with air and has the same appearance as the regular inner tube, yet it removes all the necessity of changing tires until the casings are entirely worn out. Cars using these tubes are making from 8000 to 12,000 miles without removing a tire from the wheel. A wonderful feature of this new tube is that it can be produced and sold at about the same price as the ordinary tube. Mr. Coats has turned over all his rights on his invention to the Milburn Puncture Proof Tube Co., 353 W. 47th st., Chicago, who wants to place these tubes in a few cars here. They will make a very liberal offer to anyone who wishes to try them at the company's risk, until a distributor is appointed for this territory.

TEL-AUTO-SPARK CO. BEGINS PRODUCTION

After three years of experimenting the Tel-Auto-Spark is now being manufactured and is in the hands of several local distributers.

According to A. B. Christopher, president of the new concern, the Tel-Auto-Spark is an automobile instrument about the size of a speedometer that is similarly attached to the dash and registers each pulse beat of the different cylinders, locating through scientific means of elimination, deduction and wireless resistance all ignition or carburetor troubles when they first develop.

Mr. Christopher also claims that the instrument is so simple that troubles can easily be located with childlike ease, and will save time, money, gasoline and eliminate minor repair bills. The instrument has a brilliant black enameled octagonal-shaped flange, nickel-plated electrodes and a radium dial which enables the motorist to locate troubles in the dark.

The company recently leased and is now occupying one-half of the fifth floor of the Pontiac Bldg.

NEW FRONT AND REAR SIGNAL ANNOUNCED

The Safety First Auto Signal Device Manufacturing Co. of Belleville, Ill., announces a new signal device that operates front and back at the same time. The patent was granted for the signal in 1917. The inventors are L. L. Schmidt, Theodore W. Beuchel and P. C. Otwell.

The device illuminates both day and night the following signals: Right, left, stop, slow and ahead, also tail light and parking light. The stop works off of the foot brake or clutch. Right, left, ahead and slow work off or a switch.

NEW TYPE SPARK PLUG BEING INTRODUCED

The Reardon Co., Inc., of Peoria, Ill., have just completed a double-ended spark plug called the Doubl-Head, for the automobile, truck and tractor.

This new spark plug is claimed to fire on both ends at the same time, one end in the motor and the other end on top. The top end acts as an intensifier and forces the working end to fire through oil or grease. The air circulation under the hood dries out the oil and the continual spark cleans the top plug automatically while you are driving.

BODY BUILDERS INSTALL OFFICERS

Officers of the St. Louis Carriage, Wagon and Automobile Builders' Club were installed Tuesday evening at a banquet at the American Annex.

The officers who served in a like capacity last year are Louis Moller Jr., president; William Bradford, vice president; A. E. Spaete, secretary; H. H. Uhlenhaut, treasurer, and D. J. Keck, sergeant at arms. Spaete has served as secretary for 15 years and H. H. Uhlenhaut treasurer for 11 years of the club.

AUTO SHOW TO BE LARGEST EVER HELD

Additional Space Will Enable Dealers to Exhibit Complete Line of Autos and Accessories.

In the history of the 14 previous automobile shows in St. Louis, it is probably true that there were never as many actually new models as will be shown at the fifteenth annual show, which will be held at the Chevrolet Building at Union and Natural Bridge avenues, from Feb. 18 to 25, inclusive.

Nearly every manufacturer has produced for his 1922 model an almost original car. Changes have been so many in mechanical construction and improvements, and in body lines, that the 1922 models will be a revelation to the automobile buying public.

It is the belief of men in the trade that the lowest point in prices has also been reached, and it was predicted at the Automobile Show in Chicago last week by manufacturers that if any further changes in price occur in the next six months they will be upward instead of downward.

All Local Dealers to Exhibit.

Up to Saturday morning it was reported by the show management that every dealer in St. Louis would be represented at the show with an exhibit of his cars. That would mean that about 85 makes of automobiles and 25 makes of trucks will be shown.

An unusual feature of the fifteenth annual show will be a profusion of music. The Show Committee has found that large brass bands are too noisy, and instead will have four orchestras of eight pieces each placed in advantageous positions around the building, so that there will be unobtrusive music constantly heard.

Another feature will be an attractive restaurant and refreshment place, where visitors to the show may arrange for long stays at the show and have their evening dinner there if desired. This restaurant is especially designed to accommodate the 6000 or 7000 automobile dealers who will come to the show from outside the city. Invitations to the number of 10,000 were placed in the mail Saturday morning by Show Manager Robert E. Lee, addressed to that number of dealers in automobiles in Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Special Railroad Rates.

Arrangements have been made with the several passenger associations whereby they have granted a rate of one and one-half fares for the roundtrip to the St. Louis Automobile Show, and this insures that there will be a much larger number of dealers from the surrounding territory than at any previous St. Louis show.

Decorators have already begun work at the Chevrolet Building to prepare it for the fifteenth annual show. J. H. Gennisson is in charge of the decorations. An elaborate and unusually beautiful entrance will be constructed outside the building at the main gate. This will serve two purposes, one decorative and the other as a windbreaker so that the people can get into the building in comfort without bringing in Old Boreas. The interior decorations will be on an elaborate scale and entirely different from those at the fall exposition.

The truck department will be in the north ell of the building and several new trucks will be shown as well as all of the standard St. Louis lines. Among the trucks exhibited will be the Dorris, Garford, G. M. C., Republic, Power, Reo, Oldsmobile, Dodge, Luedinghaus, Pierce-Arrow, Acme, Traffic, Packard, Pioneer, Ford, Indiana and International.

Exhibits to Be Larger.

The accessory department promises to be larger as to the number of exhibitors than it was at the fall exposition. The Beck & Corbitt Iron Co., Holthaus Supplies Co., H. & H. Machine Co., McQuillan-Bradford Co., Modern Auto Repair Co. and Hummel Manufacturing Co. are among the exhibitors who have taken very large spaces. In this department there will be showings of every description of accessory or appliance known in the trade from a spark plug to a radius rod support, and there will be odd exhibits of camping or tourists' sleeping cars by two exhibitors, examples of modern coach building and decorating, new style carburetors, piston rings and spark intensifiers.

The show committee which is in charge of the fifteenth annual show, visited the Chicago show in a body last week, looking for new ideas and for attractive exhibits, and met with marked success in securing a number of both. This committee consists of P. H. Brockman, J. J. MacGregor, H. C. Merry, C. A. Cole and G. G. Giese, R. C. Frampton, president of the St Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, is an ex-officio member of the committee.

WILSON MOTOR CO. TO DISTRIBUTE DORT CAR

Claude Merry, president of the Wilson Motor Car Co., 2925 Locust street, distributers for the Haynes cars for several years, announced he had obtained the distribution of the Dort line of open and closed cars for St. Louis and adjacent territory.

The company's new quarters were formerly occupied by the Westcott Automobile Co.

ST. LOUIS-TO-PUGET SOUND HIGHWAY PROPOSED IN BILL

Washington Senator Offers Measure Which Would Provide for Use of Army in Road's Construction.

A bill providing for a military highway linking St. Louis with Puget Sound and embodying the latest features in road construction has been introduced in the United Senate by Senator Jones of Washington. The road would be surveyed and laid out by army engineers, who would utilize roads now in existence where feasible.

The highway would be called "The Pioneer Way" and the bill provides that the advisability of using the United States army in its construction be looked into.

The bill, if passed, will direct the Secretary of War to appoint a board of two members, one of them a United States army engineer and the other a civilian, to make a preliminary survey for the road, and provides for a fund of $75,000 to conduct the survey. The co-operation of the various states would be requested in the construction and maintenance of the highway.

The route would be from St. Louis to Kansas City over the Old Trail, to Gardner, Kan., over the Oregon Trail, thence up the right bank of the Platte River into Wyoming, following the Sweetwater and crossing the Rockies through the South Pass. The road would pass through Pocatello, Amedican Falls and Boise City, Idaho, and down the Columbia and Yakima valleys.

VITAMINES — those mysterious substances found in certain foods, are now agreed, by the best scientific minds in the country, to be primarily responsible for building firm flesh and producing vigor and vitality. Lack of vitamines in the daily diet causes nervousness, loss of weight and vitality, headaches and many of the deficiency diseases, such as skin eruptions, emaciation, rickets, scurvy and pellagra.

"Alexander Vitamines have increased my weight 8 pounds and done wonders for my complexion. I am going to keep on taking them, for they are the first thing I ever tried that would put weight on me, and I had tried everything I read about. ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 5, 1922.

GRAND JURY TO INVESTIGATE THE RICHWINE MURDERS

Names of Witnesses Called for Inquiry to Open at Belleville Thursday Are Not Divulged.

The St. Clair County grand jury, in session at Belleville, will begin Thursday an investigation of the murder of Mrs. Clara Richwine and her father-in-law, William Richwine, at their home on Fifty-first street, near the city limits of East St. Louis, on Jan. 9. Subpenas were issued yesterday commanding witnesses to appear on that day and tell what they know about the double crime. The names of the witnesses were not divulged.

The preliminary hearing of Dr. Robert X. McCracken, prominent East Side physician and former Coroner of St. Clair County, charged in a warrant with the double murder, is set for Tuesday in an East St. Louis Justice of the Peace Court. The hearing has been postponed twice for the understood reason that Acting State's Attorney Lindauer was disinclined to disclose what evidence he has. It is expected that there will be another continuance Tuesday. If that is refused the State's Attorney may permit the case to be dismissed rather than present his evidence in court at this time. He said yesterday he had not decided what he would do.

The evidence against Dr. McCracken has not been made known except that it is said to support the theory that the murders were done by a physician. This theory was first suggested by the fact that the woman's body, when found, was lying on the dining room table in a position which might have been taken for the performance of an operation.

It was thought that the woman might have died under an anesthetic and that the bullet fired into her head might have been intended to mislead as to the cause of death, and that her father-in-law was killed to prevent him from talking, but when the body of the woman was exhumed it was found that there had been no illegal operation and that there was no occasion for such an operation.

Dr. McCracken, who lives on Granvue avenue, Belleville, is out on bond.

CONGRESSMAN DYER IS NOT MOVED BY POLITICS, HE SAYS

In Letter to the Post-Dispatch He Declares His Constituency Is Largely White.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—In your editorial of last Wednesday regarding the antilynching bill you asked the question of me as to whether or not my advocacy of this legislation is influenced by politics. Replying I say it is not in the slightest degree. As you know, I have never had any real opposition for nomination or election since I entered Congress 10 years ago. Your statement that my district is 80 per cent colored is absolutely untrue as you know and could ascertain from the Election Commissioner's office. The Twelfth Congressional District has a large majority of its people white. I have not appointed any colored boys to either the United States Military Academy or to the United States Naval Academy since I have been in Congress. I have, however, given colored boys in my district an opportunity to take the examinations for these appointments. I never made the statement that I would appoint only colored boys to West Point. In fact, my quota at both West Point and Annapolis is full, and I have only white boys there.

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANIES GET RATE INJUNCTION

Enforcement of Premium Charge Reduction Restrained by Circuit Court on Request of 140 Concerns.

DECLARE CHANGE WOULD CAUSE LOSS

Companies Assert That Some Businesses Would Fail if State Commissioner's Order Became Effective.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 4.—Enforcement of the 15-per-cent premium rate reduction for fire insurance ordered by State Superintendent of Insurance Hyde was temporarily restrained today by an order of Circuit Judge Slate, returnable Feb. 14 at 2 p. m., issued at the instance of 140 insurance companies who filed an injunction suit.

The petition alleges that the reduction is unreasonable and confiscatory, in that it would cause the companies either to operate at a loss or go out of business.

The petitioning companies are required to give a bond of $500,000 to secure the refunding to policyholders, if the final decision is adverse to the companies, of the difference between the companies' rates and the ordered reduction, on all premiums collected in the interim.

Operating Expense 41 Per Cent.

The expense of doing business in Missouri, the petition states, under normal conditions is 40 to 41 per cent of the earned premiums, while from 1916 to 1920 it was 42.37 per cent, and in 1921 was approximately 42.37 per cent. In addition, at least, 3 per cent should be set aside as a surplus, it is said, and it is contended that the companies are entitled to earn at least 5 per cent of the premium receipts.

The period from 1916 to 1920, which Hyde has taken as the basis of his order, is held not to reflect fairly the business under normal conditions, because it includes the abnormal years of 1919 and 1920, when premiums increased in volume and losses were smaller, and it is contended that any investigation regarding a reasonable profit should include 1921, when values declined, resulting in decline in premium receipts and increase in losses.

For the period from 1916 to 1920 the losses are said to have been 59.64 per cent of the earned premiums and expenses 42.37 of the earned premiums, a total of 102.01 per cent, or a loss of 2.01 per cent on each $100 of premiums earned, without setting aside anything to surplus to meet extraordinary hazards.

Loss Is Foreseen.

Although the annual reports for 1921 have not been filed, not being due until March 1, it is claimed that these will show a loss ratio of over 64 per cent, with no appreciable reduction in expense, and that the actual loss will be found to have been 10 per cent during 1921 and that from 1916 to 1921 inclusive the losses will exceed the premiums earned at least 5 per cent.

It is argued that the order is void because the superintendent made no investigation, as the statute requires and because the reduction ordered is unreasonable and confiscatory, its effect being to compel the companies to do business at a loss or cease doing business.

The suit was filed by Seymour Edgerton of Chicago, associated with whom is the firm of Leahy & Saunders, St. Louis.

MENTAL DISORDERS IN 435 OF 3283 FAMILIES CHARITY AIDED

Provident Association Report Taken to Indicate Need of Psychiatric Worker and Clinic.

A report of the Provident Association states that among 3283 families which came to its attention during the last year, there were individuals in 435 of them needing the attention of a psychiatrist (doctor of mental diseases).

This fact is taken as indicative, not only of the need of having a regularly assigned and properly trained Provident Association worker for the detection of mental disorders and subnormal mentality, but also of establishing a psychiatrist clinic in conjunction with State and city courts.

A movement to attach such a clinic to the Juvenile Court was taken up Friday at a meeting in the office of the Big Brother movement, 628 Rialto Building, at which the Community Council undertook to call a meeting of child welfare and other agencies to determine what funds for such a clinic could be raised.

The National Society for Mental Hygiene has indicated its willingness to ask for the assignment of trained workers of the Rockefeller Foundation to St. Louis for a period of several months to demonstrate a psychiatric clinic in conjunction with Juvenile Court if some agency will assume the responsibility for permanently continuing the clinic.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out of date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

PIONEER MOVING MAN DIES AFTER ACCIDENT

Rosalvo E. Orcutt, Who Started Business in City in 1884, Succumbs to Injuries.

Rosalvo E. Orcutt, 84 years old, a pioneer in the storage and moving business in St. Louis, died at 7:30 a. m. yesterday at his home, 505 Lake avenue, Webster Groves. He was knocked down by an automobile in Webster Groves last Monday night and his hip was fractured. Heart disease developed Friday night.

He was born in Passadumkeage, Me., and in the Civil War served as a Lieutenant in the First Maine Cavalry. His first experience in the moving business was with a livery company at Sedalia, Mo., in 1871. The company carried on a moving business as a side line to its livery trade and Orcutt drove a wagon.

While hauling passengers from Sedalia to the State fair in Kansas City he was an eye-witness to the James boys' robbery of $8000 in gate receipts. When the James boys were surrounded by a posse shots were fired and several persons were injured. Orcutt picked up a girl who had been shot in the foot and carried her home.

In 1884, a few years after his arrival in St. Louis, he bought out a moving business at Eighth and Biddle streets, which consisted of a horse and wagon and the good will of the former owners, and for one year continued its management. He then got quarters at 4720 Easton avenue, where he began the storage, packing and moving business, in which he continued until two years ago, when he retired.

The firm was incorporated Jan. 23, 1904, with Orcutt as president and three of his sons occupying other positions. Within a few years the company occupied three large warehouses, each having a capacity of more than 500 loads. The concern now occupies a large building at 6801 Delmar boulevard.

Of six children who survive him, five sons and a daughter, all but one are interested in their father's company. The sixth son, R. Lee Orcutt, is president of the General Warehousing Co. The other children are R. E. Jr., F. E., H. W. and P. W. Orcutt and Mrs. Viola Brooks, the latter residing in Ashland, Me. Orcutt also is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anna Orcutt.

Orcutt was a member of the Masonic order and of the Episcopal Church. Arrangements for the funeral will be postponed until the arrival of Mrs. Brooks.

THREE CHILDREN CARRIED DOWN LADDER BY FIREMEN

Firemen carried the three small children of Lawrence Mullen down a ladder at 4 a. m. yesterday when fire started in the basement of Mullen's undertaking establishment at 5165 Delmar boulevard spread to the family's living quarters on the second floor. Mr. and Mrs. Mullen climbed down the ladder, with the assistance of firemen.

The children were Lawrence Jr., 5 years old; Robert, 3, and Mary, 1. The two boys were jubilant about the fire, for they are ambitious to be firemen and they have toy apparatus with which they play most of the time and which they believed should have been used to put out the fire.

The damage to the building, which was a two-story brick structure completed last June at a cost of $35,000, was about $5000. The furnishings, which cost about $15,000, were damaged $2000. The fire started from an overheated furnace and smoke coming up a stairway from the first floor awakened the family.

Apples Canned in 1902 Used in Pie.

BIBLE CLASSES FOR CHILDREN

Bible instruction on a nonsectarian basis will be given school children from the fourth to the seventh grades at 3:20 p. m. every Tuesday and Thursday at the Second Presbyterian Church, Taylor and Westminster avenues.

The class, which starts next Tuesday is being inaugurated by a board of six co-operating churches supplying funds for four paid teachers. Besides the Second Presbyterian, the other churches represented by the board are the St. John's Methodist, the Second Baptist, St. George's Episcopal, the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, and the First Christian Church. In addition the Bible class board represents the Missouri Sunday-school Association and the Church Federation. Children from the Eugene Field School district have been invited to attend.

CHARGED WITH FORGING CHECKS

A warrant was issued Friday charging Charles McGuire, 42 years old, of 3712 Cote Brilliante avenue, with having forged the name of his brother-in-law, William Donovan, of 3614 Cote Brilliante avenue, to a check for $10 cashed in a saloon.

McGuire was arrested and admitted, the police say, having passed about 20 similar checks at saloons and drug stores in the past month. The saloon men told the police McGuire had posed as a prohibition enforcement agent. McGuire denied this.

Does Your Factory Need Work?

Have you any additional capacity in your factory? Would you consider an increase in your volume by manufacturing for us large quantities of small and medium sized articles made of wood, wood and steel, all steel, wood and iron, also malleable and grey iron castings, black and nickel plated?

You may not now be making any of these articles, but possibly you could do so without any increase in your equipment. Possibly a volume of just such articles as we need would help keep the wheels running while business is coming slowly in your regular lines. If so, describe your plant and equipment fully—don't overlook size, capacity, exact types of machines, materials on hand, articles now manufactured, location and labor scale. An exceptionally low overhead would be very interesting to us.

No matter how small your plant, we might be interested. Small factories in small towns will find our plan very beneficial. Our requirements are quality, service and low costs. We have the volume and the cash; what have you?

FORMER ASSOCIATE'S STORY OF SHACKLETON

He Praises Endurance, Courage and Loyalty to Those Under Him.

By GEORGE MARSTON.

(Who served under Sir Ernest Shackleton on two Antarctic expeditions and who was rescued by Shackleton from Elephant Island.) Special Cable From the Manchester Guardian to the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1922.)

LONDON, Feb. 4.—By the death of Sir Ernest Shackleton we lose one of the most outstanding personalities of our time; his genius as a leader, his remarkable physical endurance and his character, all went to the making of what was perhaps one of the greatest figures of all time. Those who shared with him the hardships of an Antarctic exploration will feel that the suddenness of his end was due to his ingrained habit of always doing just a little more than his physique could stand and much more than the next man.

My own experience with him dates from 1907, when, as Mr. Shackleton, he was organizing his expedition of that year and I asked to go with him as the artist. His dominating personality was obvious at a glance. His first question was: "Why do you want to go with me?" I answered frankly by telling him I knew nothing of Antarctic exploration, but was keen on the sea and sailing ships.

"Which will come first with you, the expedition or your work?" he asked.

I truthfully told him, the expedition.

Precaution Commanded Respect.

A most searching cross-examination followed, but I got no definite answer for some weeks, during which time I associated freely with the other members of the expedition. I was eventually recalled from Cornwall by a telegram, and arriving in his office a few hours later, with the dust of travel still on me, I was greeted with the news that I had been appointed, and then learned that my character and personality had been under closest examination. The care and thoroughness of the methods filled me with respect.

In looking back at that time now I am amazed to find how young he was, and how his personality dominated everyone of his staff, several of whom were men of no mean accomplishment. He was an autocrat and his success was in no small measure due to his autocratic method, for it gave him power to dispense with the clogging influence of committees. Every detail of the equipment and scope of the expedition was in his hands and, with all his cares his was the lighest heart in the office during the time of preparation, during the voyage south in the Nimrod, during the dark winter months and the period of sledding.

Apparently Disaster Proof.

In time of trouble I have watched him with admiration as disaster followed on disaster. He left us to our work and then, his mind being made up, he took things over and seldom were his decisions wrong. The admiration and attachment which he inspired in me on this first expedition culminated in my promising to accompany him on his second venture in 1914, though this meant, for me, long separation from wife and child.

Apart from his qualities as leader, which all men knew, his physical powers were, perhaps, his most remarkable characteristic. By no means athletic, a heavy smoker, and often careless of his well being, he was yet capable of outlasting the most athletic and powerful of his staff.

After completing his now famous journey South and back to the ship and suffering from the hardship and starvation of several months, he left behind the stoutest of his companions worn out on the barrier, and on reaching the ship took three fresh men, turned in his tracks and set out to pick them up. He outmarched the fresh men and so far exhausted them that on the first night he had to cook their meal.

Illustration of Doggedness.

His journey in that open boat for 750 miles to bring hel pto those of us left on Elephant Island will always remain on of the most magnificent feats of courage. His climb across the frozen heights of South Georgia, never before accomplished by any man, was one of splendid endurance, and his repeated attempts to reach us and his ultimate success in the face of apparently insurmountable difficulty, showed his dogged persistence of mind.

These three things—courage, endurance and unbeaten persistence—stand out in my memory as the fundamental qualities of this great man.

The Endurance and Aurora were the ships that carried Shackleton's expedition in 1914. The Endurance left the Thames, Aug. 4, and Buenos Aires, Oct. 26. The Aurora went adrift on the ice in Ross Sea, May 6, 1915. The Endurance was crushed in the ice in the middle of Weddell Sea, Oct. 27, 1915, and drifted 700 miles in the ice until April 9, 1916.

Shackleton and his men landed on Elephant Island, one of the South Shetland group, rocky, of volcanic origin, on April 16. Leaving 22 men and scant food on the island and taking five men, Shackleton set out in a 22-foot boat toward South Georgia, April 24. Almost miraculously he arrived at Port Stanley, Falkland Islands, May 31. On his fourth attempt he reached Elephant Island on the relief ship Yetcho and took off his men, Aug. 30.

AIRPLANE DIRECTS RANGERS IN RAID ON TEXAS STILLS

Nine Liquor Plants Seized and 61 Prisoners Taken by State Soldiers in Freestone County.

SECTION UNDER MILITARY RULE

Machine Guns Carried by Raiders—Plane Fired On From Ambush, but No One Is Injured.

By the Associated Press.

TEAGUE, Tex., Feb. 4.—Nine stills captured, 61 prisoners in custody, a large quantity of liquor ingredients confiscated—this was the toll today of a series of well-planned and systematic raids conducted by Texas Rangers, national guardsmen and prohibition enforcement officers in the 600 square miles of Freestone County's sparsely settled and densely wooded territory, over which military rule was extended by gubernatorial proclamation yesterday.

Not a shot was fired by the raiders.

Heavy arms, including several machine guns, carried by the raiders, caused the fugitives to make summary surrender when once they were espied by their pursuers. An airplane which directed the raiders to the moonshiners' lair was fired on from ambush, but neither the plane nor the pilot was hit.

Hardly had it become known that military rule had been extended than an airplane was reported flying low over the wooded sections of the new territory, under command of State military. Signals were given from the airplane and State rangers working in conjunction with the State guardsmen and prohibition enforcement officers went almost directly to spots where they say they found stills and made the arrests.

Airplane Fired On.

The work of searching for stills and persons supected of violation of the liquor laws went smoothly and quickly. The most excitement came when unknown parties in a thicket fired at the airplane, which quickly flew upward and out of range. There was no interference with its work of directing the raiders on foot.

An airplane has been flying low over the territory now being searched by the military for a week or more. Not much thought was given to its presence, but the sudden expansion of military rule, movement of military headquarters from Mexia to Teague and the raids explain its presence and give an indication of the plans carefully worked out in advance.

The eastern part of Freestone County is rather sparsely settled, and the Trinity River bottoms are thickly covered with timber. The topography is said by persons familiar with it to be ideal for concealing stills and hard for a stranger to penetrate. There is a space of 30 miles or more without railroad. During flood seasons, the roads are impassible, and in dry weather, deep sand interferes with traffic.

Soldiers Sent to Mexia.

Military rule went in effect in the Mexia oil field about the Middle of January, Gov. Neff setting forth in the declarations that State aid was needed to stop lawlessness. The territory first included Mexia and two precincts of Freestone County. Military headquarters were established at Mexia and one company of State troops sent there. It established what was called "Camp Winter Garden" and prisoners taken by the State officers were confined there, until turned over to Federal or State peace officers.

The declaration of military rule to include all of Freestone County became effective yesterday. Brigadier-General Jacob Wolters, in command of the forces, moved his headquarters from Mexia to Teague shortly after 5 a. m. The move was the first public announcement of the change. Within a short time after the headquarters were moved, the raids directed by airplane began. The prisoners taken outnumbered the Rangers and others rounding them up.

BRITISH EXCHANGE MARKET ADVANCE FEATURE OF WEEK

Sterling Up to $4.33—Rally in Wheat and Oversubscription of Treasury's Latest Offering Other Financial Events of Importance.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Persistent strength in sterling, a rally in wheat and a satisfactory oversubscription of the Treasury's latest offering of certificates and notes have stood out among the financial events of the week. Wage reductions have spread, meanwhile, in New England and the industrial outlook continues mixed. In the political, both here and abroad, domestic happenings have for the moment overshadowed those of an international character. Genoa has dropped almost out of sight, while London is chiefly interested in the fate of the coalition Government and the campaign for Government economy. Our own people, similarly, are thinking of the implications of the vicious bonus bills and the agricultural demands for unsound banking policies.

"That sterling should advance approximately 8 cents in five days is not, after all, so extraordinary. The gain amounts to only 2 per cent and the rate of gain is not greater than was the case in the rallies during the first half of last October and the early part of December. Compared with the variations in the continental exchanges, the rate of gain is small. The point is, however, that sterling's advance is extraordinarily steady. Since the first of last August, when the recovery from the effects of the coal strike began, the advance has been interrupted by setbacks of only the most insignificant nature—setbacks which in most cases have amounted to this alone—reactions of a fraction of a cent.

Influences on Sterling.

"This steadiness in sterling is attributable to several factors. For one thing, the improvement in England's economic position has been consistent. Although British trade still suffers from a relatively severe depression, the excess of imports has been reduced to a figure which compares favorably with the pre-war. Against this excess, furthermore, must be set the earnings of British shipping and the value of other services performed for foreign countries. Still another factor which is by no means negligible is the quality of the management which Britain is able to give to her financial affairs. There is reason to believe that her profits from exchange transactions have been more than considerable during the past year or two. That her financiers understand how to handle their exchange dealings for the optimistic effect goes without saying.

"It is true that the present rise in sterling is to some degree a creature of depression. London observers insist that a trade revival must be preceded by heavy purchasing of raw materials. The relation of such a development to the price of sterling is fairly obvious. Besides, Britain will soon begin interest payments on her debt to us. On the other hand, it is clear that the further the present rise goes the more the whole British possession is improved. The price of foreign materials is cut and the amount of foreign obligations is reduced. A concrete example of the latter tendency is the present strength in the British 5½ per cent dollar bonds due in 1922 and 1929. These are convertible into sterling national war loan bonds at the fixed rate of $4.30. If sterling rises above that figure the tendency for the external debt to be converted into a domestic one is increased.

Wheat Rises, Cotton Falls.

"Among our commodity markets, meanwhile, the showing is exceedingly diverse. Some display further weakness, while others are able to rally. Among the latter is wheat, which has advanced to the highest price since the beginning of last October, and has recovered something like 25 cents from the low of the year. Small stocks of the commodity abroad and the firmness in the foreign exchanges lie behind the movement. It is to be hoped that the gain may have some effect in abating the pleas for special legislation in favor of the farmer. It is only frank to say, however, that the recovery would have been much more useful to the farmer if it had come at a time when he had more grain to sell than at the present moment.

"This circumstance, taken with the continued heaviness in cotton prices, suggests a conservative view regarding this year's recovery in the farmer's purchasing power. A very great deal depends, of course, on the character of the [illegible] crop. There is at present no reason to expect anything but a slow recuperation. In addition, the wage cuts in New England and the incidental strikes also represent another infringement on purchasing power. This does not mean that these reductions are [illegible] from the broad standpoint, desirable as they are [illegible] before the balance between different commodities and industries can be restored and a thoroughly prosperous general business can be achieved. An outlook is, however, not [illegible]. The most that the [illegible] could have anticipated is a [illegible] improvement, in which seasonable trends will stand out.

Saturday's Market Strong.

"Trading on the Stock Exchange today was at the rate of more than a million shares for a five-hour session, but on this occasion activity was centered more on the specialties which featured the Thursday and Friday markets. The most interesting development was a steady and general rise in the railroad shares, the motors going into a subordinate position speculatively. The rank and file of standard industrials [illegible] the day's closing while dividend paying [illegible] moved listlessly and without important change. Trading can be described as mainly professional.

"The really important development of the day was a further rise in foreign exchange. Sterling established a new high on the movement, going to $4.33 for demand, as compared with $4.31 at the close yesterday. French francs went up 4½ points to 8.40 cents and then reacted to 8.38½. Even Italian lire recovered. Gains of 8 to 10 points were made in Scandinavian rates. On a 22-point rise Dutch exchange made a new high at 37.30. The discount of Canadian dollars was reduced to the lowest figure since the recovery began.

"In the commodity markets May wheat reacted a little more than a cent, going to $1.24¾. Cotton was dull, declining 22 points in the early trading, but recovering in part before the close."

"A decrease of $4,083,480 in surplus reserves was shown in the Clearing House statement. Loans increased $66,930,000 and net demand deposits decreased $28,782,000. Reserve of member banks in the Federal Reserve Bank were $9,026,000 less than at the end of last week. Treasury operations on Wednesday were reflected in an increase of $84,000,000 in Government deposits, bringing that item up to $142,661,000."

NO IMPORTANT CHANGES IN SHORT SESSION ON CURB

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The short session of the Curb Exchange today developed no very important changes. The news that there were to be at least three bidders for the Lincoln Motor Co. at today's sale inspired considerable buying of that stock. There was a moderate demand for R. J. Reynolds Tobacco, but Philip Morris was less active. The oils were fairly active. Fractional gains appeared in Gilliland International Petroleum, Kirby and Pennok. Standard Oil of Indiana, after dropping off a bit at the start, was well supported and rallied.

In the mining division, there was heavy trading in Boston and Montana, but with not much change in price. There was profit-taking in Magma Copper, after the advance of the previous day, and the price sagged off. The features in the bond market were again the Interborough Rapid Transit 7s, which were up nearly 7 points from where they were selling a week ago, and activity and strength in the foreign Government issues.

SATISFACTION IN LONDON OVER OUR REFUNDING BILL

Hoped, Says Writer, That It Will Speed Up Negotiations for Settlement of British Debt to U. S.—25-Year Period Called Too Brief.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in its financial review today, says:

"An excellent effect has been produced by the Pacific treaty while there also is satisfaction over the passing of your refunding bill, which it is hoped may speed up negotiations for the settlement of our debt to you. Briefly expressed, the financial district's view concerning that matter is that while desiring and appreciating in advance courteous consideration by America of the terms, it believes the best interests of both sides of the Atlantic will be served by Britain commencing service on her external debt with earliest possible moment. Our financiers would still like the scheme to take some form whereby bonds could be marketed here from time to time, thereby giving British investors an opportunity of periodically converting external into internal obligations.

Hard Work Needed.

"Twenty-five years is considered too brief a period for complete repayment, and an argument which American bankers will appreciate is that even under ordinary conditions any government raising large foreign loans would require a longer period for amortization, let alone transactions running into almost thousands of millions. The financial district, however, believes that the best tonic for all sections of our community is clear and stern recognition of our war losses and the necessity for economy and hard work. Moreover, not until Britain gives a strong lead will the other European nations follow. The idea behind the Genoa conference may be excellent, but nine-tenths of the remedies suggested could be applied by each individual government without moving a mile from its own domains.

"It is considered that the rise in sterling and other influences possibly may restrain a reduction in the Federal Reserve rediscount rate. The conservative policy hitherto pursued by the board commands approval here. Recent speeches by the chairmen of our great banks fully confirm the reasons previously cabled for the rise in investment securities and investors' power to absorb new capital issues. Investors evidently have sold about £150,000,000 in Treasury bills which have been absorbed by the banks. Holdings of Treasury bills by the public now, however, probably are small, a circumstance which suggests a limitation to the rise in securities. In these Treasury bills, meanwhile, the banks hold a potential source for obtaining liquid funds should trade revive.

National Deficit Unlikely.

"All cables stating the vital and immediate necessity for Government economy here should be credited, but assertions that the present year will end with a deficit should be disregarded. The Government has huge reserve funds at its disposal, and, moreover, is believed to be effecting almost panicky savings, so that the year may easily end with a small surplus. The real struggle comes with the next budget, when revenue will be lower and the resumption of debt service to you have to be faced.

"The Rand mining crisis is serious. It must be remembered that the South American Government depends almost entirely on the mines for its revenue, while a stoppage of gold output might have considerable effect on your exchange and might almost immediately affect your gold rivals."

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The advance in sterling exchange showed no signs of slackening today. Even before New York had started business, sight drafts on London had touched $4.32½, and French francs had passed their previous top, getting up to 8.40 cents. By an interesting coincidence this highest rate for sterling since the second week in August, 1919, came on the precise day when two years ago the record low of $3.18 was reached.

The stock market merely continued to move forward under the momentum previously acquired. There was the usual irregularity as the professional following went out of some stocks into others, but at no stage of the two hours was there any question about an upward tendency prevailing in the list as a whole. Railroad stocks were not as prominent as yesterday, and were inclined to react.

The Bond Market.

The continued advance in sterling was more conspicuously felt in the bond market then elsewhere today and the foreign Government group, led by United Kingdom issues, were the feature of the two-hour session. Interest in local tractions waned in face of the buoyancy of foreign external loans, and although the various transit maturities were fairly active their advance of the past week was checked. All the United Kingdom 5½ per cent bonds reached new high prices. The 1919 and 1922 loans also were prominent. Their rise was in direct response to the movement in sterling, inasmuch as they are convertible at par and interest into the British national war 5 per cent bonds, fourth series, sterling being computed for the purpose of conversion at the fixed rate of $4.30 to the pound. With the exception of Brazil 8s, the rest of this section gained substantially. City of Tokio 5s were up almost 2 points, and there was pronounced strength in Mexican, City of Berne, Queensland, French and Republic of Chile issues. Liberty Bonds again reacted.

The chief incident in the industrial division was the activity in Cuba Cane Sugar convertible 7s, up a point, as well as the trading in Chile Copper 6s and Armour & Co. 4½s, both of which were up a point. Railway bonds maintained their gradual advance, which became more noticeable yesterday. St. Louis & San Francisco railroad issues were all up and prices rose a point or less in the case of Erie prior liens, Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s, Missouri Pacific 4s, Southern Railway 5s, Missouri, Kansas & Texas adjustments.

Foreign Exchange and Domestic Money

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Developments in the foreign exchange market in the past week were confined, so far as public knowledge is concerned, to the movements of rates, but while these movements were of the highest importance noted since the low rate of sterling, $3.18, was made in February, 1920, there was nothing in the way of moving force of which even banking dealers had information. Many conjectures were made as to the incentives for persistent buying which made sterling move up each day of the week to new high records for recent years. One banker referred to the strength early in the week as due to panicky buyers, and later, after a further advance was made, characterized the movement as a grand mystery. Whatever the special reason, demand sterling moved up from $4.24½ on last Saturday to $4.33 today, a new high since October, 1919.

Continental rates also moved up to substantially higher levels, but the advance was checked on Thursday by the resignation of the Italian Cabinet, causing a reaction in lire checks from 4.62 to 4.64, but after this reaction the market for Italian exchange again became strong. French francs moved up in line with sterling at times, but did not make the same extent of gain. There was a steady demand for exchange on the former neutral countries and rates to those points were generally established during the week at new high figures during the year. This was especially the case with Holland, Sweden, Denmark and Spain. It was suggested in some quarters that this strength may have been due to accumulation for German account. Norwegian exchange, however, was extremely quiet and showed a receding tendency, possibly a result of cabled statements in regard to the attitude of the German Government in opposition to the dealings in mark exchange.

On Saturday there was a further rise in foreign exchange. Sterling established a new high on the movement, going to $4.33 for demand, as compared with $4.31 at the close yesterday. French francs went up 4½ points to 8.40 cents and then reacted to 8.38½. Even Italian lire recovered. Gains of 8 to 20 points were made in Scandinavian rates. On the 22-point rise Dutch exchange made a new high at 37.30. The discount of Canadian dollars was reduced to the lowest figure since the recovery began.

SHARP UPTURN MARKS WEEK'S WHEAT TRADE

The reported reserve stock position of wheat in Europe was credited with being a prime bullish influence in the wheat market during the past week.

Nearly every day the past week witnessed a continuance of climbing quotations for wheat, with buying power in the markets more active than had been seen before in several months. There was a report that the stock on hand at Liverpool was down to 760,000 bushels as against 6,900,000 bushels a year ago. Drouth in various European countries, France in particular, was reported. Liverpool and Buenos Ayres markets advanced.

A reported somewhat impossible outlook for the growing domestic winter crop was likewise a factor, and so, too, was a reduction of 40,000,000 bushels in the estimated yield of Australia. Under these circumstances, the advance of prices was unusually swift, it being contended by some that United States hard winter wheat was the cheapest wheat in the world.

Corn and oats prices reflected in some degree the action of the wheat market.

Provisions rose in value with hogs and grain.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Wheat closed lower, corn higher on the Merchants' Exchange Saturday. The net change in wheat futures was not wide. The sterling exchange rate advance was a supporting factor.

In the cash grain movement Saturday wheat dragged and prices were a full 2c lower. Cash corn was steady to ½c higher. There was a good general demand and offerings were well taken. Cash oats were in fair demand. Prices were steady to ½c lower.

The three Northwestern markets combined Saturday had 484 cars of wheat, compared with 590 a week ago and 717 last year. Minneapolis today receiving 180 cars, Duluth 33 and Winnipeg 27.

Primary receipts of wheat were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 884,000 bushels compared with 857,000 week ago and 790,000 last year. Corn receipts were lighter than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 2,087,000 bushels compared with 2,187,000 week ago and 1,116,00 last year. Oats receipts were lighter than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 637,000 bushels compared with 662,000 week ago and 437,000 last year.

Primary shipments of wheat were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago being 475,000 bushels compared with 492,000 week ago and 816,000 last year. Corn shipments were heavier than a week ago and heavier than year ago, being 1,673,000 bushels, compared with 1,282,000 week ago and 489,000 last year. Oats shipments were heavier than a week ago and heavier last year, being 457,000 bushels compared with 456,000 week ago and 454,000 last year.

Clearances today were 638,000 bushels of wheat 999,000 bushels, of corn 30,000 bushels of oats, 6000 bbls of flour and 665,000 bushels of wheat and flour.

Local wheat receipts Saturday, which were 97,200 compared with 70,800 a week ago and 165,600 last year, included 35 cars local and 46 through. Corn receipts, which were 139,100, compared with 126,100 a week ago and 75,400 last year, included 82 cars local and 25 through. Oats receipts, which were 106,000, compared with 74,000 a week ago and 42,000 last year, included 36 cars local and 17 through.

PROFIT-TAKING IN WHEAT AND PRICES RANGE DOWN

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—Slackening of the rush to buy had a tendency today to ease down prices in the wheat market. Closing quotations were unsettled, ½c to 1⅛c net lower, with May at $1.25 to $1.25⅛ and July $1.08¼ to $1.08½. Corn scored a gain of ⅝c to 1⅛c. Oats finished unchanged to ⅛c off, and provisions unchanged to a decline of 5c.

It was evident from the start that demand for wheat had become less urgent than has been the rule of late. Even apart from the usual week-end disposition to realize profits on holdings, there were signs of lessened confidence that the advance of prices was to continue, and many traders were apparently inclined to dwell upon supposed indications of a pause in the upward course of foreign values.

Export inquiry was relatively slow, and domestic milling call seemed also to have lost some of its display of spirit. Interest rather lagged, too, regarding the crop outlook Southwest in the absence of any striking fresh development. The burden of most of the cable dispatches received here was that the advance had been overdone, and it was generally anticipated that the United States visible supply total on Monday would show an increase.

For the first time in a long while the corn market showed independent strength as compared with wheat. Oats were steadied by the action of corn. Predictions were current that there would be an actual shortage of coarse grain prior to a new crop.

Provisions at first advanced, in line with the hog market, but later receded on account of realizing sales.

New Yor Coffee Market.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The market for coffee futures remained quiet but showed continued steadiness today on the steadier showing of the Brazilian cables and talk of a slowly improving trade demand. The opening was 2 to 4 points higher and active months sold five to nine points above last night's final figures with May touching 856. Last prices were the best of the day with the market showing a net advance of 8 to 10 points. Sales were estimated at about 10,000 bags. Cable advices stated that he German Government was expected to impose a new coffee duty of 32 marks per pound which would make coffee a luxury article, but the report had little or no apparent effect on the market. March, 8.63c; May, 8.58c; July 8.49c; September, 8.48c; October, 8.47c; December, 8.45c.

STEER CATTLE AND HOG PRICES TEND UPWARD

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last week.	Prev. week.	Year ago.
Cattle and calves	17,895	19,449	19,013
Hogs	77,981	82,019	96,176
Sheep	7,801	8,660	6,999
Total	103,677	110,128	122,188

Under continued moderate receipts, the tendency was higher in hogs, sheep, lambs and steer cattle at the St. Louis National Stock Yards last week, and lower in some classes of butcher cattle—particularly yearlings. The improvement in killing steers amounts to 15c to 25c, with stockers and feeders up 25c, spots more. Butcher cows average about steady for the period, and canner and cutter cows 15c to 25c higher. Bulls were merely steady, however, and the depreciation in yearlings or lightweight steers and heifers was from 25c to $1, with most loss occurring on the better grades. The trade in yearlings was virtually demoralized at times. Bad trade was the result of large receipts and lax demand. Somewhat better movement was noted toward the close of the week. Quality of steer receipts graded medium to plain, with virtually no well-finished lots represented. The top, $7.50 per cwt., was paid for a load of 1033-lb. long yearling steers. Several other cars of steers of various weights moved around $7 to $7.25, while a spread of $6 to $6.75 caught most of the killing steers available. Yearling stock changed hands largely from $3.50 to $6.25. Butcher cows varied from $3.75 to $4.75 largely, with best around $5. Cutter cows cleared from $2.75 to $3.50 and canners from $2.25 to $2.75. Beef bulls were available at $4.50 to $5.25 and bolognas at $3.50 to $4.50. The demand was broad for all classes of stocker and feeder cattle—steers as well as she-stock. The top for steers was $6.60 per cwt., paid for a choice load of feeders. Several cars of feeders cleared around $6 and up to $6.35, while a spread of $4.25 to $6 caught the bulk of all stocker and feeder steers sold. Veal calves moved upward about 50c. The practical top for the week was $11.50 and most of the other good lights cleared from $10.50 to the top.

Hog Market Irregular.

Receipts at the hog house the past week were moderate for this time of year, totaling only 77,891, whereas the corresponding period of last year witnessed the arrival of 96,176. Market was in a more or less unsettled state and prices worked up and down from day to day, but with only moderate changes recorded. An important feature of the trade was the narrow spread in prices due to an improved demand for butcher hogs and falling off in the inquiry for shipping lights and pigs. In fact, at times there was no distinction in a price way between light hogs weighing 150 to 170 pounds and butcher hogs of 200 to 230 pounds average. The top for the week on shipping lights was $9.60, with butchers up to $9.50 and bulk of all sales in a narrow spread of $9.25@9.50. General market is 50 cents higher for the week.

Sheep Market Strong.

Receipts of sheep and lambs the past week totaled the modest number of 7800, compared with a total of 8660 a week previous. Market was strong and active all during the week, with advancing prices after the initial session, which moved the top on Thursday to $13.85, recording the highest level since July, 1920, and a 50-cent advance over the close of the preceding week. Bulk of the good lambs sold in a spread of $13.35@13.65 and culls from $9@10. A few light yearling wethers sold up to $11.75. Fat sheep continue unchanged with choice handy-weight ewes selling from $7@7.25, medium and heavy mutton sheep from $6@6.50, canners $1@2 and choppers and bucks from $2.50@4.

Horse and mule receipts totaled fair for the week, the commission run comprising about 500 horses and 2000 mules. Average selling was slightly lower than the previous week, with most weakness appearing in big, plain work horses, in-between grades of horses and little trashy mules. There were many of the latter type offered and this was largely responsible for the depression. Plain mules of the farm type also sold cheaper.

The best sellers of the week were wagon horses and chunks, 1200 to 1400 pounds; good big mules with flesh and quality and good haired, fat cotton mules.

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Unsettled wage conditions in New England were given as an added cause for unsettled cloth markets today. Gray goods were easier under a light demand. Silk goods were quiet. Butter Market Review.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—Steady prices in this week's butter market, an unusual condition at this time of the year developed unexpectedly "like a lull after a storm," according to H. C. Taylor, chief of the Chicago Bureau of Markets and crop estimates, United States Department of Agricultural in a review of butter market conditions today.

The Chicago market his report said, remained unchanged at 37 cents a pound during the entire week, while the New York market varied but ½ a cent.

"After long periods of depression during the fall and early winter months, the markets apparently reached bottom," the bureau report said. "Buyers, both consumptive and speculative jumped into increase stocks at bottom prices. This led to a sharp reaction which proved only temporary and the markets again became weak and unsettled. Receipts became lighter due to severe weather, low domestic prices and firmer foreign markets which decreased imports.

"Low prices increased a consumption and the markets gradually during the week ending Feb. 4, and the week previous resumed steady healthy positions with supplies just about sufficient to meet a regular consumptive demand."

Metals at St. Louis.

Lead was unchanged in St. Louis today at $4.35@4.40 per 100 pounds.

Slab zinc also unchanged at $4.52½@4.65 per 100 pounds.

COTTON CLOSES LOWER ON NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The recoveries of the last three or four days were followed by reactions in the cotton market this morning. The disposition to take profits on recent purchases was probably increased by nervousness over labor conditions among New England mills and the unsettled ruling of the cotton goods market. Otherwise, no special news feature was mentioned on the decline, which carried May contracts off to 16.40c, or 34 points below the high level of yesterday and 24 points net lower. That delivery closed at a net decline of 15 to 23 points.

The opening was irregular at a decline of 3 points to an advance of 2 points. There were overnight buying orders around the ring and the firmness of foreign exchange encouraged some scattered buying in anticipation that the increased buying power of foreign money would revive export demand. Realizing for over the week-end supplied the demand, however, while there was also some selling by houses with Southwestern connections, and the market gradually worked lower during the late forenoon. March sold off to 16.70c and July 16c, or 20 to 24 points net lower, and the last prices were approximately the lowest of the day.

Sales of print cloths in the Fall River market were estimated at 90,000 pieces for the week, and curtailment of production at 60,000. It is rumored that manufacturers at Fall River and some of the other larger textile centers are likely to announce wage reductions in the near future, in line with those reported at other New England points. Labor leaders are quoted to the effect that a strike of 150,000 textile workers will be called on Feb. 13, and that it may eventually involve half a million men. Rumors that two or three more New England mills had been closed by strikes were circulating here late in the morning, but no definite figures on the number of operatives involved were mentioned.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance was estimated at 100,000 bales, against 140,000 last year.

Anglo-American Mill Company
Mfrs. Community Flour Mills

Henry Ford says
In the Review of Reviews:

"A few decades ago, there were local flour mills in the small towns. Then came patent processes, big mills, consolidation. The little mills were shut down. Now they are making small flour mill plants which will produce the same flour in very small establishments and we shall be returning presently to the old system of the local mill, supplying the local market. This will cut out another big item of waste transportation."

Invest in the company making these SMALL FLOUR MILL PLANTS

The complete flour mills made by this company enable small firms to produce nationally known flour right in their own communities at less cost than the big mills.

To date more than $20,000,000 worth of these mills have been sold, and the anticipated business is many times greater.

The original investment in this company was $10,000, increased later, through preferred stock (since retired) to $250,000. The net earnings since organization in 1910 exceed $1,300,000.

This modern invention, the Community Marvel Mill, is revolutionizing the flour milling business.

The 8% Participating Preferred Stock issued by the Anglo-American Mill Company has many attractive features.

LONDON BOUDOIR GOSSIP IS BUSY WITH FUTURE OF CHILD

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch. Copyright, 1922.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Although marriages are said to be made in heaven, they are first discussed in boudoirs. Consequently any number of titled society women, rather impoverished, are interested in the little girl who has blessed the Marquis of Blandford and his wife. The baby was christened, recently, Sarah Consuelo Spencer-Churchill, in St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, where her parents were married.

She inherits the first name from the great Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, the second from her grandmother, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt. So, in the natural course of events, it is likely that this very young aristocrat will inherit a fortune and be a "great catch."

If you write me TODAY I will send you a FREE TRIAL of mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will surely convince you as it has me. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. ALKALI IN SHAMPOOS BAD FOR WASHING HAIR

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful of Mulsified is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

DIRECTORS OF CHAMBER OPPOSED TO BONUS BILL

Raising Money Required Would Put Increased Burden on Business, Says Statement.

The Board of Directors of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce yesterday went on record as opposed to legislation in favor of the soldier bonus bill, now before Congress. The vote was taken on four proposals submitted by the United States Chamber of Commerce, in a referendum among Chambers of Commerce throughout the United States, and followed the appearance Friday, before the directors, of a committee of local American Legion officials, headed by Jerome F. Duggan, chairman of the Legion's City Executive Committee, who asked for indorsement of the bill.

A formal statement by the directors, giving reasons for opposing the bill, declared that billions of dollars required would add to the already stressed business situation and unemployment problem. It pointed out that recent developments indicate that heavy additional taxation and the sale of new bonds would be necessary to raise funds for the bonus payment.

The four proposals voted upon were: (a) Federal appropriations to finance men in tilling the soil; (b) appropriations to enable men to build homes; (c) legislation and appropriations for vocational training and (d) legislation for a geenral bonus in cash or in deferred payments.

GARAGE SITE BUYING, WEEK'S REALTY FEATURE

Famous & Barr Store Obtains Downtown Location, While Euc-Led Co. Gets West End Property.

OTHER DEALS INVOLVE LARGE EXPENDITURES

Negotiations Completed by One Firm for Large Number of Loans in Connection With Building.

By Berry Moore.

Carrying through of plans for public and semi-public garages for both housing and parking purposes on an extensive scale, involving large expenditures for sites, formed the chief feature of the week in the real estate field. The most notable transactions for sites in this connection were made on behalf of Euc-Led Investment Co., and the Famous & Barr store, that for the latter having been published exclusively in the Post-Dispatch during the week. These transactions are noteworthy as constituting new factors in the real estate situation in St. Louis.

The Euc-Led company, composed of clients of the Weisels-Gerhart Co., has bought the northwest corner of Euclid and Laclede avenues as a site for a public garage with a capacity of 400 cars. The cost of the building will be $120,000, in addition to the site, for which, it is understood $30,000 was paid. The transaction was made through the Weisels-Gerhart Co., the former owner of the site being the Provident Realty & Investment Co.

The site has 200 feet on Laclede and 100 feet on Euclid. The structure, for which ground has been broken, will have three stories. The plans will be drawn by W. E. Mills, architect.

Got Permit Months Ago.

The permit for the garage was obtained several months previously to the enactment of the ordinance which requires that 75 per cent of the signatures of owners of property in the block and 75 per cent of the owners of the property directly across the street from the main entrance of the proposed garage shall be obtained. This ordinance precludes the erection of any more garages in the second residential or commercial districts under the zoning ordinance, according to Weisels. It is predicted that it will hardly be possible to obtain a permit for construction of a public garage anywhere in the West End by reason of the inability to obtain the necessary signatures required by the ordinance.

Euclid and Laclede avenues is a transfer point and is in the vicinity of the Barnes and the St. Louis hospital and the New Jewish Hospital, Shriner's Hospital for children, the Buckingham Hotel and the new Chase apartments. It is in a district in which housing facilities for automobiles are in urgent demand.

The Weisels-Gerhart company recently effected a sale of the business building at the northeast corner of Euclid and Laclede avenues for $65,000 and of the northwest corner of Pine and Euclid avenues to interests having plans for a six-story fire-proof building.

$100,000 Price Paid.

The deal through which the Famous & Barr Co. acquired a half block on the east side of Seventh street, extending from Walnut to Elm street, as a site for a four or six story parking garage to be constructed at a cost of $400,000 for the free use of its customers, was a noteworthy feature. The price paid for the site was $100,000, which will bring the investment up to $500,000.

The seller was John McCawley, whose tenure of the site was in the form of an option on the property, acquired several weeks ago from the Madill estate, represented by the St. Louis Union Trust Co., and others, through Albert T. Terry & Co. As was told exclusively in the Post-Dispatch, McCawley was forming a syndicate to erect a garage on a large scale when the Famous & Barr Co. became interested in the site.

The building will cover the entire site. An electrical signal device will communicate with the stores to indicate when machines are wanted.

Recently Scruggs-Vandervoort & Barney acquired a site on the south side of St. Charles street between Eleventh and Twelfth streets for a parking garage for the free use of its customers. Construction of the building is progressing. It will be of large capacity and will be operated on a plan similar to that to be employed by the Famous & Barr Co.

Plan Originated Here.

According to department store managers, St. Louis revels in the distinction of being the first city in which parking garages will have been constructed by department stores or other lines of business for the free use of customers. The purpose of these garages is to prevent parking congestion around the stores and thus afford more elbow room for shoppers.

Bids are being taken on the large building to be erected at the northwest corner of Olive and Beaumont streets and which has been bought by the Universal Co. for $300,000. This concern makes tops and bodies and upholstery for automobiles.

Negotiations have been completed with the S. Van Raalte Investment Co., of which Simon Van Raalte is president, for a loan of $150,000 to be used toward the construction of the building. The Huse estate, the former owner of the site, has entered into a contract by which it will accept a deed of trust for $100,000 to be paid for the ground and for $25,000 advanced towards construction of the building.

Loans Arranged For.

The deal was arranged through the Weisels-Gerhart company in connection with Harry Horwitz, who conceived the project and who has been awarded the contract for its construction. This is the largest of a number of deals engineered by Horowitz on Olive street and on Delmar boulevard, all of which have been a source of large profit to him.

Negotiations were concluded during the week with the Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co., of which Theodore Hemmelmann, vice president of the International Bank, is president, for a large number of loans for various building enterprises and large investments which are now being made on a cash basis. Several of these loans being of large magnitude, will be offered in the serial note debenture form.

$300 BUILDING PROFITS EXEMPT FROM INCOME TAX

Ruling on Loan Association Expected to Give Impetus to Funds, Says Official of League.

FUNDS AT 4 PER CENT PREDICTED SOON

St. Louis Members Will Discuss Plans for Increased Activity at Meeting Wednesday — State Campaign On.

Dividends or profits from building and loan associations to the amount of $300 a year for the next five years have been exempted from the Federal income tax, under a ruling of the Treasury Department, Robert J. Richardson, Missouri member of the executive committee of the United States League of Building and Loan Associations, has been notified.

This exemption, says Richardson, only applies to the old-line, mutual, co-operative associations, of which there are 24 in St. Louis and suburbs, and 20 in the State. It means that savings up to $5000 will not be assessed under the Federal income tax law, because the associations are paying an average of 6 per cent interest. It also means building loans for about 4 per cent.

Government recognition of the work old line associations are doing to convert renters into home-owners, says Richardson, followed a report by the United States Housing Corporation that the co-operative associations afford the most practical solution to the housing problem. Loans are made to buy or build homes, and the association members divide the profits. It is designed to reach those of smaller or moderate earnings.

Richardson says the latest report shows combined assets of more than $2,500,000,000 among the 8000 associations of the league, and predicts that the tax-exemption ruling will bring in many more millions in a short time, and that this will result in a great impetus to the construction of low and medium priced homes.

The St. Louis League of Building and Loan Associations at noon next Wednesday at the American Annex will discuss plans to extend the activities of the local associations. The campaign is linked up with the State league of which Walter F. Page of Kansas City is president.

An hour spent with one of our salesmen will greatly simplify your housing problem and we hope that you will avail yourself of this opportunity. Write or call for our sales list and map of Webster.

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS COUNTRY HOUSE WILL COST BUT $20,000

Place Will Be a Retreat in Event of Losing Election, Rumor Says.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1922.)

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Exaggerated accounts of Premier Lloyd George's contemplated expenditure on his new country house in Surrey having gained ground, he now says it will cost not £15,000, but £5000, nominally about $25,000, now a little more than $20,000. It is situated in one of the most famous beauty spots in this country and is within walking distance of three golf courses.

The place will be ready for occupation this summer, which has given rise to the rumor that the Premier is planning a quiet retreat in view of the possible loss of his office at the general election.

Lloyd George has found that Walton Heath gave him no privacy for golf, as strangers began to frequent it.

His new house is small, so entertaining there must be strictly limited.

IRISH GOVERNMENT WILL NAME ULSTER COMMITTEE

Two Black and Tans and Farmer Shot to Death as Outrages Continue.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Feb. 4.—Michael Collins, the provisional President, has informed a deputation for Derry that the provisional Government intends to establish an advisory committee to counsel it on matters concerning Northeast Ulster.

Outrages continue, including shootings and robberies. Two "black and tans" Constables, Kershaw and Gourlie, were shot dead in Clare County last night. A farmer was killed by shots fired through the door of his house near Thurles.

BELIEVES HUSBAND WAS SLAIN

Mrs. Doris Bryant of East St. Louis, has filed an application in the Probate Court at Belleville asking that she be appointed administrator of the estate of her husband, James H. Bryant, real estate operator, who mysteriously disappeared last October, and who, she believes, has been murdered. Bryant had several pieces of property recorded in his name, and Mrs. Bryant desires to be authorized to handle this property.

Anthony A. Hunt, an attorney at East St. Louis, claims the property, and states that he permitted the property to be recorded in Bryant's name so that Bryant could qualify as a bondsman for Hunt's clients. Hunt has instituted a suit in the Circuit Court at Belleville to clear the title to the property, so that the title will be vested in him.

AUTHOR HAS TWO PLAYS RUNNING IN LONDON

Skit by Gertrude Jennings on Mrs. Asquith's Literary Efforts Sought by Dillingham.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

(Copyright, 1922, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Gertrude Jennings has the unique distinction as a woman playwright of occupying two London theaters with her plays at the same time. "Money Does Not Matter," a light, up-to-date comedy, produced by Donald Calthrop, at the Aldwych Theater, is her latest success, and it is said that an agent of Charles Dillingham is trying to buy the rights of this play as well as "Me and My Diary" and "Jug."

"Me and My Diary" is a good-natured skit on Mrs. Asquith's literary efforts, but "Money Does Not Matter" is a more ambitious comedy of manners and sentiment, in which the foibles, mannerisms and current slang of the day are faithfully reproduced. It was received with great favor and admirably acted.

"The Bird of Paradise" has risen like a phoenix at the Garrick Theater, and with Miss Millette Kershaw as the heroine has had even a warmer reception than on its original production. It is one of the few plays now being performed here of which the advance booking promises a long success. Miss Kershaw has made a distinct hit; all the critics welcoming her as an emotional actress of rare power and charm.

Gilbert Frankau has hit upon a new advertising stunt for novelists by utilizing his emergence from the divorce court to advertise his new story, "The Love Story of Aliette Brunton." Frankau was corespondent in the divorce suit brought by Leon Quartermaine, the actor, against his wife Aimee. Frankau seized upon the imminent granting of the decree absolute to publish his book, with this dedication to Aimee:

"To my wife and loyal associate, Aimee Deburgh Frankau, in all love and a great reverence, this story of a woman's courage."

In actual fact, Aimee was not his wife in the eyes of the law when he published his book, but its dedication attracted attention and secured publicity for the impending decree of divorce. In the story a charming woman is unhappily married. She meets a man with whom she falls deeply in love and they elope, but her husband revengefully refuses to divorce her. The problem Frankau presents is whether the husband is justified or not in leaving the couple to live under the social disability of not being wed.

BOY READS SAFETY SIGN; HURT

Runs After Placarded Street Car—Hit by Auto.

Fred Schobert, 13 years old, of Belleville suffered bruises and cuts when he was hit by an automobile driven by Alois Brandenburger on Sycamore street, between Douglas avenue and Benton street. The boy was running after the "safety first" car of the East St. Louis and Suburban Railway Co. to read some of the safety first mottos and sayings when he ran squarely into Brandenburger's auto.

Brandenburger took the boy to a hospital where examination disclosed that he was not seriously injured.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING OF VETERANS DISCUSSED BY FORBES

Head of Bureau Says Some Former Soldiers Fail to Grasp Their Opportunity.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Declaring "some ex-service men" are taking training "for the sole purpose of remaining on the payroll and drawing vocational maintenance pay, which ranges from $100 to $170 per month," Col. Charles R. Forbes, director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, told the concluding session today of the disabled American veterans of the world war convention that "others have not grasped the real opportunity to make themselves useful citizens."

Col. Forbes said the men taking vocational training to stay on the payroll formed "only a very small percentage, but many had not grasped the real opportunity." He added that 105,000 were taking training at present and that it was estimated the number will increase to 200,000 within two years.

The director told the conference that the bureau contemplated expenditures totaling about $510,000,000 next year, including $167,500,000 for vocational training, $64,600,000 for medical and hospital services; $81,700,000 for war risk term insurance payments; $161,000,000 for disability compensation claims; $2,000,000 for retroactive Government allowances; $31,500,000 for salaries, rent and other administrative items and $5,700,000 for United States Government life insurance claims, which will be paid chiefly out of premiums.

WORLD COURT OF JUSTICE APPROVES JUDGE'S OATH

Spirited Debate Takes Place on Question of Whether Members Should Wear Robes.

By the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 4.—The International Court of Justice today approved of the form of the oath to be taken by its Judges. It reads:

"I solemnly declare that I will exercise my powers and duties honorably, faithfully, impartially and conscientiously."

The question of social precedence of the Judges was left to the League of Nations to ascertain from the various countries from which the Judges come.

Judge Altamira's objection to the adoption of robes as the official garb of the Judges took the form of a spirited protest today.

"We should renounce this superstition," he said. "It would disappoint the public opinion which has greeted the court as representing the dawn of a new era if we adopted antiquated ceremonials. It would harmonize with the character of the court if we exhibit a spirit of simplicity from the very beginning."

KENYON WILL NOT RESIGN UNTIL SALARY QUESTION IS SETTLED

Gives Decision in Message to Iowa Governor—Special Legislation Suggested by Friends.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Io., Feb. 4.—Governor N. E. Kendall received a telegram from W. S. Kenyon today stating that he will not resign his seat in the United States Senate to accept the appointment of Circuit Judge of the Eighth Judicial District until the constitutional question raised has been settled.

The obstacle was said here to be the provision against acceptance by a Congressman of an office in which the salary was increased during his congressional service. Senator Kenyon's friends said they thought he would accept the judgeship at the old salary, and Congress could pass special legislation later increasing his pay.

SAYS HE WANTS PRESIDENCY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—A post card signed "Louis A. Baird," and sent from St. Louis, was received today by Maj. Charles M. Stedman, Democrat of North Carolina, the only Confederate veteran in Congress. The card said:

"I beg pardon. I am a candidate for Republican President nomination, convention of 1924. I was a candidate at Chicago National Republican convention of 1920 and I was honored by one vote of the national delegates. I am a small man, age 43, bachelor, lawyer, bald headed, blue eyes. I was a 'Dixie' soldier 1898, a Texas volunteer, Spanish war. Later in Philippines, 1900, and one of my grandparents came from North Carolina to Illinois in 1840. Hurrah! Dixie. Hope to meet you some day. You tell North Carolina people of Baird."

MARINES REJECT ONE OF ECONOMIES BY DAWES

Corps Will Not Accept Undershirts Twice Weight Prescribed for Tropical Wear.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Surplus army undershirts, issued to the Marine Corps through the activities of the budget bureau, will not be issued by members of the corps, it was indicated authoritatively today at the Navy Department. Director Dawes of the bureau referred to this transaction at yesterday's business meeting of the Government as an instance of failure of the departments to co-operate in saving Government expeditures which budget officials had succeeded in correcting.

It was said at the Navy Department that the Marine Corps was in the market for four-ounce shirts for use of the men in the tropics. The army's surplus shirts weigh more than eight ounces and were regarded as unsuitable for troops in warm climates. It also was said the difference in cost to the enlisted men would be virtually double.

"The men will not wear the army shirts anyhow," one official said, adding that it was hoped to turn the heavy garments back to the army stores.

In explanation of the broom incident, also mentioned by Director Dawes, it was said the Navy needed 12,000 brooms for deck, dock and yard use, the heaviest kind of service. A New York institution for the blind had offered to make these brooms at 55 cents each under navy specifications. The army had 330,000 surplus brooms of different makes, reported by navy inspectors as inferior in quality and unsuited for the purposes of the navy. They were priced by the Budget Bureau at 70 cents each and the letting of a broom contract to the New York institution at the 55-cent rate was recommended owing to these circumstances.

Thinks President's Budget Figures of the "Paper Variety."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Declaration that the economies which President Harding and Director Dawes of the budget announced yesterday at the second business meeting of the Government were largely of a "paper" variety, was made today by Representative Byrne of South Carolina, a Democratic member of the House Appropriations Committee, who, in a formal statement, voiced the "fear" that Mr. Harding had been so absorbed in other matters that he was not conversant "with the existing situation" in Government finances.

"According to the press," Byrnes said, "a direct saving of $32,000,000 and an indirect saving of more than $140,000,000 had been accomplished in less than six months. The fact is that, as against this alleged saving, the President, at the instance of the Budget Bureau, has recently submitted requests for additional appropriations as deficiencies, amounting to $180,704,286, and within a few days Congress will commence consideration of another deficiency bill to take care of this shortage in funds. This amount is in addition to the urgent deficiency bill appropriating $50,556,222, and the first deficiency bill appropriating $105,277,433. If the $180,704,286 now asked by the President is granted it will make the total deficiencies to date $336,537,953."

Representative Byrnes said that if the amounts mentioned had been saved the treasury should show it. He declared that no such showing, however, had been made.

BARRETT MAKES A PLEA FOR MISSOURI'S RURAL DISTRICTS

Attorney-General Tells Junior C. of C. of Difficulties Experienced in Country Regions.

Attorney-General Jesse W. Barrett was the principal speaker at the annual banquet of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at the Planters Hotel last night. More than 600 persons were present, and other speakers were Frank B. Riley, lecturer, and Dr. William M. Hudson, president of Blackburn College.

Barrett's talk was a plea to St. Louisans to understand the difficulties encountered by citizens of the rural part of Missouri. The State could only advance as a whole, he said, and while it was true that St. Louis carried the lion's share of the tax burden, it also enjoyed the lion's share of the prosperity.

"When you talk of good roads, you visualize a broad, smooth automobile highway. When the Missouri farmer asks for a good road, he means one that is passable 12 months a year. The counties have their troubles. Eighty-eight of them lost in population during the last 10 years. In 1918 there were 9000 country schoolhouses in Missouri, nearly all of them having only one room; 4500 heated by stoves; 8000 poorly ventilated; 1800 without drinking water, and 2700 with open foundations."

He did not designate the specific measures by which the cities could help ameliorate these conditions.

RUSSIAN RELIEF MEETING

Plans for Providing 8000 Barrels of Flour to Be Discussed Wednesday.

A meeting to determine how St. Louis can provide 8000 barrels of flour for starving Russians, its allotment by the American Friends' Service Commission, has been called for Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. in the directors' room at the Merchants' Exchange, by the exchange president, George F. Powell. Business and trade organizations have been asked to send representatives.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

W. G. G.—The State of Arkansas has not provided a bonus for her soldiers.

I. O. W.—For information regarding a bakery school apply to the wholesale bakeries.

J. E. T.—Write to the International Feature Service, Inc., 226-238 Williams street, New York City.

F. H.—Read the motion picture magazines for schools instructing people how to write scenarios.

Y. W. C. A. GIRLS.—We have no record of the fortune telling game you refer to. Rules and games for fortune telling by cards can be read at the Public Library.

CONTEST.—The Edison contest for the best slogan was won by Henry C. Lawrence of Webster Groves. The slogan was, "A Fireside Encore of the Artist," for which $5500 was awarded to him.

GRACE.—Write the invitation to the surprise party in pen and ink. We would suggest using the form: You are cordially invited to attend a surprise party given in honor of Miss Blank's birthday; date and address. This would cover an informal party.

JUNE.—(1) Chalcedony is a gem named after a city in Asia Minor, Chalkedon, where it abounded. It is a crystalline variety of quartz of various shades of white, yellow, brown, green and blue. It is transparent or translucent, and some of the milk white varieties are opaque. The principal varieties are agate, which is banded and striped; carnelian, which is clear and of various shades of red; crysoprase is an apple-green variety; heliotrope or blood stone of a dark green color, with small spots of jasper; onyx, plasma, a dark green color, and sardonyx, a red banded variety of onyx. Chalcedony is found in Great Britain, in Brazil, and in a number of localities in Colorado and California. (2) The stone you name as "cardius" is sardonyx, a variety of quartz resembling onyx, usually consisting of layers of red (carnelian) and white (Chalcedony). We do not know of any firm handling these stones if the jewelers cannot tell you.

GEO. S. R.—The object of the Ter Muelen credit plan is to enable importers to furnish collateral from within their own country, which will protect the exporter of creditor countries. This permits resumption of trade without guarantees from the exporting Governments. The plan will work through an International Commission under the League of Nations, which will appraise the debtor country's assets, authorizing the debtor country to issue bonds in gold on the basis of the appraised assets. Trade terms are agreed upon by the importer and the exporter as usual and bonds are given as collateral. When the obligation is paid in full, the bonds are returned by the exporter to the importer and by him to his Government. Example: Germany's assets might be appraised as worth billions so Germany is authorized by the commission to issue bonds to her importers, who then order goods from the United States, giving the United States manufacturer the bonds to hold until the bill for the goods is paid. Upon full payment, the bonds are returned to the German importer who gives them back to the German Government.

RED—The following is the recipe for raviolo: 1½ cup flour, ½ egg, warm water, ¼ cup cracker crumbs, ½ cup grated Parmesan cheese, ¼ cup chopped cooked spinach, 1 egg, chicken stock, salt and pepper. Sift the flour on a board, make a depression in the center, dropping in the one-half egg, then moisten this with warm water to make a stiff dough. Knead until soft, cover, and let stand 10 minutes; then roll the dough as thin as a sheet of paper, using a rolling pin. Roll the sheets, cut them into strips two and three-fourths inches wide. Mix cracker crumbs, spinach and the egg; moisten with the chicken stock and season with salt and pepper. Place the mixture on the strips, putting three-fourths teaspoon on the lower half of the paste strips about two inches apart. Fold the upper part of the paste over the lower. Press edges together and between mixtures with tips of the thumbs, then cut apart, using a pastry jagger. Cook 10 minutes in the liquor in which the fowl has been cooked, take up with a skimmer, arrange a layer on hot serving dish, sprinkle generously with grated Parmesan cheese, cover with tomato sauce, serve at once.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(Prepared by a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

P.-D. READER.—You will probably need a peddler's license to sell the photographs from house to house. Inquire of the License Collector at the city hall.

RIGHT OR WRONG.—If you lived with the man as his common-law wife, you should have obtained a divorce before remarrying. If you merely lived with him without any thought of marriage, no divorce is necessary.

E. L. K.—As your father died before his mother and her estate was bequeathed to him, your mother is not an heir and under the circumstances according to law the estate left by your father belongs entirely to you.

POOR GIRL.—If your father's income is less than $780 per year, he is entitled to a blind person's pension of $300 per year, payable quarterly. He should apply to the Commission for the Blind, at Jefferson City, Mo., or to the Judge of the Probate Court in St. Louis, Fourth and Market streets, for a certificate showing that he is entitled to the pension.

M. K. T.—The husband can obtain absolute divorce, even though the wife is suing for separate maintenance, but the court would make an order compelling him to support his child, and also granting alimony to his wife, if they thought alimony was justified. (2) Ask the lawyer for an accounting, he may be entitled to the $50 as his fee, or he may have used it for court costs. (3) Write to the Clerk of the Court in which you think your husband is suing for the divorce.

YOURS TRULY.—The Missouri law authorizing deductions of gifts to charitable and religious organizations, etc., on income tax reports was approved Aug. 1, 1921, and contained an emergency clause providing that it should go into effect at once. The Attorney-General of Missouri ruled, however, that the clause could not properly be attached to this law and that it had no effect. Consequently the law did not come into force until 90 days after its approval, or Nov. 1, 1921. The only deductions allowed by the authorities are, therefore, those for gifts made in November and December.

SHYLOCK.—(1) You will need several licenses to carry on a loan business, they will depend entirely on the nature of your business. A city license to do a chattel loan business, for instance, costs $500 per year, and in addition a bond of $5000 must be furnished. Inquire of the License Collector at the city hall. (2) The legal rate of interest is 8 per cent, and if more than that is charged the borrower has a defense when sued. To charge more than 2 per cent a month is the crime of usury, the punishment for which is a fine of not less than $100, or more than $500, and imprisonment for not less than 30 or more than 90 days. (3) Only 10 per cent of the salary of the head of a family can be garnisheed.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Edwin Morgan, who departed this life Feb. 5, 1920:

Today recalls sad memories
Of a loved one, gone to rest.
And those who think of him today
Are the ones who loved him best.
Sadly missed by his WIFE, CHILDREN AND RELATIVES.

In loving memory of our dear father, Wm Plogstert, who departed this life Feb. 8, 1921.

Of a loved one gone to rest.
And those who think of him today
Are the ones who loved him best.
Sadly missed by his SONS.

In loving remembrance of my beloved husband, John H. Koöring, who died Feb. 6, 1916:

The depths of my sorrow I cannot tell
At the loss of my husband I loved so well;
And while he lies in peaceful sleep
His memory I shall always keep.
Sadly missed by HIS WIFE.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Antonette Grill, who departed this life Feb. 8, 1921:

Sadly missed by HER CHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Anna Link, who departed this life Feb. 3, 1920:

And those who think of her today
Are the ones who loved her best.
Sadly missed by
HER SONS, JOHN AND FRED.

In loving remembrance of our dear son and brother, Francis Joseph O'Brien, who departed this life Feb. 6, 1917:

You are gone, but not forgotten;
Nor shall you ever be; as long as life and memory lasts
We shall remember thee.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHER. (c)

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Wilhelmine Carstens, who departed this life Feb. 4, 1921:

In loving memory of my dear wife, Margaret Miller, who departed this life one year ago, Feb. 1, 1921:

Gone, dear mother, gone forever,
How we miss your loving face.
But you left us to remember
None can ever fill your place.
Sadly missed by husband, children, mother, sisters and brothers.

In loving remembrance of our dear husband, father, father-in-law and grandfather, Andrew Gross, who departed this life two years ago Feb. 2, 1920.

Our hearts in deep sorrow return to the day,
As memory recalls how death bore you away
And left us in tears, in grief and in woe
When we stood by your bed two years ago.
Sadly missed by HIS FAMILY.

In sad but sweet memory of our beloved son and brother, W. J. Shaughnessy, who departed this life Feb. 8 1920. In loving remembrance of his twenty-eighth birthday, Feb. 11, 1922.

In Valhalla, softly sleeping, our only brother lies.
Two years have passed since that sad day,
Our darling brother was called away.
Gone in life, but not in love.
Sadly missed by mother, sisters, relatives and all who love him.
MR. AND MRS. J. O. COLONIUS.

In loving remembrance of our darling son and brother, Allen (Buddie) Meyers, who died Feb 7, 1920.

Two years ago you left us;
How we miss you, Buddie, dear;
We have missed your little footsteps,
We have missed your smiling face.
A place is vacant in our hearts
Which never can be filled.

Just one year ago you left us.
How we miss you, Otillia, dear.
A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we love is stilled.
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
Sadly missed by her father, mother, children and friends.
MR. AND MRS. BANHOLZER. (c)

In loving memory of my dear wife, Carrie B. Moehrle, who departed this life two years ago, Feb. 5, 1920:

Days of sadness oft come o'er us;
Tears in silence often flow;
Love shall always keep you near us,
Though you left two years ago.
Never shall you be forgotten;
Never from our memory fade;
Loving hearts will always linger
Round the grave where you are laid.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, BROTHER AND SISTER-IN-LAW.

In sad but sweet remembrance of our only darling child, little Altia Muschany, who departed this life one year ago Feb. 5, 1921, at the tender age of 11 years, 7 days.

Do not ask us if we miss her;
Oh! There is such vacant place.
Oft we think we hear her little footsteps
Or we see her smiling face.
But she has gone to brighter regions,
Safe from every grief and care.
We shall meet again in heaven
And nevermore be parted there.
Angels guard you, darling child,
And may your harp ring loud and clear,
Leaving notes of love behind you
To the ones that love you dear.
Sadly missed by broken-hearted mother, father, grandparents, aunts, uncles and all those who loved her.

LLOYD GEORGE OPPOSES DELAYING CONFERENCE

Wants America to Take Part in Genoa Meeting, but Insists on March 8 as Date.

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG.

Special Cable Dispatch to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

(Copyright, 1922, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Premier Lloyd George is opposed to postponement of the Genoa conference, the World correspondent learned today. He hopes America will participate, but whether or not, he wants the conference convened on March 8, the date originally set.

In best informed circles it is now believed the conference will be essentially political, and that its economic aspects will largely depend on the results of these political discussions. It is probably some definite effort will be made on the inviolability of frontiers. A "gentlemen's agreement" on that point, such as those reached in Washington, would clear the way for considering the limitation of land armaments.

Gentlemen's Agreement.

No economic rehabilitation of Europe is possible without re-establishment of real peace throughout Europe, it is held, and the first step toward real peace is an agreement on inviolability of frontiers.

Dr. Giannini, Italian commercial expert in London, who will be one of the delegates to Genoa, today declared the Washington conference in reviving the old system of "gentlemen's agreements," had taught great lessons to Europe. He said:

"With the resurrection of the gentlemen's agreements a new system which was neither an alliance nor an entente, but a real pact or guarantee in which interested parties participated is a return to the good diplomatic practice."

The present crisis, Dr. Giannini says, had its origin in the lack of trust in those countries that have not yet settled their political and economic problems. There is a political risk, he said, in lending to such countries, and this political risk is an important element when the loan is granted.

Lack of Production.

The actual crisis arises from the fact that 300,000,000 are not producing at all or sufficiently. Russia does not produce, neither does Asia Minor or China, and the same applies to many countries of Eastern Europe, from Rumania to Esthonia.

"They don't work and don't produce sufficiently," the Italian delegate said. "Consequently they don't absorb. This is the situation and from this has originated the conference of Genoa. The program does not arise from the academic examination of economic problems. It has only been expressed on broad lines so that any of the countries invited may be free to bring, within the limits fixed at Cannes, all concrete problems which appear fundamentally for its economic life."

The key to this, Dr. Giannini said, is mainly political.

ATTORNEY CHARGED WITH STOCK MISAPPROPRIATION

Jean Tante, Complainant, Is Said to Be St. Louis Resident and Friend of New York Family

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Ralph Underhill, 45 years old, an attorney, was arrested and locked up in the Tombs today on an indictment returned Nov. 23 last, alleging grand larceny in the first degree. Jean Tante, said to be of St. Louis, the complainant, is said to be a close friend of the Underhill family.

The arrest, made by detective John Cuniff of District Attorney Banton's office in an apartment at 147 East Sixtieth street, in which the defendant was found with his wife and daughter, ended a search that took Cuniff through towns and cities in New York and adjoining States and included visits to the Underhill country place at Greenwich, Conn., and a very exclusive apartment building on Park avenue. At each place the detective was told that Underhill "had just left."

The indictment alleges but one larceny, the misappropriation of 100 shares of stock valued at $724. Walter Underhill, brother of the defendant, visited him in the Tombs and tried to arrange for bail.

BROTHERHOODS MAY MEET TO CONSIDER WAGE PARLEY

Railroad Men to Consider Invitation for Joint Conference Issued by Mine Workers' Head.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 4.—Railroad brotherhood chiefs will probably meet here early next week, it was learned today, to consider the invitation sent them by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, asking the transportation brotherhood executives and the other executives of the 16 railroad organizations to meet the miners' representatives in a joint conference to consider combined action to combat further wage cuts.

While brotherhood chiefs would not make any public statement until they have formally conferred, it was said they probably will meet with the miners and talk over the situation. One railroad leader today pointed out the vital connection between the wage cuts threatened against the miners and railway employes, saying a prolonged tie-up the coal mines would paralyze the transportation systems of the country, most of which depend upon coal for fuel.

FORMER MRS. J. J. ASTOR SAID TO HOLD INSURANCE SHARES

Lord Ribblesdale, Her Husband, One of Directors in Company Asking for Liquidation.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Lady Ribblesdale, formerly Mrs. John Jacob Astor of New York, is said to hold a large number of shares in the City Equitable Fire Insurance Company, whose directors have petitioned for the appointment of a liquidator and the winding up of the company's affairs.

Lord Ribblesdale, husband of the former Mrs. Astor and one of the most picturesque figures in the British Peerage, was one of the directors. He has been an invalid for some time, however, and presumably not in active touch with its affairs.

Another director was Sir Douglas Dawson, equerry in waiting to the King, whose resignation of his court position was rumored yesterday. Comparatively a few days ago, shares of the company were quoted at an enormous premium, and there is much speculation as to causes leading to the sudden collapse.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Feb. 4.—Samuel G. McClure, who has owned the Youngstown Telegram for 15 years, today announced its sale to the Scripps-McRae newspaper interests. The transfer will take effect Monday morning, McClure said. The sale price is reported to have been more than $750,000. McClure is said to have paid about $80,000 for the paper 15 years ago, when he came here from Columbus.

ENORMOUS CONCESSIONS TO KRUPP COMPANY IN RUSSIA

German Concern Obtains Grants to 100,000 Acres in Various Parts of Country.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Feb. 4.—Enormous concessions are soon to be granted to the German Krupp company in various parts of Russia for agricultural exploitation and for business and distilleries. M. Yakovanko, Minister of Agriculture, told the officials of the Rosta News Agency today that arrangements had been practically completed for granting to the Krupp concern concessions for 100,000 acres of land for agricultural pursuits in connection with sugar making and distillery privileges. Concessions also are pending he said, for nurseries in Southern Russia.

The Minister of Agriculture also said the concession would include fur trapping privileges in various parts of Russia, in connection with timber contracts which are also about to be signed with the Krupp people.

He expects to tackle England and Ireland.

Injunction Refused to Carpenters.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—Judge E. Sullivan today denied the petition of the carpenter's union for an injunction to restrain the Citizens' Committee, now trying to enforce the Landis building trades award from further activities. The carpenters' union refused to recognize the Landis award which was accepted last night by unions of the Chicago Building Trades Council. The carpenters will vote individually whether to recognize the Landis scale and return to work. In denying the injunction Judge Sullivan charged that members of the carpenters' union were driving other men from their work and stated he refused to range himself in support of such action.

A POET IN A DUNGEON

By ERNEST BRENNECKE.

Illustrated by Herman Palmer.

"B 8266," long-term convict in an Eastern penitentiary, writes "The Tale of a Walled Town," telling of the garish, violent life of the man forced into felony by circumstances, and of the terror and pathos of his monotonous existence behind the bars ::

AT A RICKETY table in a narrow, grimy cell, buried somewhere within the dark forbidding walls of an Eastern penitentiary, sits a huddled figure of a man, in coarse, dirty prisoner's stripes, shivering with the dank cold. For years he has not seen, and for years he will not see, the green flower-spangled fields, nor the gay crowded city streets, nor a lake lit by the autumn moon, nor the warm hearth where friends and lovers meet. Outside his tiny chamber he hears only the pacing of the jailer with his jingling keys and the occasional distant metallic slamming of a door. Through his tiny grated window he sees just a minute, maddening patch of the infinite blue of the sky.

His fingers are stiff and blue, and gnarled with terrible penal labor, but they wield a busy pencil—for this convict is writing poetry.

He is writing passionately of the prison life, and of the great world outside, which he never sees. And to that outside world which has condemned him to a living death, he has just presented one of the most eloquent and affecting volumes of verse ever written by an American.

The poet's name? There are few who know. When the gates of a prison have once clashed together behind you, your personal identity is lost—you become a mere number. And so an added touch of poignancy has been added to this slim, yellow volume, "A Tale of a Walled Town" (Lippincott, 1921), which lies before me, for in place of the author's name I read only the legend "By B 8266." In these hundred or so pages of verse a great sensitive soul has given remarkable expression to the physical and mental horror, the unutterable longings that assail the heart of the long-termer in his "city of a thousand cells—a thousand individual hells," where "never a day drags slowly by but that he sees a century die." "What voices call!" he cries, when he hears the south wind and thinks of "the budding rose, and the far seas, and the green grass and the green trees, and the rain and sun and cloud, and God o'er all."

A criminal this poet certainly is; he has committed a transgression serious enough to bring him a long-term sentence, and there is no indication that he is an innocent victim of the law. Yet he cannot be a hardened, calloused, unregenerate rascal. Those who have seen him report that he is a shy, gentle personality, a man of great charm and gentleness of manner, of wide education and considerable knowledge of life and art and literature. He is a great admirer of Wells' "Outline of History." He chats freely to all visitors who are permitted to see him, and talks intelligently of the latest books, magazines and newspapers. Some of his own poems have appeared in Life, Judge and the New York Times.

The long poem of 12 stanzas with which his book opens presents a thrilling story, and possibly an illuminating commentary on the prison-poet's way of looking at the distressing facts of his life. This "Tale of a Walled Town" deals with a convict like himself, who died after seven terrible years of imprisonment and whose spirit still haunts the place and tells the sordid, tragic story of his life. Deserted by father and mother, the youth has grown up without any of the warm care and affection he craves. He wanders in misery over the earth, falls in love, tastes the maddening sweetness of the kisses of requited affection, elopes, and marries the woman of his choice. But his hymeneal ecstasies are short-lived. In his anxiety to please his wife, who is overfond of expensive raiment and adornment, he steals, is apprehended, shown no mercy, and sentenced. He serves his term and is released. He rushes to begin a new life and to find consolation in the arms of his beloved wife—and finds her dead, the victim of a shameful betrayal. Unstrung, and goaded by despair, he commits the act that finally blasts his life:

> There was a man—a rich man's son—
> Toll slowly!
> He coveted that I had won,
> And for her feet a web had spun.
> I faced him of a winter's night,
> When all the world about was white,
> As was his face in the firelight,
> Looking on me.
> When doom comes, with stern Minos face,
> Some rise and hail it, in their place,
> And some—they grovel on their face;
> And thus did he.
> For such as he there was no prayer;
> Toll slowly!
> I struck; and when I left him there,
> His blood had crimsoned all his hair.

Having now been made a murderer by such unutterably cruel circumstances, he is again incarcerated, never to return to the world. His hair turns white as he paces endlessly up and down his cell—five paces up, five paces down, day in, day out. Bitterly he watches the rotting of his soul and body, until "upon a black midnight" he hangs himself, and death brings a welcome relief.

Thus ends the hapless murderer's story, told with unexampled power and sympathy, punctuated throughout by the refrain "Toll slowly!" of the matins and vesper bells. And the poem itself ends in a note of longing, and in a wild, shrieking note of protest to heaven against the horrors of imprisonment:

> Upon a wheel of solitude
> They bind them of defiant mood,
> And break them; and they call it good,
> That fear doth fall
> Upon them; and no more again
> They stand among their fellowmen,
> Straight-kneed, and level-eyed, as when
> They passed the wall.
> O better far that death should be
> Of every crime the penalty!

We cannot tell just how far the real life story of B 8266 coincides with the events narrated in this strikingly realistic prison poem. We must not, as has been done in a recent review, take the lurid invented story as authentic autobiography in all its details. It is manifestly an act of gross unfairness to the unfortunate poet to assume that B 8266 is a murderer himself because he has chosen to picture thus vividly and sympathetically the experiences and emotions of a slayer.

There are passages, however, in which the real personality of the convict-poet may certainly be said to break through the fictional events he relates. The poignant opening lines, for instance, that cannot fail to inspire the reader with the very essence of tragic pity, could scarcely voice a mere imagined mood:

> Ours is a grimy bit of blue,
> And very small;
> And sunbeams scarce adventure to > O'ertop the wall.
> A bird that flutters swiftly by;
> A wind that passes with a sigh;
> A cloudlet sailing slow and high;
> And that is all.
> O matins, and O vesper bells,
> Toll slowly!

It is likewise the man himself, the real prisoner, who has deeply felt the pangs and tortures, "the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune," when he philosophizes thus feelingly, and in general, but grippingly realistic terms, about the dismal lot of the felon:

> It matters not what thing I did;
> Toll slowly!
> I deemed the thing was safely hid
> And dared to walk the throng amid.
> Justice of men is sure to smite—
> Jaws of a trap that sudden bite.
> I walk no more in the sunlight
> Without the wall.
> And seven bars there are that lie
> Across my little square of sky;
> And seem to bar e'en God on high
> From out the wall.
> And seven bars there are that keep
> Toll slowly!
> Me safe in waking and in sleep;
> And if I curse, and if I weep.

And yet there is little bile and bitterness in most of the lyrics of B 8266. There is little of that savage revolt against society that one might expect in a work written under these circumstances. Subjected to the terrible sharp vengeance of the State, he can pen a glorious tribute to the flag, can hymn the praises of those who go out to die for the nation's institutions; deprived of light and air and freedom, he can sing of the golden firefly half-quenched in dew, of the glory of the rising sun, of the salty tang of sea spray, of the blazing reaches of tropical sands; deserted by those he loves, he can praise the milk-white shoulders of his beloved; with all his prayers unanswered he can rise to religious ecstasy in praise of the crucified Master and the blessed Virgin.

B 8266 belongs to a long and noble line of prisoner-poets who sang not only of the pain and distress that were theirs, but also of the outside beauty which was denied them. James I of Scots, that unhappy romantic Prince who loved the lady walking in the garden below his prison window; Boethius, who sought the cold, chaste consolations of philosophy before his cruel execution; Sir Walter Raleigh, Francis Villon, Oscar Wilde, whose "Ballad of Reading Gaol" comes immediately to mind as a companion piece to the "Tale of a Walled Town"—all these unfortunate geniuses might have written, with B 8266:

> They know but little of desire
> Who know no wall;
> But we who sit by no hearth fire
> Do know it all—
> The fierce desire to see and know
> Home faces and the hearth-fire's glow;
> All that we let so lightly go
> And would recall.

No reader can fail to be impressed by the ardent sincerity that breathes through these simple lines.

No less a celebrity that William Stanley Braithwaite has hailed the appearance of this unique book as an event of extreme importance in the history of American literature. And, indeed, it is no ordinary individual who makes us feel so vividly the heartbreaking experiences

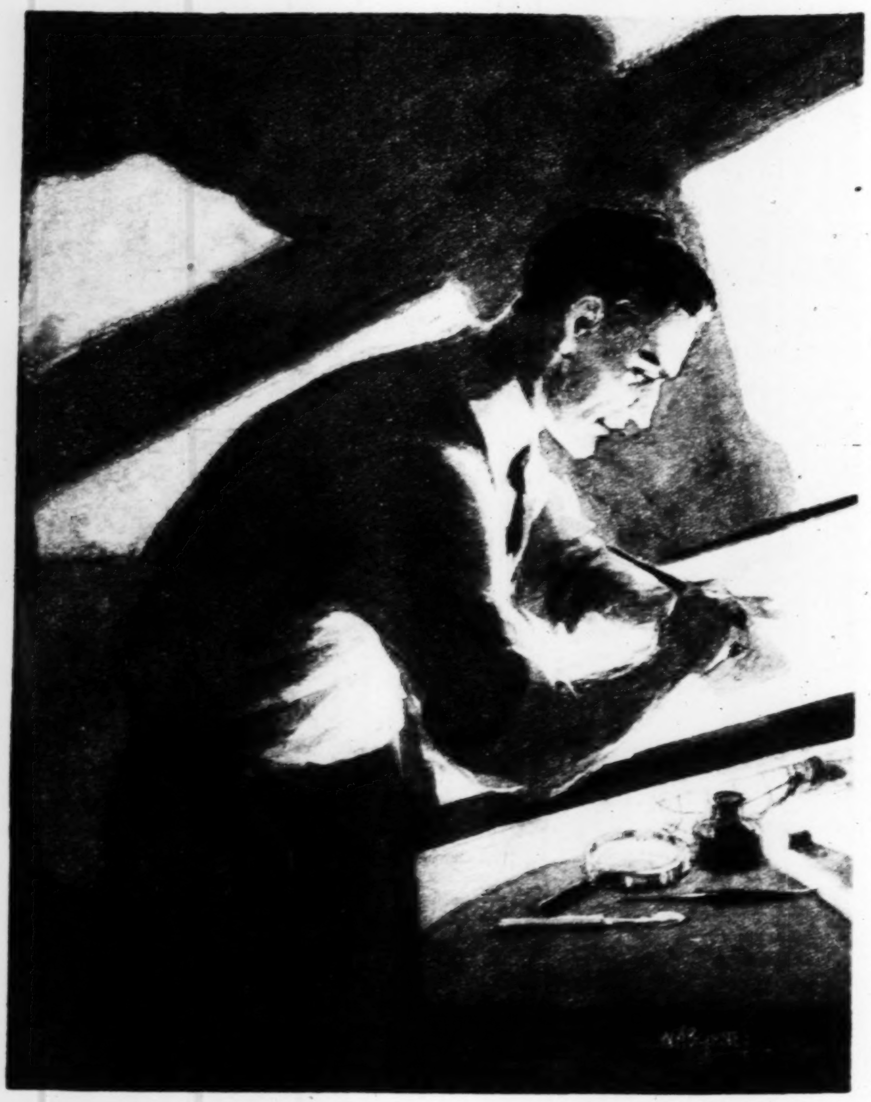
New Ingenuities of the Check Raiser



Actual case of the paper, both raised and forged, which was cashed by bank for $1907 and is now the subject of lawsuit between merchant and financial institution — What the crooks are doing in the matter of machine-written checks, and ruses by which blanks are secured from bank where prospective victim has his account—The dishonest genius who provided his own "certification" of eight checks for $1000 each

REPORTS from different parts of the United States indicate that the country is undergoing such a scourge of check raising and forging as it never experienced before. And the aggregate sum of money thus diverted from its rightful owners is constantly growing—indeed, already has reached fabulous proportions.

Two years ago, for example, an estimate of $30,000,000 as the total loss thus sustained in this country during the year 1919 was received with astonishment, but met no denials. And people who have studied the situation agree that the loss figure for 1921 must be approximately $50,000,000.

Moreover, the forger has become much more active within the last two years, frequently combining his work with alteration, as will be explained below.

The truth of the matter seems to be that, with all the watchfulness of police and of bank officials, the use of special papers and protective devices, the business world has not yet learned to defend itself with marked efficiency against the check raiser and the forger.

To help cope with a difficult situation, steadily growing worse, is the purpose of this article. Here will be explained some of the latest developments in the art of those who pass fraudulent checks. The constantly increasing use of checks, in lieu of actual currency, will make the revelations here set forth of quite general interest.

E. M. Milburn of the National Surety Co. of New York, long an authority upon methods of combating these costly crimes of check raising and forging, has furnished most of the fresh material on the subject which will be set forth here. It appears there has been considerable change in the methods of the check men and in the whole aspect of the problem since two years ago.

At that time it was pointed out that hand-written checks can be and have been raised with great ease, especially when carelessly written. The fact was stressed, also, that check protective machines are of little or no value against the expert raiser. Again, it seemed at that time that forgery (i. e., falsification of signatures) had about gone out of fashion.

The new developments seem to be about as follows:

Machine-written checks are now more prone to attack than ever and it is doubtful if any of these protective devices are worth employing except for the limited purpose of protection against amateurs.

Again: Hand-written checks, when carefully drawn, seem to be less subject to attack than others.

Thirdly: Forgery is coming back into general use, generally combined with alteration.

Finally: Check men are inventing various "con" games to get checks and to procure their conversion into cash.

Before going further into this subject, which is in its nature controversial, the writer wishes to disclaim any interest except the public interest. He considers it part of his function to put such information as he may have before his readers for their guidance. When he speaks of check machines he has no special make or type in mind and he does not wish to prejudice the interests of any maufacturer.

The most important facts are probably best illustrated by actual cases. In the matter of the dependability of machines for check protection there is the case of a New York wholesaler, who was rash enough to give a stranger who sold him some small article a check for $7. This check was made out on one of the very latest forms of protector and considered quite outside the possibility of raising. What happened constitutes the adventure.

The stranger, passing from mercantile house to office as a vender of an article of common use in business—let us say it was a window ventilator attachment, because it was something else—was actually a check procurer for a clever check man. He took cash for his article if he had to, but he usually got checks without trouble and frequently asked for them on the plea that he was already carrying too much cash. Most business men saw nothing amiss with such a request and gave their checks. So with our wholesaler.

This stranger delivered the check to his superior confederate, who immediately set about procuring from the wholesaler's bank a duplicate of the check form. This was done by opening an account in the bank, putting in and checking out a little money and then closing the account. Naturally, a number of the same kind of blank checks remained in the criminal's hands.

The check man now took the original check for $7, put it under a glass and carefully traced upon the duplicate the number of the original check. Let us say it was 01517. He next carefully copied the name of the payee and the signature of the wholesaler. (Forgery by tracing.) He had, now, a duplicate check which could reveal no trace of alteration under any examination because it had simply not been altered. It was in itself an untouched instrument.

The next and final step was simplicity itself. The check man sent out and bought a protective machine of precisely the same make as that used by the wholesaler. In went the duplicate check and out it came again, but the value of the bit of paper had been sadly, or rather grandly, altered. It called, now, for $1907, the figure seven being retained for the purpose of misleading the bank and the maker of the original check. This wholly spurious check was deposited and duly collected. After a time the wholesaler found among his canceled checks one that corresponded properly in number, but was $1900 too large.

When he went to his bank the officers shrugged and said they were sorry, but that a raised check was the maker's affair. The wholesaler, examining the instrument more carefully, perceived that it was, in fact, forged. He came back on the bank with this claim and the assertion that the bank was responsible for forgeries. But the check was both raised and forged.

Here is a pretty point at law, and the courts have still to find a way to cut this knot. The bank, humanly enough, refuses to reimburse to the extent of $1900 and the wholesaler is suing to recover.

The point here, so far as any discussion of check protection is concerned, is that any machine-printed check might be so treated. There seems to be no present guard against this combination of forgery and raising.

Superficially, it might seem, a hand-written or holographic check would be no better off against such a criminal, yet Mr. Milburn and other experts incline to the opposite view. The authorities say that men are more inclined to be careful when checks are hand-written. Their maker uses more discretion in passing them out and the bank teller uses more care in scrutinizing them. There may be something in this, for it is natural for the man who believes he has an unbeatable mechanical device at hand to put caution aside, and it is just as human for a busy bank employe to pass a check readily when it comes in with some familiar distinguishing mark imprinted upon it.

There is still the gay matter of the confidence game as applied to the bad check.

In a certain city not too far from New York for comfortable day-to-evening communication, a person named McGurk, of something wholly different, established himself at the best hotel, spent money with lavish reticence, gave out that he was looking over the town with a view to operating a real estate promotion and finally got the pleased hotel proprietor to introduce him to a bank, saying that he was carrying a large amount of money and wanted to be rid of it. So Mr. Theophilus McGurk put $1000 into the Grange and Grain Bank, being awarded in return a most important booklet of bank checks.

McGurk was now equipped with a method of introduction to other banks and he swiftly took advantage of it. In rapid succession he now opened accounts in eight other local banks, by the simple expedient of writing himself eight checks on the Grange and Grain Bank. These checks were made out to John P. Williams and signed Theophilus McGurk. McGurk-Williams simply went into a bank with his check, said that he was a stranger who wished to locate in the town and start a bank account, presented the McGurk check and asked that it be collected and deposited to his account. As soon as the check had been collected he drew out all but a small amount and put it back in the Grange and Grain Bank in cash and then proceeded to open a small account in a third bank.

Thus he continued until he had this one larger and these eight smaller accounts, the first under the name of McGurk and all the others as Williams.

Theophilus McGurk continued to make life pleasant for himself about the town for a few days longer. Then, one snowy morning, he appeared in the Grange and Grain Bank and made out a check for $10 to John P. Williams. This he had certified, saying that he was sending it out of town.

Next Mr. McGurk went out of town himself, and when he returned he carried in his pocket a small rubber stamp made up from the imprint of that used by the Grange and Grain Bank in certifying his original $10 check. He proceeded to his hotel room, rapidly wrote out eight checks—Theophilus McGurk, maker, and John P. Williams, payee. But he made each one payable in the amount of $1000. And he stamped each one with the rubber certification stamp, forging upon each the initials of the bank teller who had issued the original certification.

Thus the dextrous and dangerous McGurk had in hand eight genuine checks, each calling for $1000. There was a single forgery upon each, the certification of the Grange and Grain Bank.

McGurk went out gayly and marched rapidly from bank to bank. The tellers knew him as a depositor, Mr. John P. Williams. They had already cashed the uncertified checks of this Theophilus McGurk. Why should they now hesitate to cash the checks of the same man when they bore, in addition, the certification of the Grange and Grain Bank? They passed out their respective thousands and McGurk-Williams passed out of that town and out of the picture, seven thousand and some odd dollars to the good.

Fiction? Ask the bankers' associations in many parts of the country, for this game has been operated in many places.

The upshot of all this is merely a note of caution. Business men must be more and more careful how their checks are drawn, to whom they are issued and especially to whom they are intrusted. Banks must devise for themselves similar methods of care and caution. The writer cannot pretend to invent the panacea for the cure of check manipulation.

Apart from the raised and forged checks, bankers and merchants in various sections have also had to contend with worthless checks, drawn by persons whose balance in bank was insufficient. Sometimes it is due to carelessness, and innocent enough. In other cases it is an adroit way of getting credit. And a good many of these transactions are just as fraudulent in their intent as the raised or the forged check.

In South Dakota, for example, the situation became so troublesome that bankers made an investigation and decided that there were several causes. One was that persons whose incomes had been curtailed were unwilling to admit the fact, and wrote the checks as a matter of keeping up their "front." Another cause cited was the frequent lack of prosecution, merchants preferring to hold the check, when returned by the bank, rather than lose a customer of, perhaps, several years' standing.

Many members of old nobility have found refuge in United States where some of them ply odd trades for a living—Former head of oldest house in Russia is traveling entertainer and says he is contented—General's wife trims hats and General sells them — Grim fate that overtook man who sent hundreds to exile and death :-: :-:

WHEN revolution turned Russian society precisely upside down, some of the aristocrats who were able to escape alive made their way to America, seeking safety and the means of life. They have found both. They are as safe as the average citizen, and share the citizen's right to hunt jobs.

In consequence we have a Prince pushing a street sweeper's cart, a Princess trimming hats, Countesses operating typewriters, and other such anomalies. While there has been more than enough of maudlin sentiment on this subject (some true democrats not being able to restrain their tears at the spectacle of a Duchess earning her own living), the exiles themselves in many cases seem quite happy with the lot which fortune has given them.

As a signal example, there might be cited the case of Viazemsky. To one familiar with Russian history, the name is a significant one. When Michael Romanoff, the first of his line, was crowned Czar in 1613, his principal supporter was a Prince Viazemsky. And ever after, the noble nearest the throne in Russia was the head of the house of Viazemsky. Whoever else might fail them, the Romanoffs were always positive of one powerful supporter.

The family was one of the oldest in Europe—much older than that of the Romanoffs themselves—dating back to the early legendary knowledge of Eastern Europe. When the Duma dethroned the late Czar, Prince Viazemsky was an officer of the Guards. To the Provisional Government's offer of a commission, he haughtily replied that he recognized only one Government—that of his imperial majesty—and he retired to his castle.

This was all very well at that time. Princes were safe under the regime of Prince Lvoff, and even Kerensky, who came afterward, did not lay rude hands upon their persons or premises. But Kerensky was destined to fall before the bolsheviks, one of whose practices was to divide up landed estates among the peasants after they had used the castle as a shooting gallery, with the owner for a target. Seeing this, Prince Viazemsy forgot his dignity and got out of the country as speedily as might be.

At the present time he is earning a living in the southern part of the United States, trudging from one town to another in the guise of an itinerant musician. In Georgia county seats this former dashing cavalryman—this noble born to the ermine—sings the folk songs of his native land on public squares, and dances the hopak for the dimes which the villagers toss him. Yet he writes to a friend: "Why worry about poverty when one is alive and strong?" * * * One is moved to think much better of the Prince than when he was turning young university students over to the Russian military police to be hanged.

A man who once held the rank of Lieutenant-General, in command of the Czar's Second Cossack Division, now makes a comfortable living in this country by writing for newspapers and magazines. Recently in New York he chanced to call upon an American friend. The door was opened by the butler, a grave, rather youngish man, with white hair. The visitor looked at that face, stared a moment, then came into a rigid salute.

An expression of pain crossed the butler's face, he stiffened proudly, then dropped his shoulders and bowed his head.

"The fortune of war, General," he said in a low voice, signing the other to enter.

The butler was Prince Olinow, and Prince Olinow, even in Russia, had enjoyed distinction. Upon coming into his heritage he had embarked upon a career of profligacy almost without parallel. This may be better appreciated in the light of an interesting interview given a few years before the war by a noted Paris restaurateur, who was asked if it was true that Americans were the premier spenders.

"The premier noise makers, you mean," corrected the savant of sauces. "The American does not spend so much as the Englishman and very little more than the German, but he talks more about it. The real spender is the Russian aristocrat. Mon Dieu! He comes to Paris but once a year, perhaps. He stays only a month. In that month he will get rid of more money than 10 Chicago millionaires would spend if they remained here a year."

It was with this sort of competition that Prince Olinow established his reputation as a spendthrift. He erected a theater in his palace and imported entire theatrical companies from Paris for single performances. He capped his extravagances by eloping with a young Grand Duchess. Then he was brought up short.

Princess Kousnezoff, of the gay court set in Czarist Russia, who entered menial service in America.

gee: "I had the largest library in Russia, yet I do not know enough about literature to write for the newspapers. I paid 70,000 rubles for the pipe organ in my palace, yet I do not know enough about music to make a living at it. I led a division to victory against the Austrians, but there is no more fighting to do. I, who once governed 10,000 peasants, now must earn my bread as they earned theirs from me—by working with my hands." * * * The mills of the gods——

Just a few days ago, in an elevator bringing down from the upper floors of a towering office building in the New York financial district the clerks and other employes who were hurrying to make their varied uses of their lunch hour, two girl stenographers glanced casually into each other's faces. Their eyes met. Each started as if touched by an electric current. They stared, wondering, doubtful, yet convinced.

They left the elevator together at the main floor. When the others had surged away from them one spoke to the other, hesitant, faltering:

"Is it possible—surely I am mistaken—you are not"——

The other interrupted: "Yes, I am—and you—can it be that you are——?"

Then they threw their arms around each other, much to the amusement or wonder of the crowd passing in and out of the constantly arriving or departing elevators.

It might have been two chums meeting for the first time since they left business college. It was, in fact, the first encounter since each reached America of Countess Bencklenoff and Princess Gourka, who had once lived in adjoining palaces on the Morskaya. Their families had not been so friendly in the old days. Prince Gourka, father of the Princess, and Count Bencklenoff, father of the Countess, had been members of opposite factions in the court at Petrograd.

But all that was forgotten in this meeting. There were no longer any Countesses or Princesses or any court, but just two New York stenographers who had the same memories of a dream world long, long ago, and who would naturally be friends. They cried a little, there in the rotunda of the building, and then went to lunch arm in arm.

In that dream world so far away, Czar Nicholas had been fond of the little Countess Bencklenoff, and in honor of her twelfth birthday had given her an honorary commission as Colonel of the famous Twelfth Hussars. Her mother had been one of the intimates of the Czarina. They had a great estate in the Urals, in addition to the palace in Petrograd.

On the memorable night that the Grand Duke Nicholas was summoned to the Czar's headquarters and informed that he was to be relieved of the high command and sent to the Caucasus, the Grand Duke hurried to the Bencklenoff palace. The Count was at the front. His wife was absent. It was the little Countess who received the deposed Commander in Chief, and it was by her hand that he sent certain messages to influential relatives to intercede for him.

Quite a few debutantes have been pleased with the original hats which they have found at a smart little New York shop operated by a distinguished-looking foreigner and his remarkably charming wife.

This couple is Gen. Lodijensky and his wife. He is another who once commanded a division against Hindenburg. She was a Princess from the Crimea, and distinguished for her originality and grace as a hostess. Their estate on the Yeleagin Ostrov was a favored spot. Now she designs and trims hats.

"That originality which you observe in them," remarked the General, with a mingled air of gayety and sadness, "is just my wife's, the Princess', vivacity, expressed in ribbons and pom poms instead of laughter and sleigh songs in White Russia."

Doubtless the customers would prize their purchases still more highly if they knew that the maker had often entertained the Czar's daughters in her own palace.

The list is far from complete. There is Princess Anastasia Suvorina, once a patroness of the arts. A few years ago a guest at her salon was Robert Chanler, an American artist. Not long since, Chanler encountered a homeless, friendless and penniless woman on the streets of New York. It was Princess Anastasia. With his assistance, she has obtained work for which her artistic training fits her, and is comfortable.

A similar case is that of Countess Maria Kalinina, daughter of the former Attorney-General of Russia. Her family also was of the more enlightened type among the nobility. Her father endowed the Russian Theater in Petrograd. Now the Countess, installed in a modest apartment on West Tenth street, New York, paints vases and makes bits of lace to support herself and her little boy.

Not so with another lady of high lineage. Princess Kousnezoff did not care for the arts. Like the great majority of aristocrats in old Russia, she was concerned only with the hectic pleasures which unearned wealth and undeserved leisure afforded. A few months ago she was employed as a domestic servant in an American home. Since then she has disappeared. And once more it was made manifest that a Princess divested of the advantages to which she was born, may be neither so resourceful nor so brave as the average cook or shopgirl.

It is not likely that these unfortunate creatures understand what has happened to them—Russia's aristocracy was not distinguished by its studious habits. If it had been, the events of the last five years might not have come in their time.

It is not probable that they can see themselves merely as the pathetic fragments thrown aside by one of time's inevitable upheavals—the mere by-products of an event whose influence will probably be told by centuries, and described when they have been forgotten. Social evolution, with its implement, political revolution, takes no account of sentiment, and is insensible to private griefs and hopes.

and emotions of the victims of the relentless trap of life as revealed to us in the title-poem of the volume. It is no ordinary talented prisoner beguiling his fancy with lyric exercises who can indite such impressions of love and war and patriotism and nature—and even of humor—as we find here. It is no common poetaster who can while he slaves in a prison factory or hammers away at stones, think out an "Arab Death Song," redolent of the dash and fire of the wild charge of bristling lances down a blood-soaked field of black sand, with visions of the golden pomegranates that will rise from his dead body while his spirit rushes forth to meet the—

Their lips are flaming coral and frankincense and spice;
Their bosoms gleam so whitely, their breath is like to musk,
And their eyes are like the campfires that call me home at dusk.
Allah akbar! God is great!
Who am I to rail at fate?

Mr. Braithwaite's introduction to the volume gives the only available information regarding B 8266. The poet is, of course, a real person, a long-term prisoner in a state penitentiary. For what offense he was committed we have no means of knowing. We are told that the facts of his life would, if known, throw a good deal of light upon many things in the poems, but they must, for the present at least, remain concealed behind the grim walls of the pen. Later years may, perhaps, reveal all to a curious world.

Mr. Braithwaite has seen the poet personally, however, and has found him a person of great charm. His account of that interview gives us the only real glimpse of the actual personality behind the poems.

"I shall never forget the early March day," writes Mr. Braithwaite, "that I stepped through the door in the somber granite walls of the prison and saw the yellowish-green stalks of the tulips for the first time this spring glowing from the earth in the prison-yard. They struck me as symbolic of the flower song that was pushing up from the dark soil of experience within that huge pile of somber stone which society had erected around the lives of those who were spending their days within.

"When the man came into the Warden's office and lost the first shyness of greeting strangers from the world outside, he brought into the place a feeling that came from the vistas of his dreams and visions and not from the cramped and moutonous atmosphere of the narrow prison cells."

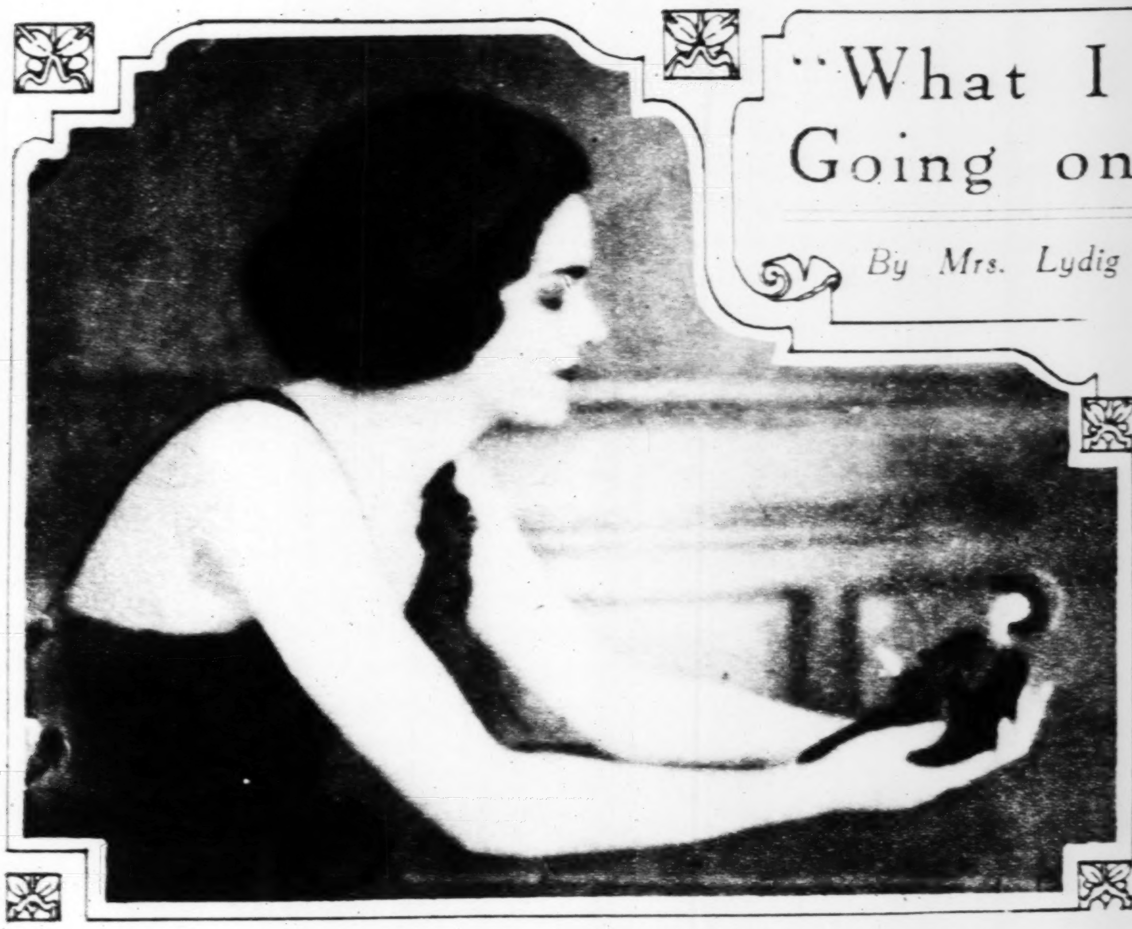
"What I Learned by Going on the Stage"

By Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, Noted Society Beauty



A beautiful portrait of Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, society woman who has become an actress on professional stage.

Young New York matron, now a professional player, says that people of fashion and of the theater can gain much benefit from contact with each other—"What to do with the hands" in drawing room scenes is one of the "little niceties" which cultured people have, also better knowledge of furnishings, for improved stage settings :: ::

THE stage needs recruits from society on its boards, and society will profit by closer contact with the stage, in the belief of Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, famous New York beauty and favorite in exclusive Eastern circles, who is playing regularly as an actress in a New York production. Mrs. Hoyt's career on the professional stage began only a few months ago, although at Newport and elsewhere her talents as an amateur performer have been admired over a period of years. Her debut as "Lady Diana" in William Faversham's revival of "The Squaw Man" was eminently successful. Shortly before that she had tried the movies, but abandoned that field, largely for the reason that her comely face does not "screen" well.

Because of Mrs. Hoyt's social prominence, and her entry into the world of professional drama, there has been some curiosity about what she thought of her new work and environment. The following interview, interesting in itself, is doubly suggestive from the social background of the speaker. Belonging now to both the society world and the stage world, she says that each needs the other.

Closer acquaintance with cultured society people will mean, for the stage, more familiarity with little niceties of demeanor and also with such a practical matter as better furnishings in stage settings. On the other hand, society people who enter the profession will win a deeper sympathy for others, a finer imagination.

And Mrs. Hoyt further declares that many of the present-day society girls have it in them to become convincing actresses.

"I feel that I am getting something from the stage," said Mrs. Hoyt, earnestly, "but I hope I am taking something to it. I am glad to be a pioneer in the movement of society toward the stage. There are many girls in society who could succeed in the theater. Not because of society but because they have a force, a dramatic talent that would count. There is no doubt that an exodus of society stageward would help both.

"We are often reminded by the critics, even though we did not see it ourselves from the seats in the theater, that the American stage needs greater familiarity with social usages. This is notable in two respects—entering a drawing room and furnishing a room."

"Entering a drawing room seems to be the social criterion," interposed the reporter. "Will you tell us how a drawing room should be entered?"

The corners of Mrs. Hoyt's firm, well-cut lips wavered. Tiny dimples came and went in her olive-tinted cheeks.

"I am glad you asked that. It is rather a stock phrase, isn't it? A little threadbare. There is no set way of getting into a drawing room or any other. Yet I have seen persons make a wrong entrance into a drawing room both on and off the stage.

"The difference between the well-bred and ill-bred person is in repose. The person who moves quietly into a room shows breeding. The person who comes fussily in, who seems to think it necessary to be animated, who thinks 'Is my dress right?' 'I wonder if there is anything the matter with me?' does not show breeding.

"And hands! Few persons know what to do with their hands, especially on the stage when so-called society plays are presented. It takes years of ceaseless training to have the hands behave themselves naturally and artistically, and too few people ever get this training.

"The way in which rooms are furnished for the stage shows the lack of knowledge of the standards of good taste in furnishing. That is often very evident. More, I should say, in motion pictures than on the stage, though I do not wish to say anything against the motion drama. It served its purpose in effecting my entrance upon the stage. I chose it for a little while because I thought by it I could accustom my family to the idea. I could be at work and still be at home in the evening. It was a kind of preliminary step. I am glad I had the experience with Miss Norma Talmadge in 'The Wonderful Thing.' I found Miss Talmadge talented and understanding.

"What I hope and expect the incursion of society men and women upon the stage will do for the stage is to afford it that familiarity with the little niceties and better furnishings. In a word, the air of the folk and the home of leisure.

"It is reasonable that girls who have had the leisure for travel, for reading and for contact with gentlefolk will make a contribution of real value to the theater. A very successful actress said to me: 'I always feel handicapped when I try to play the lady. I have to work for it.' She was right. It is not impossible to play a Mrs. Vanderbilt, let us say, but it is difficult. The social leader must have been lived to be spontaneously interpreted. If not we always have the sense, as the actress said, of it being 'worked for.'

"There are certain actresses on the stage of this country who seem to play the lady without effort. Ethel Barrymore, always the lady, as though born to play her. Maxine Elliott does. Mrs. Fiske could very easily do so if she had to play that kind of character. And, of course, Margaret Anglin. Julia Marlowe conveys that innate something that is the lady. It is true she usually plays Shakspearean characters. But some of Shakspeare's characters require that something. Juliet does."

"And Elsie Ferguson?"

"Yes, Elsie Ferguson."

"And the men?" urged the reporter.

"There are not so many men who have that gift. Bruce McRae, Mr. Faversham, of course. But they are English. Glenn Hunter. John Drew, always. And John Barrymore, if he wished to play such roles."

"And what do you think the stage will do for society?" Mrs. Hoyt was asked.

"It will give it vision. It will train its sympathies. It will lead it to cultivate its imagination. For, after all, that is what acting is, isn't it? It is effective employment of the imagination.

"The society woman will add refinement to our stage. She will be successful in refined comedy."

"But will she be able to interpret the elemental characters as Lenore Ulric does in 'Kiki'?" queried the reporter.

"Yes, if she has intelligence and will work," answered Mrs. Hoyt. "The woman in her Fifth avenue drawing room can understand why the woman of Mulberry Bend killed the man who would steal her honor. She could play her."

Asked how she came to go on the stage, Mrs. Hoyt said:

"I have had it in my heart for 10 years. I just had to go on the stage. I was 17 when I first wanted to. I was resolute. I had been studying pantomime with a great French teacher. But families have an embarrassing way of curtailing the activities of 17; a stringent way of withholding one's allowance. I faced the embarrassment of being unable to go on with my lessons in pantomime because they would not be paid for.

"At 17, too, the will is strong, but it is not unconquerable. The united will of my family overcame mine. They had a powerful ally in Cupid. I was in love with Mr. Hoyt. He did not want me to go on the stage. He is not keen about it now."

Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, daughter of Julian W. Robbins, the banker, and wife of the well known lawyer, is exclusive American society's contribution to the stage. The list of first nighters at her premiere as "Lady Diana" in "The Squaw Man" was like a dozen pages torn from the Social Register. No woman of such social height, of such position of impregnability, had ever turned actress in the United States.

"I have not been on the stage long," she admits, in her smiling, habitual, quiet way. "Only three weeks, in fact. But I have the sense of having achieved something long sought, something that is mine, or that I fully expect to make my own. I have reached the goal of my most cherished ambition. That was to appear in a good play on a New York stage as a professional actress.

"There has been no disillusionment. Not even in the matter of a dressing room. I had heard about ugly, unclean little dressing rooms. Mine is very neat. You must understand that I did not take up this as a fad nor as a caprice. It is part of the business of my life. For instance, I am taking a lesson in dramatic art every day. I am studying with Mme. Yvette Guilbert."

"Do you not feel that you are stepping from one kind of a world into another?" the reporter ventured.

"Not in the least. Well-bred people are the same everywhere. Matters of profession or environment do not count. I learned that while I was doing canteen work at Eagle Hut in Bryant Park during the war. I used to work there sometimes until 1 o'clock at night. The boys from the army were of every walk of life, but not one was ever impertinent.

"That strange, vague thing we call breeding, is not definable. It is like charm. Persons have it or they do not. I have seen it in the so-called low and missed it in the so-called high. It is an innate thing. A street cleaner may have it and a multimillionaire may not. It goes back farther than training. It is something in the blood.

"Breeding has nothing to do with artificial niceties. It has to do with something within. It is an instinct. A man may have breeding, but he may sit and talk with a woman with his hat on or may forget to get up when she comes into the room. But, to go back to such boys as those I met at Eagle Hut, he will not get fresh. A woman may be young and good to look at and attractive to him, but he will not let her know it. That is breeding, the fine thing from within, the instinct, without which a man cannot be a gentleman.

"I have found that on the stage. I was very fortunate to be in a play by Edwin Milton Royle. He is a college man and the son of a Judge. His wife, Helen Fetter Royle, is of an old Kentucky family. His daughters are exquisite as flowers. When I made my first appearance I was not well made up. I supposed that I had to use grease paint. Now I understand that is not necessary for a young person. The older players use it to hide the lines of age. But between matinee and night Mr. Royle's youngest daughter came to my dressing room and very sweetly and unobtrusively taught me the art of makeup.

"I was fortunate, too, in playing with Mr. Faversham. I had had several offers for leading parts, but they did not attract me. One was a farce comedy. I declined it. When Mr. Faversham telephoned me that he would like me to play with him in 'The Squaw Man' I was delighted. I knew his work. I knew that gentlemanhood radiated from him to the audiences.

"Rehearsals were not disheartening to me. I was so intensely interested in watching others develop their parts. We began at 11 and often rehearsed till 3. I had been accustomed to luncheon at 1, but I never missed it. But remember that I am not one of the soft-muscled sisters of luxury.

"I have worked in an office. I studied stenography and became a typist. It was to fit myself for war work. But before that I had actually earned money. It was while I was 16. My father and I had an argument. He admonished me to remember my youth and dependence. He said: 'Remember your age and that you could not of your own efforts earn a dollar.'

Girl, Deaf and Blind, Who "Sees" With Her Nose

16-year-old Wiletta Huggins, in Wisconsin, can distinguish between different colors by her extraordinary sense of smell, and declares that each dyed hue possesses a distinctive odor —But she does not succeed with hard-surfaced articles like glass, stones and enamel—The same strange ability enables her to recognize people, and to know the number of occupants of a room—What Helen Keller, noted blind woman, said of this child during a recent visit with her :: ::

Wiletta Huggins, the remarkably gifted deaf and blind girl, tells the color of Helen Keller's dress by means of her' extraordinary sense of smell.

CAN you, when blindfolded, tell by your sense of smell how many people are in the room and how many are friends and how many strangers? Wiletta Huggins, 16 years old, blind and deaf girl from Chippewa Falls, Wis., attending the State School for the Blind at Madison, can do so. She is the wonder child of the country and by some persons considered to be far in advance of Helen Keller in the feats she accomplishes.

Miss Keller, the blind woman whose fame has spread all over the world, visited Madison recently to interview Wiletta. For more than two hours they conversed with each other. Miss Keller would put her fingers on Wiletta's lips and Wiletta would put her fingers on Miss Keller's chest. Then they talked just as normal people do. The faces of the two women, as they conversed, made a picture of changing emotions, of enthusiasm and inspiration.

"Have you read 'David Copperfield' yet?" asked Miss Keller.

"No, but I am reading 'Ben Hur,' " answered Wiletta.

Then Wiletta told Miss Keller how she could converse over the telephone with a person who hears, by placing her fingers in the diaphragm of the receiver.

"I can't do that," declared Miss Keller. "Nor can I tell the colors of goods the way you can by smelling them."

"You could if you tried," said Wiletta. "First I learned to tell the color of thread and soon I was able to tell the color of all objects that do not have a glazed surface. I do not think it so wonderful that a person can tell colors. The smells of the different colors and the different shades are very distinct."

Wiletta Huggins is a marvel, but not a miracle. There is naught of the supernatural, mystic or magic about her "powers." No new sense marks her unusual case. Rather is she the embodiment of highly and super-developed minor senses which have been called into play to supplant those which are dead. She smells colors. She "hears" by vibrations. She senses the presence of persons she knows by her olfactory keenness. She does a multitude of things with these two senses of touch and smell which other folk accomplish with four.

The marvel connected with Wiletta is the rapidity with which these senses have been developed and their acuteness rather than the fact of the development itself.

The ability to smell colors, strange as it is to the person who never did this, is a logical phenomenon to those who have studied it. It was inspired in the school sewing class, where Wiletta had to call for variously colored threads and yarn she needed in the tasks assigned her. Perhaps by accident, perhaps by half-design, she began smelling them as they were handed her.

Soon, she says, she established the fact that all blue threads possessed the same smell. Applied to blacks, browns, grays, yellows, greens and other colors, her nose soon conveyed to her mind the impression of the similarities in the smells of colors which she was told were alike.

Weeks and months were required for the development of the sense of smell until it enabled her to distinguish the primary colors. Once established as to the dyed threads and yarns in the primary colors, shades and combinations were presented and mastered. Then other objects of color were substituted, until now the girl detects readily all dyed or "live" colors.

There are colors, however, which the girl cannot get. Glass, stones, enamels natural furs—these things give her no reaction. Dried flowers are difficult, often impossible.

"How many people are in the room?" asked a visitor.

"Three, when I am counted," came the correct answer.

"Are you sure there is no one else in the room?" came another question.

"Well, tabby cat is here also," replied Wiletta.

The conversation then drifted to other things, and finally she interrupted with the remark that, "Tabby cat has gone."

When the others looked around, they found that the cat had in fact left the room.

"Oh, you are so wonderful, Wiletta," declared Helen Keller, at the conclusion of the interview. "I want you to have my address. I want you to write to me and tell me how you are getting along in school and with your work. You are the most wonderful deaf and blind child I have ever met in all my world-wide experience."

Miss Keller also said of Wiletta that she was "delighted that the power and gift of her spirit have been so marvelously developed."

"I look forward," she continued, "to her helping others to realize what they can do if they work long enough. There are many marvelous things in the world, but nothing so wonderful as the adaptability of a human being."

To normal people, under ordinary conditions of civilization, the utility of the sense of smell is comparatively small. But the fact has long been known that this sense is occasionally much increased when the others are deficient. Hearing, also, sometimes becomes extraordinarily keen with blind persons. But Wiletta is deaf.

Speaking generally, the acuteness of the sense of smell is far greater in many of the lower animals (dogs, for example) than in man. They employ it in guiding them to their food, in warning them of approaching danger and for other purposes. And among many savage tribes the sense of smell is almost as acute as in many of the lower mammals.

The sense of taste is often confused with that of smell. We speak of "tasting" an odoriferous substance, such as an onion or a savory dish, or a beverage, when in reality it is perceived through the olfactory nerves. This rather surprising fact is proved by the circumstance that the taste for these substances is lost when the smell becomes impaired.

The nose, of course, is not only the organ of smell, but is likewise part of the apparatus of respiration and voice. The term, nose, is popularly restricted to the external or projecting portion, but it is in the internal portion—two chief cavities, called the nasal fossae—that different odors are registered on our consciousness.

It is the upper third of the nose which, as the proper seat of the sense of smell, may be termed the olfactory region. Here the surface of the mucous membrane—the epithelium—becomes columnar and assumes a more or less rich sienna-brown tint, and increases remarkably in thickness, so that it forms an opaque soft pulp upon the surface.

This lining is composed of an aggregation of nucleated particles, of nearly uniform appearance throughout, except that the lowest ones are of a darker color than the rest, from containing brown pigment in their interior.

The olfactory region abounds in glands, apparently identical with sweat glands, which dip down in the recesses of the submucous tissue among the ramifications of the olfactory nerve. They are named Bowman's glands.

The olfactory nerve on each side is connected with the lower surface of the brain by an external, a middle and an internal root, which unite and form a sort of prism. On reaching the ethmoid bone, at the base of the skull, the prism expands into an oblong mass of grayish-white substance, the olfactory bulb. From this bulb are given off the 15 or 20 filaments which pass through the sievelike plates of the ethmoid bone and are distributed to the mucous membrane of the olfactory region.

Whatever may be the nature of the odorous matter, it is necessary that it should be transmitted by a respiratory current through the nostrils to the true olfactory region, and dissolved or suspended in the fluid with which the olfactory membrane is normally covered. The proper condition of this fluid is one of the essential conditions for the perception of odors. If the membrane is too dry, or if there is an inordinate excretion of fluid from its surface (which conditions

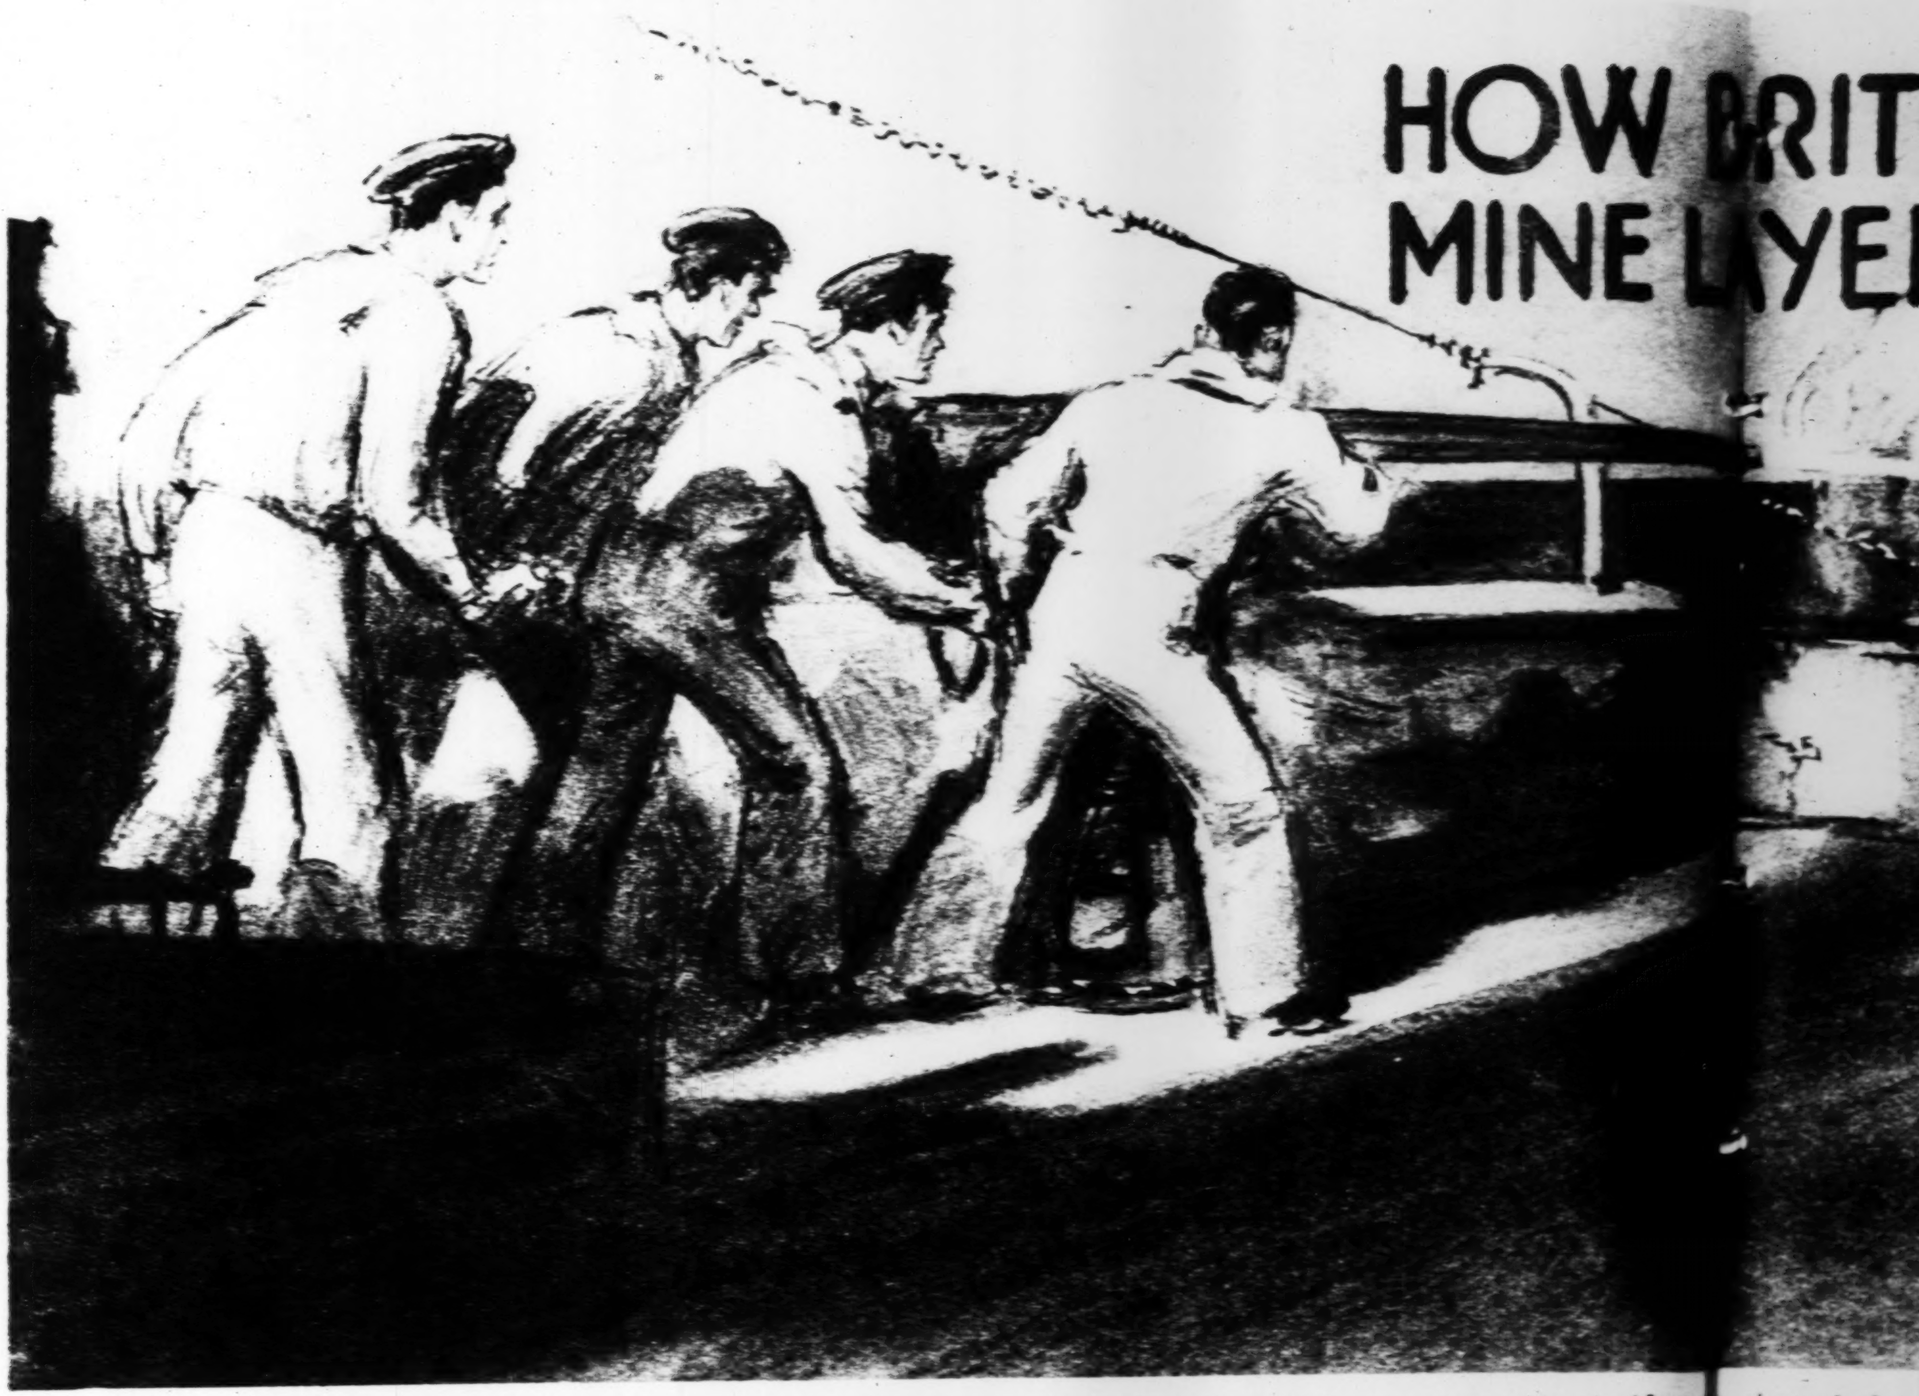
Although deaf, Wiletta can "hear" a message over the telephone by placing her finger on the diaphragm in the receiver. The vibrations convey the words.

HOW BRIT MINE LAYE



One of the most interesting incidents , that of the war chief, now made public for th time — Subma
the mine that sank the Hampshire, nt down a year of the steamer Palmbranch, which ught a desperat marine's mate—Interesting diary of an undersea o

NO SINGLE casualty of the World War produced such a shock upon the allied peoples as the sudden death of Lord Kitchener, head of the British War Office and the most distinguished soldier of his time. Hence it is interesting to learn that the German submarine responsible for his death was itself sent to a wet grave a year later by a British ship. The entire crew perished.

"Kitchener of Khartum" was one of the dramatic figures of a stirring age, and the manner of his death was more dramatic still. In May, 1916, the Czar of Russia invited him to come and make a general survey of the military situation on the eastern front. Kitchener accepted. Naturally, the preparations for his departure were cloaked with the utmost secrecy.

On the morning of June 6 an official bulletin said: "The War Office announces that Lord Kitchener has gone to Russia to survey the military situation." A few hours later the wires of the earth were vibrating with this message:

"Admiral Jellicoe, commander of the British Grand Fleet, has reported to the Admiralty that the British cruiser Hampshire, with Earl Kitchener and his staff, has been lost off the West Orkneys. Only a capsized boat and some bodies have been found."

It was just that sudden. No word of warning. The British Government had given out the news immediately. Admiral Jellicoe's dispatch was too unequivocal to admit of doubt. The Hampshire had been swallowed up, and the man upon whom, above all, the allies were depending for victory, had been swallowed up with her.

There were survivors, however—enough to tell the story of the calamity. The Hampshire, steaming through a terrific storm, had struck a floating mine. The seas had prevented the launching of any boats. Three rafts had got away, and although most of the occupants succumbed to exposure and the battering of the waves, there were enough left to tell the tale. From one of them, this narrative:

"When the explosion occurred, Lord Kitchener walked calmly from the captain's cabin, and climbed the ladder to the quarterdeck. There I saw him pacing quite collectedly, talking to two officers. All were wearing khaki; in fact, they were dressed just as they were when they came on board. Lord Kitchener calmly watched the preparations for abandoning ship, which were going on in a steady and orderly manner.

"The crew just went to their stations and obeyed orders, doing their best to get the boats off; but that was impossible. No boats could be lowered. Those that were got out, were smashed up at once. Men did get into the boats as they lay in their cradles, thinking that as the ship went under, the boats would float. But the ship sank by the head, turning almost a complete somersault as she went under, and all the boats were pulled under in the vortex.

"Three circular rafts did get off. I picked up some of the men who had been wounded in the explosion, and put them in the bottom of my raft. There were about 40 of us. Looking back as we got away, I saw attempts being made to launch the boats. The galley upset while being lowered, and the whaler broke in two. I saw men leaping from the deck into the terrible seas as the ship went down. She did not float more than 15 minutes after hitting the mine.

"We picked up some strong swimmers who managed to stay on top, but the cold was so terrible, and the hammering of the seas so crushing that there were 42 dead on my raft when we reached the shore five hours later.

"I do not think Lord Kitchner ever got into a boat. When I sprang into a raft he was still standing on the quarterdeck talking to his officers. A moment later the ship went down, by the head, throwing the stern high in the air." So died Kitchener, with his boots on.

But many regarded the story as incredible. All sorts or rumors arose. "Wise ones" wincked, and said it was a bit of strategy to mislead the Germans. The War Lord was in Russia, directing the Czar's millions, and the result would soon be observed in some colossal victory on the eastern front. But no such welcome surprise awaited, and gradually the depressing fact was realized.

Again, but long afterward, when Britain's unknown soldier was interred in Westminster Abbey, the report was circulated that the body was that of Kitchener. Of course, there was no basis in fact for the rumor. The remains of the great soldier, so far as man knows, lie coffined in the Hampshire, under the icy waters off the Orkney coast.

The following narrative is from the pen of the British naval officer commanding the cruiser Intrepid. The evidence, presented by him, that the mine which sank the Hampshire was laid by the German submarine U-75, is circumstantial, but convincing. And he gives a thrilling account of how she was sunk a year later by the munitions ship Palmbranch, which, in turn, fought a desperate engagement with the submarine's mate. The account follows:

"In the spring of 1917 the writer was in command of the small British cruiser Intrepid, attached to the Arctic or White Sea squadron, and then lying at Kola. At this ice-free port of the Murman coast many men-of-war and merchant ships were already gathering to await the breaking up of the ice farther eastward. This would herald the opening of the Archangel season, during which, from July to November only, safe navigation to and from Russia's northern mouth co be relied on. Germany, being as well aware as Brit of this natural fact, harassed the incoming shipp by every means in her power. Mines were laid wh ever the Arctic Ocean was not too deep, and elsewh often 400 or 500 miles north of the Arctic Circle, s marines continually hunted and harried the merch men of the allies bringing coal, guns, munitions a other war stores to Russia.

"On May 4 the British steamship Palmbranch, la with munitions, poison gas and high explosives, w

Inlet. It was 2:45 of a clear sunny afternoon. La doning the action, the U-boat turned away and ded for the open sea.

"When the Palmbranch arrived in harbor at Kola same day, I had the luck to investigate the af-and examine the witnesses. One curious state-
t they made was that, when the first submarine
, a conical object floated from her and remained the surface. In my official report I surmised that was a telephone buoy, such as was known to be carried by most U-boats, its purpose being to enable a sunken crew to communicate with the world above. It could be released from inside the boat, and, floating upwards, carried a watertight telephone.

"My theory proved correct. Exactly four weeks later, on June 1, a buoy answering the description was found by some Lap fishermen at Dvorovya Bay. This was an uninhabited part of the coast, visited occasionally for driftwood. At first the fishermen had mistaken the buoy for a mine, and had fired at it, but later on towed it to their home on the Litzka River. On its being brought on board the Intrepid I photographed it. It bore a large brass plate, on which was inscribed: 'Nicht offnen. Telefonbote liegen lassen! Telegraphieren sofort Liegestella an U Bootswen. Kiel. Unterseeboot 75 hier gesunken. (Do not open. Leave telephone buoy lying! Telegraph immediately position to U boats base, Kiel. Submarine 75 sunk here.)'

"The destroyed submarine was therefore U-75, which, according to German official accounts, had a year before laid 13 mines in the western passage from Scapa. Twelve were swept up, but the thirteenth sank the Hampshire bearing Lord Kitchener on his mission to Russia. That was on the evening of June 5, 1916. There can be no reasonable doubt that the telephone buoy found and marked U-75 was part of the submarine sunk by the Palmbranch. It was discovered on the edge of the winter ice, which proved it had drifted there that spring. No other ships claimed to have sunk U-boats in those waters at the time, and the place where the fishermen came on it was 120 miles easterly from the scene of the action a month earlier, which would entail only an average daily drift of 11 to 12 miles—about what might have been expected with the prevailing wind and current.

"Capt. Malling was awarded a double D. S. O. for his gallant action. Not until now, however, has the story been told of how Kitchener's death was avenged by the destruction of U-75 and all her crew."

The foregoing bit of history is further illuminated by a diary kept by an officer of another submarine, and recovered from the floating body of its owner after the undersea boat was sunk by a destroyer. It gives a vivd picture of the existence of a U-boat's crew. The craft, in this case, was the U-C-26, and the writer was Sub-Lieutenant Heinrich Peterson, second in command. The diary, dated in 1917, follows:

"May 1, 1:24—On watch 3 a. m.—barrage. Found gap in the barrage and passed within 650 yards of three destroyers. Moon just setting behind clouds. 4:38—Slept. About 8, when I was going on watch, alarm; quick dive! Two seaplanes about 650 feet above us. Two bombs, but they went wide of us. 9:30 a. m.—Came to surface. Two airships sighted. Dived. 11 a. m.—Came to surface. 11:30 a. m.—Another seaplane. Alarm. Dived. Two bombs almost hit us.

"May 2, 12:04 a. m.—Steered for Havre and laid nine mines just outside the buoys. I slept during this, but it was a painful process. Almost got caught in a net. 4:08 a. m.—Steered for Caen Roads to lay mines. While doing so, ran ashore about 5 a. m., but got off again with the oil engines. Two fishing boats evaded us. 6:40 a. m.—Dived as convoy was sighted. 7 a. m.—Sank a 3000-ton Norwegian steamer by torpedo. (This was the steamer Certo, leading ship of a convoy escorted by armed trawlers.) 7:35 p. m.—Headed for Cherbourg to lay mines.

"May 3, 2:25 a. m.—Laid five mines off Cherbourg; it is to be hoped they will be useful. Then steered north. 8:15-10:25 p. m.—Dived and carried out attacks on two steamers off Owers lightship. Of course, they were unsuccessful.

"May 4, 1:35 a. m.—Dived to attack two steamers, each convoyed by a destroyer, but, of course, we never got a shot in. Torpedo was ready in the tube. 1:35 a. m.—Came to surface. Destroyer sighted ahead, and a two-masted schooner to port. Proceeded to attack on surface. The steamer, however, saw us in the moonlight, made Morse signal, and turned away. Steamer sighted to starboard; she also saw us, turned away and disappeared. All of this happened 15 miles south of St. Catherine's Point, in bright moonlight. After this, we turned around and headed for Havre, charging battery. 8:25 p. m.—Fired stern torpedo at Norwegian steamer in ballast; torpedo passed to one side or under vessel. 8:05 p. m.—Fired bow torpedo at an oiler, but it went very wide.

"May 5, 5:20 p. m.—Off Barfleur, eight miles distant, headed for Cherbourg. 8:12 p. m.—During my watch sighted several steamers off Cherbourg. Bore down one one, but as she was too small, and in ballast, did not attack. A second vessel we could not overhaul. No luck. Proceeded westward.

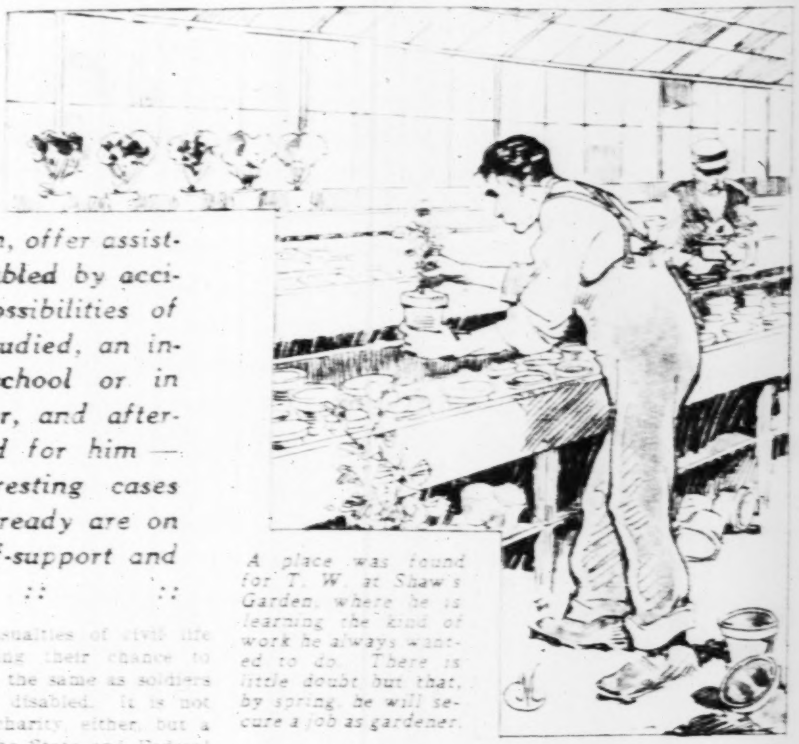
"May 6, 12:20 a. m.—Turned to the eastward. Weather changing for the worse, and sea getting up. 4:08 a. m. —A wet watch. 8:12 a. m.—The second watch-keeping officer says he is fed up." (Apparently the writer is getting pretty well "fed up," too.)

"May 7, 12:10 a. m.—Headed for Havre; weather not much better, but very little water coming over conning tower. 11 a. m.—Dived, as patrol trawler was bearing down on us. 2 p. m.—Came to surface and again headed for Barfleur. It is a miserable existence. 9 p. m.—Sighted a convoy, which, of course, we do not bag. Vessels turn away."

Two days after this entry the U-C-26 was sunk by the British destroyer Milne.

PROVIDING NEW CAREERS FOR CASUALTIES IN CIVIL LIFE

Just as vocational training is given to former soldiers, so does Rehabilitation Division, State Department of Education, offer assistance, to civilians disabled by accident or disease — Possibilities of each applicant are studied, an industrial course at school or in factory contracted for, and afterwards a job is found for him — Some of the interesting cases in St. Louis which already are on their way toward self-support and happiness again :: ::



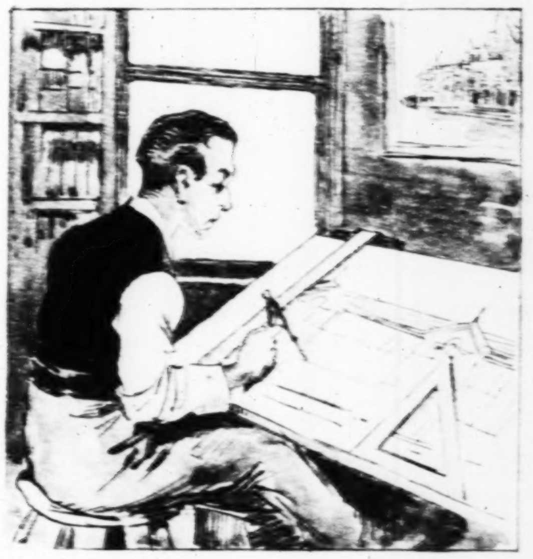
A place was found for T. W. at Shaw's Garden, where he is learning the kind of work he always wanted to do. There is little doubt but that, by spring, he will secure a job as gardener.

FOR the first time casualties of civil life in Missouri are having their chance to make a new start, just the same as soldiers who leave the service disabled. It is not through any form of charity, either, but a joint offer of aid by the State and Federal governments, which the proudest may accept without hesitation.

Missouri's paternal new policy, which aims at the rehabilitation and placement of persons disabled by accident and disease, went into operation several months ago. But so quietly did the State embark on its new function that this really epochal event attracted little attention.

Although the actual field work began only such a short time ago, for matters of organization, methods, etc., had to be dealt with first, the reclaiming of disabled men and women to usefulness is now well under way. A description of some of the cases in St. Louis will be interesting. Never before have civilians been provided for by Missouri in just such a way. And the work starts under a comprehensive plan.

To realize what it all means, just imagine the case of John Smith, skilled factory worker, who meets with an accident involving the loss of a hand, or some other injury which bars him from his former occupation. In the average case, to the natural grief over mutilation is added the pinch of economic troubles which follow. Whether or not Smith receives compensation from his employer, and gross injustice frequently happens in such cases, he must find some other way to earn a living for himself and possibly for little Smiths, as well. What is he to do?



After L. R. had lost one hand in a factory accident, agents of Rehabilitation Division enrolled him in a correspondence course in architecture, and he will work with his father, a contractor.

Even with savings in the bank, if Smith is a family man he will think twice before using any of that money for a course of training. The immediate needs of the household come first, he feels. And if he has no money, no friends, then he is apt to take the first employment he can find, however humble, or gets none at all, and sinks into a lethargy which renders him useless to everybody.

And to the State of Missouri, which is the main point, after all.

So the State, in conjunction with the Federal Government, offers to such people what is officially called "vocational rehabilitation." Agents paid from funds of the State and national governments will study the case of such a person, decide what line of work offers him the best chance of success, then provide the necessary training and, when he has completed it satisfactorily, find him a job.

The applicant need not have been the victim of an accident. If it was tuberculosis or some other disease which made him a casualty of civil life, then the advisement, the training and placement will be given him, just the same.

"Practically any case of a person disabled from making a living can be accepted now," says Miss Lillian H. Davis, one of the two field agents stationed in St. Louis. "Money can be expended for their education in schools or with private tutors, or in business or industry. We can pay it to an employer, if he will take a disabled man into his factory and have the foreman teach him useful work." Then she described some of the cases here.

T. W. is an Austrian, 42 years old, and formerly an unskilled worker in a packing house. One day something went wrong with a gate in the runway through which he was helping to drive hogs, and four of the animals crushed T. W. against the wall. He was so badly injured that three ribs and one lung had to be removed, and the doctors told him that his days of heavy labor were over.

"Is there any other kind of work that you would like to do?" asked an agent of the Rehabilitation Division, Missouri State Department of Education, when informed of the man's plight.

"Yes," said T. W. "I've always wanted to work with flowers, but never had the chance."

So a place was found for him at Shaw's Garden, where he is learning how to do the work he always wanted to do. He has proven an apt pupil, and by spring there is little doubt but that a job as gardener will be found for him and that his future will be assured. This case was simplified by the fact that he owned his home and that a daughter was at work.

The question of maintenance is probably the knottiest point with which the Rehabilitation Division has to cope, for Missouri voters rejected the workmen's compensation act at the election of Nov. 2, 1920. It will be submitted to them again, at the November election next year.

"This lack of compensation is quite a handicap," says Miss Davis. "But it makes other people work with you, and co-operate, which is a good thing for all concerned. Lots of other states, though, have a workmen's compensation law, which provides the maintenance."

She explained that some of the disabled persons now being rehabilitated live at home, or work part time for their subsistence.

Another interesting case was that of N. W., a 17-year-old boy employed in a local shoe factory, whose left hand was cut off while at work. From a report to the State Factory Inspector the agents of the Rehabilitation Division heard about the accident and went to see him at the city hospital. He was "pretty discouraged," say the agents, and his chief lament seemed to be that he could no longer play the piano.

When questioned by the agents he told them he always wanted to get away from the factory work and be either a bookkeeper or salesman.

"The principal element in success is above your shoulders, not below them," one of the agents said to N. W. "Come and see us when you are able. I think we can help you." As the visitors left they saw the boy calling other patients around him, to tell about the chance which had come to him.

N. W. is now taking a course in a local business college, doing well in his studies and probably will earn more in his new line of work than he ever would have done as an unskilled worker in a factory.

Then there is the tragic tale of D. L., negro barber at one of the country clubs and 30 years old. In an unlucky moment he took a drink of what he supposed was whisky. It contained wood alcohol, which rendered him blind. An expert barber for almost half his life, and naturally an active man, an agent of the Rehabilitation Division found D. L. sitting disconsolately in front of his silent talking machine. He was disinclined to converse, even morose.

But the agents had learned from the Missouri Association for the Blind about a sort of work which apparently promised much for him. In Japan, it seems, the massaging is mostly done by blind persons who become very expert despite their affliction. So another blind man, a competent masseur, was brought from Kansas City to impart his skill to D. L. and other unfortunates. The ex-barber is making good progress, and there is little doubt as to his final success.

This is one of a goodly number of cases in which a valuable part of the rehabilitation process has consisted of raising the disabled man's morale. Sunk in discouragement as many of them are, and hopeless about the future, they need but a glimpse of better things, a hope of ultimate self-support and comfort again, to transform their whole attitude, say the agents in charge of the work.

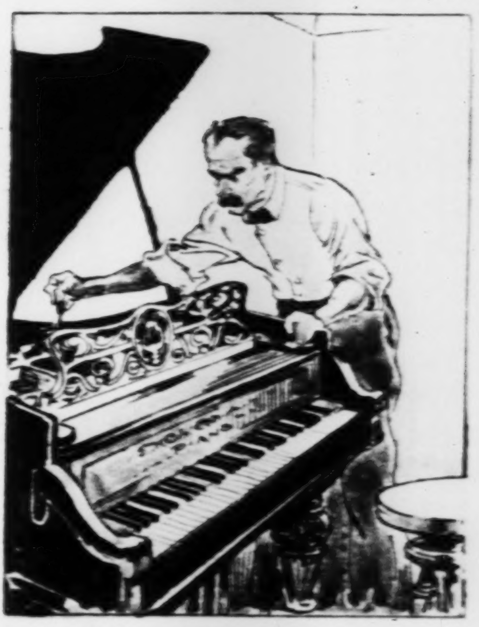
W. M. is 34 years old, and a former contractor in concrete work. Six years ago two strokes of paralysis made his right side useless. He received treatment from several doctors, made a trip to Hot Springs, spent approximately $5000 in trying to get cured, but all in vain. The Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy put him into one of the "O. T." shops, and within the last two months he has partly regained the power of locomotion and can walk fairly well. However, he needs an occupation different from the old one, and the Rehabilitation Division has made contracts whereunder he will be trained in weaving and loom work and learn to make salable articles from silk, carpet materials and even rags.

But here is a case which has almost stamped the local staff of the Rehabilitation Division. The man can only be helped if maintenance is provided for him, and as yet there is none available. The disabled person is J. D. D., born in St. Louis 34 years ago and for years an industrious coal miner, living part of the time in St. Louis and part of the time in Illinois.

Six years ago J. D. D.'s eyes became diseased and while the left one was saved, the right eye received such damage that it could barely perceive light. Then in 1919 a cataract came on his left eye, and now he cannot see an object more than one foot distant. He goes to the workshop of the Junior League at Barnes Hospital, and earns $4.25 a week. To make matters worse, his father also is practically blind, and a brother is unemployed. They are not eligible for a pension under the Missouri State law, because they have not resided continuously in Missouri for 10 years.



Rehabilitation experts say that blind men, with training, make very good piano tuners. And they have several disabled men for whom such courses are being planned, as a means of self-support.

The Rehabilitation Division wants to give J. D. D. a course in piano tuning, but the family must live, somehow, and he feels that he cannot give up even the little wages of $4.25 a week. The field agents say that blind men, with training, have made very good piano tuners. And this man has had seven years' experience as an amateur musician to help him, if he gets the opportunity for training.

Another casualty of civil life who has, thanks to the Rehabilitation Division, seen hope

Peter Ruff and the Double Four

Episode Number Ten

WONDERFUL JOHN DORY

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

COMPLETE IN THIS ISSUE

THE woman who had been Peter Ruff's first love had fallen upon evil days. Her prettiness was on the wane—powder and rouge, late hours and excesses of many kinds had played havoc with it, even in these few months. Her clothes were showy but cheap. Her boots themselves, unclean and down at the heel, told the story. She stood upon the threshold of Peter Ruff's office, and looked half defiantly, half doubtfully at Violet, who was its sole occupant.

"Can I do anything for you?" the latter asked, noticing the woman's hesitation.

"I want to see Mr. Ruff," the visitor said.

"Mr. Ruff is out at present," Violet answered.

"When will he be in?"

"I cannot tell you," Violet said. "Perhaps you had better leave a message. Or will you call again? Mr. Ruff is very uncertain in his movements."

Maud sank into a chair.

"I'll wait," she declared.

"I am not sure," Violet remarked, raising her eyebrows, "whether that will be convenient. There may be other clients in. Mr. Ruff himself may not be back for several hours."

"Are you his secretary?" Maud asked, without moving.

"I am his secretary and also his wife," Violet declared.

The woman raised herself a little in her chair.

"Some people have all the luck," she muttered. "It's only a few months ago that Mr. Ruff was glad enough to take me out. You remember when I used to come here?"

"I remember," Violet assented.

"I was all right then," the woman continued, "and now—now I'm down and out," she added, with a little sob—"You see what I am like. You look as though you didn't care to have me in the office, and I don't wonder at it. You look as though you were afraid I'd come to beg, and you are right—I have come to beg."

"I am sure Mr. Ruff will do what he can for you," Violet said, "although"——

"I see you know all about it," Maud interrupted, with a hard little laugh. "I came once to wheedle information out of him. I came to try and betray the only man who ever really cared for me. Mr. Ruff was too clever, and I am thankful for it. I have been as big a fool as a woman can be, but I am paying—oh, I am paying for it, right enough."

She swayed in her chair, and Violet was only just in time to catch her. She led the fainting woman to an inner room, made her comfortable upon a sofa, and sent out for some food and a bottle of wine. Down in the street below, John Dory, who had tracked his wife to the building, was walking away with a face as black as night. He knew that Maud had lost her position, that she was in need of money—almost penniless. He had waited to see to whom she would turn, hoping—poor fool, as he called himself—that she would come back to him. And it was his enemy to whom she had gone! He had seen her enter the building; he knew that she had not left it. In the morning they brought him another report—she was still within. It was the end, this, he told himself! There must be a settlement between him and Peter Ruff!

* * * * * * *

Mr. John Dory, who had arrived at Clenarvon Court in a four-wheel cab from the nearest railway station, was ushered by the butler to the door of one of the rooms on the ground floor, overlooking the park. A policeman was there on guard—a policeman by his attitude and salute, although he was in plain clothes. John Dory nodded and turned to the butler.

"You see, the man knows me," he said. "Here is my card. I am John Dory from Scotland Yard. I want to have a few words with the Sergeant."

The butler hesitated.

"Our orders are very strict, sir," he said. "I am afraid that I cannot allow you to enter the room without a special permit from his lordship. You see, we have had no advice of your coming."

John Dory nodded.

"Quite right," he answered. "If everyone were to obey his orders as literally, there would be fewer robberies. However, you see that this man recognizes me."

The butler turned toward an elderly gentleman in a pink coat and riding breeches, who had just descended into the hall.

"His lordship is here," he said. "He will give you permission without doubt. There is a gentleman from Scotland Yard, your lordship," he explained, "who wishes to enter the morning room to speak with the Sergeant."

"Inspector John Dory, at your lordship's service," saluting. "I have been sent down from town to help in this little business."

Lord Clenarvon smiled.

"I should have thought that, under the circumstances," he said, "two of you would have been enough. Still, it is not for me to complain. Pray go in and speak to the Sergeant. You will find him inside. Rather dull work for him, I'm afraid, and quite unnecessary."

"I am not so sure, your lordship," Dory answered. "The Clenarvon diamonds are known all over the world, and I suppose there isn't a thieves' den in Europe that does not know that they will remain here exposed with your daughter's other wedding presents."

Lord Clenarvon smiled once more and shrugged his shoulders. He was a man who had unbounded faith in his fellow creatures.

"I suppose," he said, "it is the penalty one has to pay for historical possessions. Go in and talk to the Sergeant, by all means, Mr. Dory. I hope that Graves will succeed in making you comfortable during your stay here."

John Dory was accordingly admitted into the room which was so jealously guarded. At first sight it possessed a somewhat singular appearance. The windows had every one of them been boarded up, and the electric lights consequently fully turned on. A long table stood in the middle of the apartment, serving as support for a long glass showcase, open at the top. Within this, from end to end, stretched the presents which a large circle of acquaintances were presenting to one of the most popular young women in society, on the occasion of her approaching marriage to the Duke of Rochester. In the middle, the wonderful Clenarvon diamonds, set in the form of a tiara, flashed strange lights into the somberly lit apartment. At the end of the table a Police Sergeant was sitting, with a little pile of newspapers and illustrated journals before him. He rose to his feet with alacrity at his superior's entrance.

"Good morning, Saunders," John Dory said. "I see you've got it pretty snug in here."

"Pretty well, thank you, sir," Saunders answered. "Is there anything stirring?"

John Dory looked behind to be sure that the door was closed. Then he stopped for a moment to gaze at the wonderful diamonds, and finally sat on the table by his subordinate's side.

"Not exactly that, Saunders," he said. "To tell you the truth, I came down here because of that list of guests you sent me up."

Saunders smiled.

"I think I can guess the name you singled out, sir," he said.

"It was Peter Ruff, of course," Dory said. "What is he doing here in the house, under his own name, and as a guest?"

"I have asked no questions, sir," Saunders answered. "I underlined the name in case it might seem worth your while to make inquiries."

John Dory nodded.

"Nothing has happened, of course?" he asked.

"Nothing," Saunders answered. "You see, with the windows all boarded up, there is practically only one, the ordinary, door to guard, so we feel fairly secure."

"No one hanging about?" the detective asked. "Mr. Ruff himself, for instance, hasn't been trying to make your acquaintance?"

"No sign of it, sir," the man answered. "I saw him pass through the hall yesterday afternoon, as I went off duty, and he was in riding clothes, all splashed with mud. I think he has been hunting every day."

John Dory muttered something between his lips, and turned on his heel.

"How many men have you here, Saunders?" he asked.

"Only two, sir, besides myself," the man replied.

The detective went round the boarded windows, examining the work carefully until he reached the door.

"I am going to see if I can have a word with his lordship," he said.

He caught Lord Clenarvon in the act of mounting his horse in the great courtyard.

"What is it, Mr. Dory?" the Earl asked, stooping down.

"There is one name, your lordship, among your list of guests, concerning which I wish to have a word with you," the detective said—"the name of Mr. Peter Ruff."

"Don't know anything about him," Lord Clenarvon answered, cheerfully. "You must see my daughter, Lady Mary. It was she who sent him his invitation. Seems a decent little fellow, and rides as well as the best. You'll find Lady Mary about somewhere, if you'd like to ask her."

Lord Clenarvon hurried off, with a little farewell wave of his crop, and John Dory returned into the house to make inquiries respecting Lady Mary. In a very few minutes he was shown into her presence. She smiled at him cheerfully.

"Another detective!" she exclaimed. "I am sure I ought to feel quite safe now. What can I do for you, Mr. Dory?"

"I have had a list of the guests sent to me," Dory answered, "in which I notice the name of Mr. Peter Ruff."

Lady Mary nodded.

"Well?" she asked.

"I have just spoken to his lordship," the detective continued, "and he referred me to you."

"Do you want to know all about Mr. Ruff?" Lady Mary asked, smiling.

"If your ladyship will pardon my saying so, I think that neither you nor anyone else could tell me that. What I wished to say was that I understood that we at Scotland Yard were placed in charge of your jewels until after the wedding. Mr. Peter Ruff is, as you may be aware, a private detective himself."

"I understand perfectly," Lady Mary said. "I can assure you, Mr. Dory, that Mr. Ruff is here entirely as a personal and very valued friend of my own. On two occasions he has rendered very signal service to my family—services which I am quite unable to requite."

"In that case, your ladyship, there is nothing more to be said. I conceive it, however, to be my duty to tell you that in our opinion—the opinion of Scotland Yard—there are things about the career of Mr. Peter Ruff which need explanation. He is a person we seldom let altogether out of our sight."

Lady Mary laughed frankly.

"My dear Mr. Dory," she said, "this is one of the cases, then, in which I can assure you that I know more than Scotland Yard. There is no person in the world in whom I have more confidence, and with more reason, than Mr. Peter Ruff."

John Dory bowed.

"I thank your ladyship," he said. "I trust that your confidence will never be misplaced. May I ask one more question?"

"Certainly," Lady Mary replied, "so long as you make no insinuations whatever against my friend."

"I should be very sorry to do so," John Dory declared. "I simply wish to know whether Mr. Ruff has any instructions from you with reference to the care of your jewels?"

"Certainly not," Lady Mary replied, decidedly. "Mr. Ruff is here entirely as my guest. He has been in the room with the rest of us, to look at them, and it was he, by the bye, who discovered a much more satisfactory way of boarding the windows. Anything else, Mr. Dory?"

"I thank your ladyship, nothing," the detective answered. "With your permission, I propose to remain here until after the ceremony."

"Just as you like, of course," Lady Mary said. "I hope you will be comfortable."

John Dory bowed, and returned to confer with his Sergeant. Afterwards, finding the morning still fine, he took his hat and went for a walk in the park.

* * * * *

As a matter of fact, this, in some respects the most remarkable of the adventures which had ever befallen Mr. Peter Ruff, came to him by accident. Lady Mary had read the announcement of his marriage in the paper, had driven at once to his office with a magnificent present, and insisted upon his coming with his wife to the party which was assembling at Clenarvon Court in honor of her own approaching wedding. Peter Ruff had taken few holidays of late years, and for several days had thoroughly enjoyed himself. The matter of the Clenarvon jewels he considered, perhaps, with a slight professional interest; but so far as he could see the precautions for guarding them were so adequate that the subject did not remain in his memory. He had, however, a very distinct and disagreeable shock when, on the night of John Dory's appearance, he recognized among a few newly arrived guests the Marquis de Sogrange. He took the opportunity, as soon as possible, of withdrawing his wife from a little circle among whom they had been talking, to a more retired corner of the room. She saw at once that something had happened to disturb him.

"Violet," he said, "don't look behind now"——

"I recognized him at once," she interrupted. "It is the Marquis de Sogrange."

Peter Ruff nodded.

"It will be best for you," he said, "not to notice him. Of course, his presence here may be accidental. He has a perfect right to enter any society he chooses. At the same time, I am uneasy."

She understood in a moment.

"The Clenarvon diamonds!" she whispered.

He nodded.

"It is just the sort of affair which would appeal to the 'Double-Four,'" he said. "They are worth anything up to a quarter of a million, and it is an enterprise which could scarcely be attempted except by someone in a peculiar position. Violet, if I were not sure that he had seen me, I should leave the house this minute."

"Why?" she asked, wonderingly.

"Don't you understand," Peter Ruff continued, softly, "that I myself am still what they call a corresponding member of the 'Double-Four,' and they have a right to appeal to me for help in this country, as I have a right to appeal to them for help or information in France? We have both made use of one another, to some extent. No doubt, if the Marquis has any scheme in his mind, he would look up me as a valuable ally."

She turned slowly pale.

"Peter," she said, "you wouldn't dream—you wouldn't dare to be so foolish?"

He shook his head firmly.

"My dear girl," he said, "we talked that all out long ago. A few years since, I felt that I had been treated badly, that I was an alien, and that the hand of the law was against me. I talked wildly then, perhaps. When I put up my sign and sat down for clients, I meant to cheat the law, if I could. Things have changed, Violet. I want nothing of that sort. I have kept my hands clean and I mean to do so. Why, years ago," he continued, "when I was feeling at my wildest, these very jewels were within my grasp one foggy night, and I never touched them."

"What would happen if you refused to help?"

"I do not know," Peter Ruff answered. "The conditions are a little severe. But, after all, there are no hard and fast rules. It rests with the Marquis himself to shrug his shoulders and appreciate my position. Perhaps he may not even exchange a word with me. Here is Lord Sotherst coming to talk to you, and Capt. Hamilton is waiting for me to tell him an address. Remember, don't recognize Sogrange."

Dinner that night was an unusually cheerful meal. Peter Ruff, who was an excellent raconteur, told many stories. The Marquis de Sogrange was perhaps the next successful in his efforts to entertain his neighbors. Violet found him upon her left hand, and although he showed not the slightest signs of having ever seen her before, they were very soon excellent friends. After dinner, Sogrange and Peter Ruff drifted together on their way to the billiard room. Sogrange, however, continued to talk courteously of trifles until, having decided to watch the first game, they found themselves alone on the leather divan surrounding the room.

"This is an unexpected pleasure, my friend," Sogrange said, watching the ash of his cigar. "Professional?"

Peter Ruff shook his head. "Not in the least," he answered. "I have had the good fortune to render Lady Mary and her brother, at different times, services which they are pleased to value highly. We are here as ordinary guests--my wife and I."

The Marquis sighed.

"Ah, that wife of yours, Ruff!" he said. "She is charming, I admit, and you are a lucky man; but it was a price—a very great price to pay."

"You, perhaps, are ambitious, Marquis," Peter Ruff answered. "I have not done so badly. A little contents me."

Sogrange looked at him as though he were some strange creature.

"I see!" he murmured. "I see! With you, of course, the commercial side comes uppermost. Mr. Ruff, what do you suppose the income from my estate amounts to?"

Peter Ruff shook his head. He did not even know that the Marquis was possessed of estates!

"Somewhere about seven millions of francs," Sogrange declared. "There are few men in Paris more extravagant than I, and I think that we Frenchmen know what extravagance means. But I cannot spend my income. Do you think that it is for the sake of gain that I have come across the channel to add the Clenarvon diamonds to our coffers?"

Peter Ruff sat very still.

"You mean that?" he said.

"Of course!" Sogrange answered. "Didn't you realize it directly you saw me? What is there, do you think, in a dull English house party to attract a man like myself? Don't you understand that it is the gambler's instinct—the restless desire to be playing pitch-and-toss with fate, with honor, with life and death, if you will—that brings such as myself into the ranks of the 'Double-Four'? It is the weariness which kills, Peter Ruff. One must needs keep it from one's bones."

"Marquis," Peter Ruff answered. "I do not profess to understand you. I am not weary of life, in fact I love it. I am looking forward to the years when I have enough money—and it seems as though that time is not far off—when I can buy a little place in the country, and hunt a little and shoot a little, and live a simple out-of-door life. You see, Marquis, we are as far removed as the poles."

"Obviously!" Sogrange answered.

"Your confidence," Peter Ruff continued, "the confidence with which you have honored me, inspires me to make you one request. I am here, indeed, as a friend of the family. You will not ask me to help in any designs you may have against the Clenarvon jewels?"

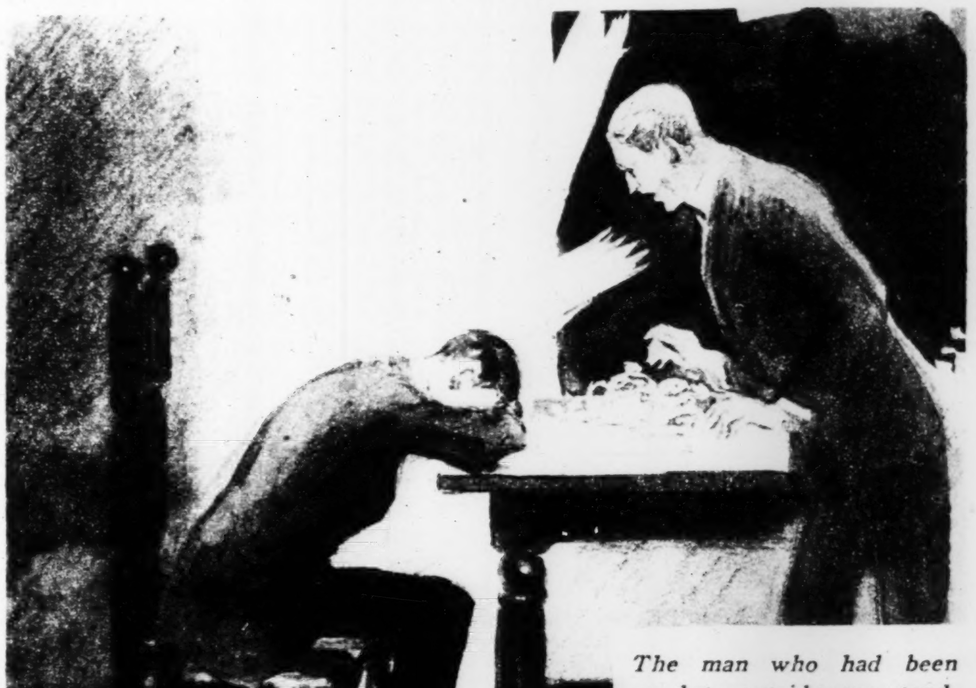
Sogrange leaned back in his chair and laughed softly. His lips, when they parted from his white teeth, resolved themselves into lines which at that moment seemed to Peter Ruff more menacing than mirthful. Sogrange was, in many ways, a man of remarkable appearance.

"Oh, Peter Ruff," he said, "you are a bourgeoise little person! You should have been the burgomaster in a little German town, or a French Mayor with a chain about your neck. We will see. I make no promises. All that I insist upon, for the present, is that you do not leave this house party without advising me—that is to say, if you are really looking forward to that pleasant life in the country, where you will hunt a little and shoot a little, and grow into the likeness of a vegetable. You, with your charming wife! Peter Ruff, you should be ashamed to talk like that! Come, I must play bridge with the Countess. I am engaged for a table."

The two men parted. Peter Ruff was uneasy. On his way from the room Lord Sotherst insisted upon his joining a pool.

"Charming fellow, Sogrange," the latter remarked as he chalked his cue. "He has been a great friend of the governor's—he and his father before him. Our families have intermarried once or twice."

"He seems very agreeable," Peter Ruff answered, devoting himself to the game.



The man who had been on duty outside was standing over him, white with horror.

The following night, being the last but one before the wedding itself, a large dinner party had been arranged for, and the resources of even so princely a mansion as Clenarvon Court were strained to their utmost by the entertainment of something like 100 guests in the great banqueting hall. The meal was about halfway through when those who were not too entirely engrossed in conversation were startled by hearing a dull, rumbling sound like the moving of a number of pieces of heavy furniture. People looked doubtfully at one another. Peter Ruff and the Marquis de Sogrange were among the first to spring to their feet.

"It's an explosion somewhere," the latter cried. "Sounds close at hand, too."

They made their way out into the hall. Exactly opposite, now, was the room in which the wedding presents had been placed, and where for days nothing had been seen but a closed door and a man on duty outside. The door now stood wide open, and in place of the single electric light which was left burning through the evening, the place seemed almost aflame.

Ruff, Sogrange and Lord Sotherst were the first three to cross the threshold. They were met by a rush of cold wind. Opposite to them two of the windows, with their boardings, had been blown away. Sergt. Saunders was still sitting in his usual place at the end of the table, his head bent upon his folded arms. The man who had been on duty outside was standing over him, white with horror. Far away in the distance, down the park, one could faintly hear the throbbing of an engine, and Peter Ruff, through the chasm, saw the lights of a great motor car flashing in and out amongst the trees. The room itself—the whole glittering array of presents—seemed untouched. Only the great center piece—the Clenarvon diamonds—had gone. Even as they stood there, the rest of the guests crowding into the open door, John Dory tore through, his face white with excitement. Peter Ruff's calm voice penetrated the din of tongues.

"Lord Sotherst," he said, "you have telephones in the keepers' lodges. There is a motor car being driven southwards at full speed. Telephone down and have your gates secured. Dory, I should keep everyone out of the room. Someone must telephone for a doctor. I suppose your man has been hurt."

The guests were wild with curiosity, but Lord Clenarvon, with an insistent gesture, led the way back to the dining room.

"Whatever has happened," he said, "the people who are in charge there know best how to deal with the situation. There is a detective from Scotland Yard and his subordinates, and a gentleman in whom I also have most implicit confidence. We will resume our dinner, if you please, ladies and gentlemen."

Unwillingly, the people were led away. John Dory was already in his great coat, ready to spring into the powerful motor car which had been ordered out from the garage. A doctor, who had been among the guests, was examining the man Saunders, who sat in that still, unnatural position at the head of the table.

"The poor fellow has been shot in the back of the head with some peculiar implement," he said. "The bullet is very long—almost like a needle—and it seems to have penetrated very nearly to the base of the brain."

"Is he dead?" Peter Ruff asked.

The doctor shook his head.

"No," he answered. "An inch higher up and he must have died at once. I want some of the men servants to help me carry him to a bedroom, and plenty of hot water. Someone else must go for my instrument case."

Lord Sotherst took these things in charge, and John Dory turned to the man whom they had found standing over him.

"Tell us exactly what happened," he said, briefly.

"I was standing outside the door," the man answered. "I heard no sound inside—there was nothing to excite suspicion in any way. Suddenly there was this explosion. It took me, perhaps, 30 or 40 seconds to get the key out of my pocket and unlock the door. When I entered, the side of the room was blown in like that, the diamonds were gone, Saunders was leaning forward just in the position he is in now, and there wasn't another soul in sight. Then you and the others came."

John Dory rushed from the room; they had brought him word that the car was waiting. At such a moment he was ready even to forget his ancient enmity. He turned towards Peter Ruff, whose calm bearing somehow or other impressed even the detective with a sense of power.

"Will you come along?" he asked.

Peter Ruff shook his head.

"Thank you, Dory, no!" he said. "I am glad you have asked me, but I think you had better go alone."

A few seconds later the pursuit was started. Saunders was carried out of the room, followed by the doctor. There remained only Peter Ruff and the man who had been on duty outside. Peter Ruff seated himself where Saunders had been sitting, and seemed to be closely examining the table all around for some moments. Once he took up something from between the pages of the book which the Sergeant had apparently been reading, and put it carefully into his own pocketbook. Then he leaned back in the chair, with his hands clasped behind his head and his eyes fixed upon the ceiling as though thinking intently.

"Hastings," he said to the policeman, who all the time was pursuing a stream of garrulous, inconsequent remarks, "I wonder whether you'd step outside and see Mr. Richards, the butler. Ask him if he would be so good as to spare me a moment."

"I'll do it, sir," the man answered, with one more glance through the open space. "Lord!" he added, "they must have been in through there and out again like cats!"

"It was quick work, certainly," Peter Ruff answered, genially, "but then, an enterprise like this would, of course, only be attempted by experts."

Peter Ruff was not left alone long. Mr. Richards came hurrying in.

"This is a terrible business, sir!" he said. "His lordship has excused me from superintending the service of the dinner. Anything that I can do for you I am to give my whole attention to. These were my orders."

"Very good of you, Richards," Peter Ruff answered, "very thoughtful of his lordship. In the first place, then, I think we will have the rest of the jewelry packed in cases at once. Not that anything further is likely to happen," he continued, "but still, it would be just as well out of the way. I will remain here and superintend this, if you will send a couple of careful servants. In the meantime, I want you to do something else for me."

"Certainly, sir," the man answered.

"I want a plan of the house," Peter Ruff said, "with the names of the guests who occupy this wing."

The butler nodded gravely.

"I can supply you with it very shortly, sir," he said. "There is no difficulty at all about the plan, as I have several in my room; but it will take some minutes to pencil in the names."

Peter Ruff nodded.

"I will superintend things here until you return," he said.

"It is to be hoped, sir," the man said, as he retreated, "that the gentleman from Scotland Yard will catch the thieves. After all, they hadn't more than 10 minutes' start, and our Daimler is a flyer."

"I'm sure I hope so," Peter Ruff answered, heartily.

But, alas! no such fortune was in store for Mr. John Dory. At daybreak he returned in a borrowed trap from a neighboring railway station.

"Our tires had been cut," he said, in reply to a storm of questions. "They began to go, one after the other, as soon as we had any speed on. We traced the car to Salisbury, and there isn't a village within 40 miles that isn't looking out for it."

Peter Ruff, who had just returned from an early morning walk, nodded, sympathetically.

"Shall you be here all day, Mr. Dory?" he asked. "There's just a word or two I should like to have with you."

Dory turned away. He had forced himself, in the excitement of the moment, to speak to his ancient enemy, but in this hour of his humility the man's presence was distasteful to him.

"I am not sure," he said, shortly. "It depends on how things may turn out."

The daily life at Clenarvon Court proceeded exactly as usual. Breakfast was served early, as there was to be a big day's shoot. The Marquis de Sogrange and Peter Ruff smoked their cigarettes together afterwards in the great hall. Then it was that Peter Ruff took the plunge.

"Marquis," he said, "I should like to know exactly how I stand with you—the 'Double-Four,' that is to say—supposing I range myself for an hour or so on the side of the law?"

Sogrange smiled.

"You amuse yourself, Mr. Ruff," he remarked, genially.

"Not in the least," Peter Ruff answered. "I am serious."

Sogrange watched the blue cigarette smoke come down his nose.

"My dear friend," he said, "I am no amateur at this game. When I choose to play it, I am not afraid of Scotland Yard. I am not afraid," he concluded, with a little bow, "even of you!"

"Do you ever bet, Marquis?" Peter Ruff asked.

"Twenty-five thousand francs," Sogrange said, smiling, "that your efforts to aid Mr. John Dory are unavailing."

Peter Ruff entered the amount in his pocketbook.

"It is a bargain," he declared. "Our bet, I presume, carries immunity for me?"

"By all means," Sogrange answered, with a little bow.

The Marquis beckoned to Lord Sotherst, who was crossing the hall.

"My dear fellow," he said, "do tell me the name of your hatter in London. Delions failed me at the last moment, and I have not a hat fit for the ceremony tomorrow."

"I'll lend you half a dozen, if you can wear them," Lord Sotherst answered, smiling. "The governor's sure to have plenty, too."

Sogrange touched his head with a smile.

"Alas!" he said. "My head is small, even for a Frenchman's. Imagine me—otherwise, I trust, suitably attired—walking to the church tomorrow in a hat which came to my ears!"

Lord Sotherst laughed.

"Scotts will do you all right," he said. "You can telephone."

"I shall send my man up," Sogrange determined. "He can bring me back a selection. Tell me, at what hour is the first drive this morning, and are the places drawn yet?"

"Come into the gunroom and we'll see," Lord Sotherst answered.

Peter Ruff made his way to the back quarters of the house. In a little sitting room he found the man he sought, sitting alone. Peter Ruff closed the door behind him.

"John Dory," he said, "I have come to have a few words with you."

The detective rose to his feet. He was in no pleasant mood. Though the telephone wires had been flashing their news every few minutes, it seemed, indeed, as though the car which they had chased had vanished into space.

"What do you want to say to me?" he asked, gruffly.

"I want, if I can," Peter Ruff said, earnestly, "to do you a service."

Dory's eye glittered.

"I think," he said, "that I can do without your services."

"Don't be foolish," Peter Ruff said. "You are harboring a grievance against me which is purely an imaginary one. Now listen to the facts. You employ your wife—which, after all, Dory, I think, was not quite the straight thing—to try and track down a young man named Spencer Fitzgerald, who was formerly, in a small way, a client of mine. I find your wife an agreeable companion—we become friends. Then I discover her object and know that I am being fooled. The end of that little episode you remember. But tell me, why should you bear me ill-will for defending my friend and myself?"

The detective came slowly up to Peter Ruff. He took hold of the lapel of the other's coat with his left hand, and his right hand was clenched. But Peter Ruff did not falter.

"Listen to me," said Dory. "I will tell you what grudge I bear against you. It was your entertainment of my wife which gave her the taste for luxury and for gadding about. Mind, I don't blame you for that, altogether, but there the fact remains. She left me. She went on the stage."

"Stop!" Peter Ruff said. "You must still hold me blameless. She wrote to me. I went out with her once. The only advice I gave her was to return to you. So far as I am concerned, I have treated her with the respect that I would have shown my own sister."

"You lie!" Dory cried, fiercely. "A month ago I saw her come to your flat. I watched for hours. She did not leave it—she did not leave it all night!"

"If you object to her visit," Peter Ruff said, quietly, "it is my wife whom you must blame."

John Dory relaxed his hand and took a quick step backwards.

"Your wife?" he muttered.

"Exactly!" Peter Ruff answered. "Maud—Mrs. Dory—called to see me. She was ill—she had lost her situation—she was even, I believe, faint and hungry. I was not present. My wife talked to her and was sorry for her. While the two women were there together, your wife fainted. She was put to bed in our one spare room, and she has been shown every attention and care. Tell me, how long is it since you were at home?"

"Not for 10 days," Dory answered, bitterly. "Why?"

"Because, when you go back, you will find your wife there," Peter Ruff answered. "She has given up the stage. Her one desire is to settle down and repay you for the trouble she has caused you. You needn't believe me unless you like. Ask my wife. She is here. She will tell you."

Dory was overcome. He went back to his seat by the window, and he buried his face for a moment in his hands.

"Ruff," he said, "I don't deserve this. I've had bad times lately, though. Everything has gone against me. I think I have been a bit careless, with the troubles at home and that."

"Stop!" Peter Ruff insisted. "Now I come to the immediate object of my visit to you. You have had some bad luck at headquarters. I know of it. I am going to help you to reinstate yourself brilliantly. With that, let us shake hands and bury all the soreness that there may be between us."

John Dory stared at his visitor.

"Do you mean this?" he asked.

"I do," answered Peter. "Please do not think that I mean to make any reflection upon your skill. It is just a chance that I was able to see what you were not able to see. In an hour's time, you shall restore the Clenarvon diamonds to Lord Clenarvon. You shall take the reward which he has just offered, a thousand pounds. And I promise you that the manner in which you shall recover the jewels shall be such that you will be famous for a long time to come."

"You are a wonderful man!" said Dory, hoarsely. "Do you mean, then, that the jewels were not with those men in the motor car?"

"Of course not!" Peter Ruff answered. "But come along. The story will develop."

At 10:30 that morning a motor car turned out from the garage at Clenarvon Court and made its way down the avenue. In it was a single passenger—the dark-faced Parisian valet of the Marquis de Sogrange. As the car left the avenue and struck into the main road, it was hailed by Peter Ruff and John Dory, who were walking together along the lane.

"Say, my man," Peter Ruff said, addressing the chauffeur, "are you going to the station?"

"Yes, sir," the man answered. "I am taking down the Marquis de Sogrange's servant to catch the 11 o'clock train to town."

"You don't mind giving us a lift?" Peter Ruff asked, already opening the door.

"Certainly not, sir," the man answered, touching his hat.

Peter Ruff and John Dory stepped into the tonneau of the car. The man civilly lifted the hatbox from the seat and made room for his enforced companions. Nevertheless, it was easy to see that he was not pleased.

"There's plenty of room here for three," Peter Ruff said, cheerfully, as they sat on either side of him. "Drive slowly, please, chauffeur. Now, Mr. Lemprise," Peter Ruff added, "we will trouble you to change places."

"What do you mean?" the man called out, suddenly pale as death.

He was held as though in a vise. John Dory's arm was through his on one side, and Peter Ruff's on the other. Apart from that, the muzzle of a revolver was pressed to his forehead.

"On second thoughts," Peter Ruff said, "I think we will keep you like this. Driver," he called out, "please return to the Court at once."

The man hesitated.

"You recognize the gentleman who is with me?" Peter Ruff said. "He is the detective from Scotland Yard. I have full authority from Lord Clenarvon over all his servants. Please do as I say."

The man hesitated no more. The car was backed and turned, the Frenchman struggling all the way like a wild cat. Once he tried to kick the hatbox into the road, but John Dory was too quick for him. So they drove up to the front door of the Court, to be welcomed with cries of astonishment from the whole of the shooting party, who were just starting. Foremost among them was Sogrange. They crowded around the car. Peter Ruff touched the hatbox with his foot.

"If we could trouble your lordship," he said, "to open that hatbox, you will find something that will interest you. Mr. Dory has planned a little surprise for you, in which I have been permitted to help."

The women, who gathered that something was happening, came hastening out from the hall. They all crowded round Lord Clenarvon, who was cutting through the leather strap of the hatbox. Inside the silk hat which reposed there were the Clenarvon diamonds. Monsieur le Marquis de Sogrange was one of the foremost to give vent to an exclamation of delight.

"Monsieur le Marquis," Peter Ruff said, "this should be a lesson to you, I hope, to have the characters of your servants more rigidly verified. Mr. Dory tells me that this man came into your employ at the last moment with a forged recommendation. He is, in effect, a dangerous thief."

"You amaze me!" Sogrange exclaimed.

"We are all interested in this affair," Peter Ruff said, "and my friend John Dory here is, perhaps, too modest properly to explain the matter. If you care to come with me, we can reconstruct, in a minute, the theft."

John Dory and Peter Ruff first of all handed over their captive, who was now calm and apparently resigned, to the two policemen who were still on duty in the Court. Afterwards, Peter Ruff led the way up one flight of stairs, and turned the handle of the door of an apartment exactly over the morning room. It was the bedroom of the Marquis de Sogrange.

"Mr. Dory's chase in the motor car," he said, "was, as you have doubtless gathered now, merely a blind. It was obvious to his intelligence that the blowing away of the window was merely a ruse to cover the

'What I Learned by Going on the Stage"

"I went out to music studios and applied for work as an accompanist. I did not go near any studio where I was known, for I might have been employed through regard for my family. That was just what I did not want. I was engaged by a teacher who had never heard of me. I played accompaniments for the pupils all winter. I received $8 a week. My father said nothing, but he smiled.

"I believe that I am on the stage because I am like my father. He has always liked people. If he starts on a railway journey alone he does not arrive at his journey's end alone. He becomes acquainted with somebody. I have always found people the most interesting thing in the world. If you want something, you find the way to get it. I wanted to know people, and I found ways of knowing them.

"The society girl's life is rather limited. She is rather circumscribed. But that is changing. The war has done much toward liberating her. I always studied music. That gave me contacts with interesting persons outside my own limited, or would-be limited, 'world.'"

Before anything was known about the laws of gravitation, it was commonly believed, on the authority of Aristotle, that everybody had a "natural" place and that its normal state was one of rest in that place. Thus a stone was supposed to sink in water because its natural place was at the bottom of the water.

Providing New Careers for Casualties in Civil Life

for better things in the future is L. R., 25 years old. Associated for years with his father, a building contractor, the business fell off in 1916, and L. R. got a job working nights in a factory. At 4 o'clock one morning his left hand was caught in the machinery and taken off.

The company by which he was employed gave the injured man ample compensation, but he was in such low spirits over his misfortune that he could not apply himself to anything, and, in fact, used up most of his money in traveling. The rehabilitation agents have enrolled him in a correspondence course in architecture, after he finishes which L. R. will again be associated in the building business with his father.

Then there is the case of H. L., a woman 30 years old, who worked as housekeeper in a hotel until an affliction much like articular rheumatism left her with stiffened joints and pains in the limbs. She is able to walk, but somewhat unsteadily. She is now receiving a course of training as a manicurist.

G. K., an 19-year-old girl, attempted to work as a stenographer, but her success was interfered with by a slight deafness. The agents plan to have her enrolled as a student of filing systems.

A touching story is that of C. A. S., a 20-year-old Russian youth, who came to the United States several years ago seeking a better opportunity than he could find in the old country. For he is ambitious and willing to earn his success. While oiling the machinery in a factory, all the fingers of his left hand were cut off by a saw. In the trial court he was awarded damages, but the company appealed and secured a reversal of the verdict.

When the agents of the Rehabilitation Division found him, he was running an elevator and his conception of America as the land of opportunity had received a rude shock. His case was taken up by the agents with the David Ranken Jr. School of Mechanical Trades, and it developed that there are certain kinds of mechanical work which can be done by a man with one good and one damaged hand, if he has been specially trained. So C. A. S. is taking such a course there.

Still another instance of rehabilitation which seems well on its way to success is that of J. B., 21 years old, the upper part of whose body had been paralyzed and useless for several years. He is taking a course in weaving and basketry at the Junior League's workshop, Barnes Hospital, attends public night school several evenings a week and the Rehabilitation Division two months ago enrolled him in a telegraphy course. His progress has been reported as "very satisfactory." He has even bought a telegraph instrument, so that he can practice at home. And his powers of locomotion are improving.

These cases give a fair idea of the work which Missouri has undertaken for the victims of accident and disease, now first regarded as casualties of civil life. As yet it is on a small scale, compared with what the personnel of the Rehabilitation Division hope to accomplish.

For one thing, there has been some difficulty in learning about persons who properly come within the very broad provisions of the law. It is such a new undertaking that the general public are not familiar with the aid which is offered by the combined State and Federal governments. So far, few applications have come direct from the disabled persons, information about most of the cases having been received from manufacturers, social agencies and the State Factory Inspector.

But one fact should be emphasized: the work of the Rehabilitation Division is not intended to supplant that of the State Free Employment Bureau. The new organization is not interested in nor can it help people who are simply jobless. Those whom it wishes to aid are the men and women, the youngsters, too, who went to work but have been disabled by accident or disease.

After a careful survey of such cases, the Rehabilitation Division will make recommendations for such training as seems best to equip the applicant for reentering industrial or business life. These recommendations are sent to the headquarters at Jefferson City and, when approved, contracts are drawn up between the Rehabilitation Division and the manufacturer, school or other party supplying the actual training. Then the school or manufacturer sends requisitions for payment to the Auditor at Jefferson City and a monthly training report also is sent to the head office there.

When the disabled man or woman has become competent, every effort is made to find a suitable job.

Under the Federal act known as the industrial rehabilitation law, enacted June 2, 1920, a subsidy is granted to each state which engages in such work, the United States Government appropriating a sum equal to that of the State appropriation. It is called the policy of "match money."

For 1921 the Federal subsidy for the work of the Rehabilitation Division in Missouri was $27,500. For this year it is $32,500, and similar sums will be available in 1923 and 1924. The total funds available for the Rehabilitation Division in the years 1921-1922 was $186,000. The St. Louis office is at 915 Chemical Building, in charge of Miss Lillian H. Davis and Ervine Meyer, field agents.

Persons entitled to the service, under the terms of the law, include those injured in industry, disabled through sickness, physically impaired from birth or handicapped from public accident.

It is an interesting departure in governmental work, in which the State seems to recognize a bigger responsibility towards its citizens than ever before.

Girl, Deaf and Blind, "Sees" With Nose

are present in catarrh or cold in the head), the sense of smell is impaired or lost because the necessary penetration of the stimulating odor to the nervous filaments is being prevented.

It has been observed that when the nostrils are filled with rose water or eau de cologne, no odor is perceived. Simply filling the nostrils with distilled water suspends for a time the sense of smell. But if the scent be dissolved in a normal saline solution, which closely resembles the natural secretion, the odor is perceived.

Such is the delicate mechanism which, functioning with an efficiency unknown to nearly all the rest of us, has come to the rescue of little Willetta Huggins, deaf and blind. That it is an extraordinary case is vouched for by Helen Keller, also deaf and blind from the age of 19 months, whose development into a well-educated, highly intelligent and very efficient woman has been a matter of interest to the general reading public for many years.

To what heights of achievement may not little Willetta rise, with the almost incredible sense of smell which is hers? And may not her case, like that of Miss Keller, too, bring additional hope and promise to those afflicted as she is?

The name of Willetta Huggins may well become a famous one in the years to come.

real method of the theft. If you will allow me, I will show you how it was done.

The floor was of hardwood, covered with rugs. One of these, near the fireplace, Peter Ruff brushed aside. The seventh square of hardwood from the mantelpiece had evidently been tampered with. With very little difficulty he removed it.

"You see," he explained, "the ceiling of the room below is also of paneled wood. Having removed this, it is easy to lift the second one, especially as light screws have been driven in and string threaded about them. There is now a hole through which you can see into the room below. Has Dory returned? Ah, here he is!"

The detective came hurrying into the room, bearing in his hand a peculiar-shaped weapon, a handful of little darts like those which had been found in the wounded man's head, and an ordinary fishing rod in a linen case.

"There is the weapon," Peter Ruff said, "which it was easy enough to fire from here upon the man who was leaning forward exactly below. Then here, you will see, is a somewhat peculiar instrument, which shows a great deal of ingenuity in its details."

He opened the linen case, which was, by the bye, secured by a padlock, and drew out what was, to all appearance, an ordinary fishing rod, fitted at the end with something that looked like an iron hand. Peter Ruff dropped it through the hole until it reached the table, moved it backwards and forwards and turned round with a smile.

"You see," he said, "the theft, after all, was very simple. Personally, I must admit that it took me a great deal by surprise, but my friend Mr. Dory has been on the right track from the first. I congratulate him most heartily."

Dory was a little overcome. Lady Mary shook him heartily by the hand, but as they trooped downstairs she stooped and whispered in Peter Ruff's ear.

"I wonder how much of this was John Dory," she said, smiling.

Peter Ruff said nothing. The detective was already on the telephone wiring his report to London. Everyone was standing about in little knots, discussing this wonderful event. Sogrange sought Lord Clenarvon and walked with him, arm in arm, down the stairs.

"I cannot tell you, Clenarvon," he said, "how sorry I am that I should be the means of introducing a person like this to the house. I had the most excellent references from the Prince of Strelitz. No doubt they were forged. My own man was taken ill just before I left, and I had to bring someone."

"My dear Sogrange," Lord Clenarvon said, "don't think of it. What we must be thankful for is that we had so brilliant a detective in the house."

"As John Dory?" Sogrange remarked, with a smile.

Lord Clenarvon nodded.

"Come," he said, "I don't see why we should lose a day's sport because the diamonds have been recovered. I always felt that they would turn up again some day or other. You are keen, I know, Sogrange."

"Rather!" the Marquis answered. "But excuse me for one moment. There is Mrs. Ruff looking charming there in the corner. I must have just a word with her."

He crossed the room and bowed before Violet.

"My dear lady," he said, "I have come to congratulate you. You have a clever husband—a little cleverer, even, than I thought. I have just had the misfortune to lose to him a bet of 125,000 francs."

Violet smiled, a little uneasily.

"Peter doesn't gamble, as a rule," she remarked.

Sogrange sighed.

"This, alas, was no gamble," he said. "He was betting upon certainties, but he won. Will you tell him from me, when you see him, that although I have not the money in my pocket at the moment, I shall pay my debts. Tell him that we are as careful to do that in France as we are to keep our word!"

He bowed, and passed out with the shooting party on to the terrace. Peter Ruff came up, a few minutes later, and his wife gave him the message.

"I did that man an injustice," Peter Ruff said with a sigh of relief. "I can't explain now, dear. I'll tell you all about it later in the day."

"There's nothing wrong, is there?" she asked him, pleadingly.

"On the contrary," Peter Ruff declared, "everything is right. I have made friends with Dory, and I have won a thousand pounds. When we leave here I am going to look out for that little estate in the country. If you come out to the lunch, dear, I want you to watch that man Hamilton's coat. It's exactly what I should like to wear myself at my own shooting parties. See if you can make a sketch of it when he isn't looking."

Violet laughed.

"I'll try," she promised.

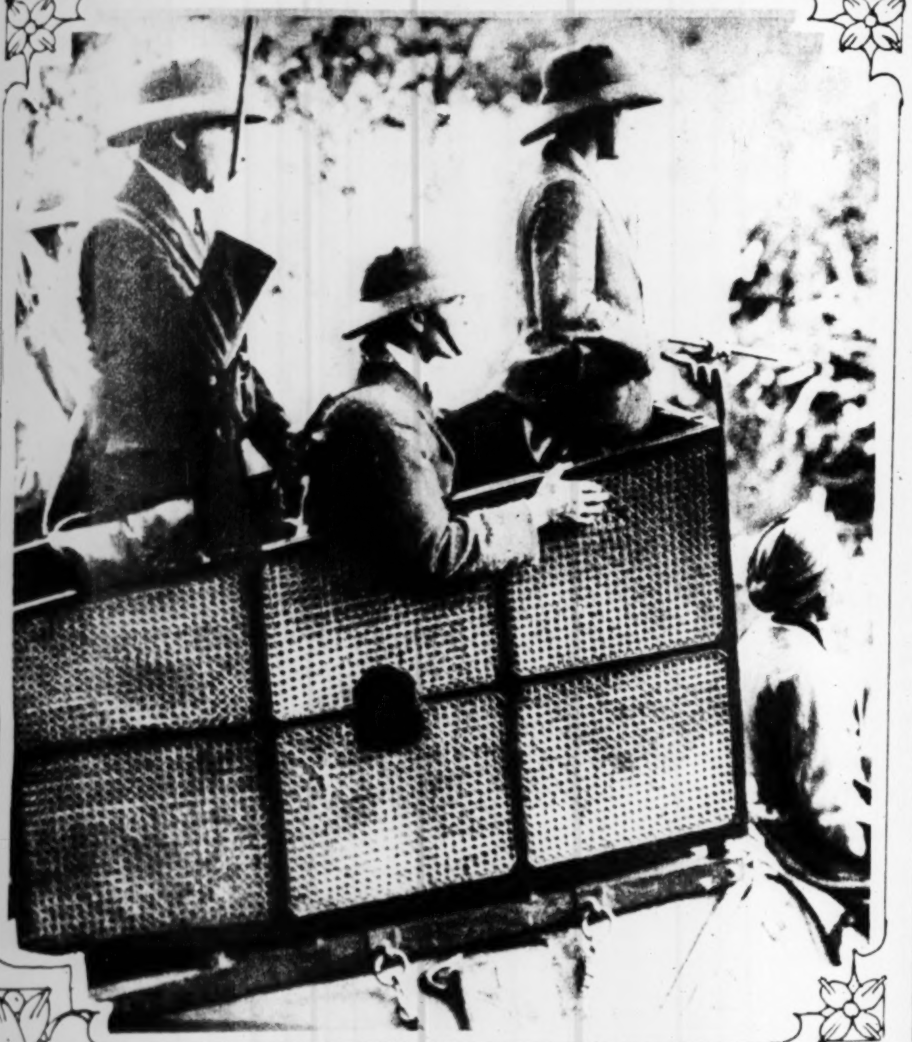
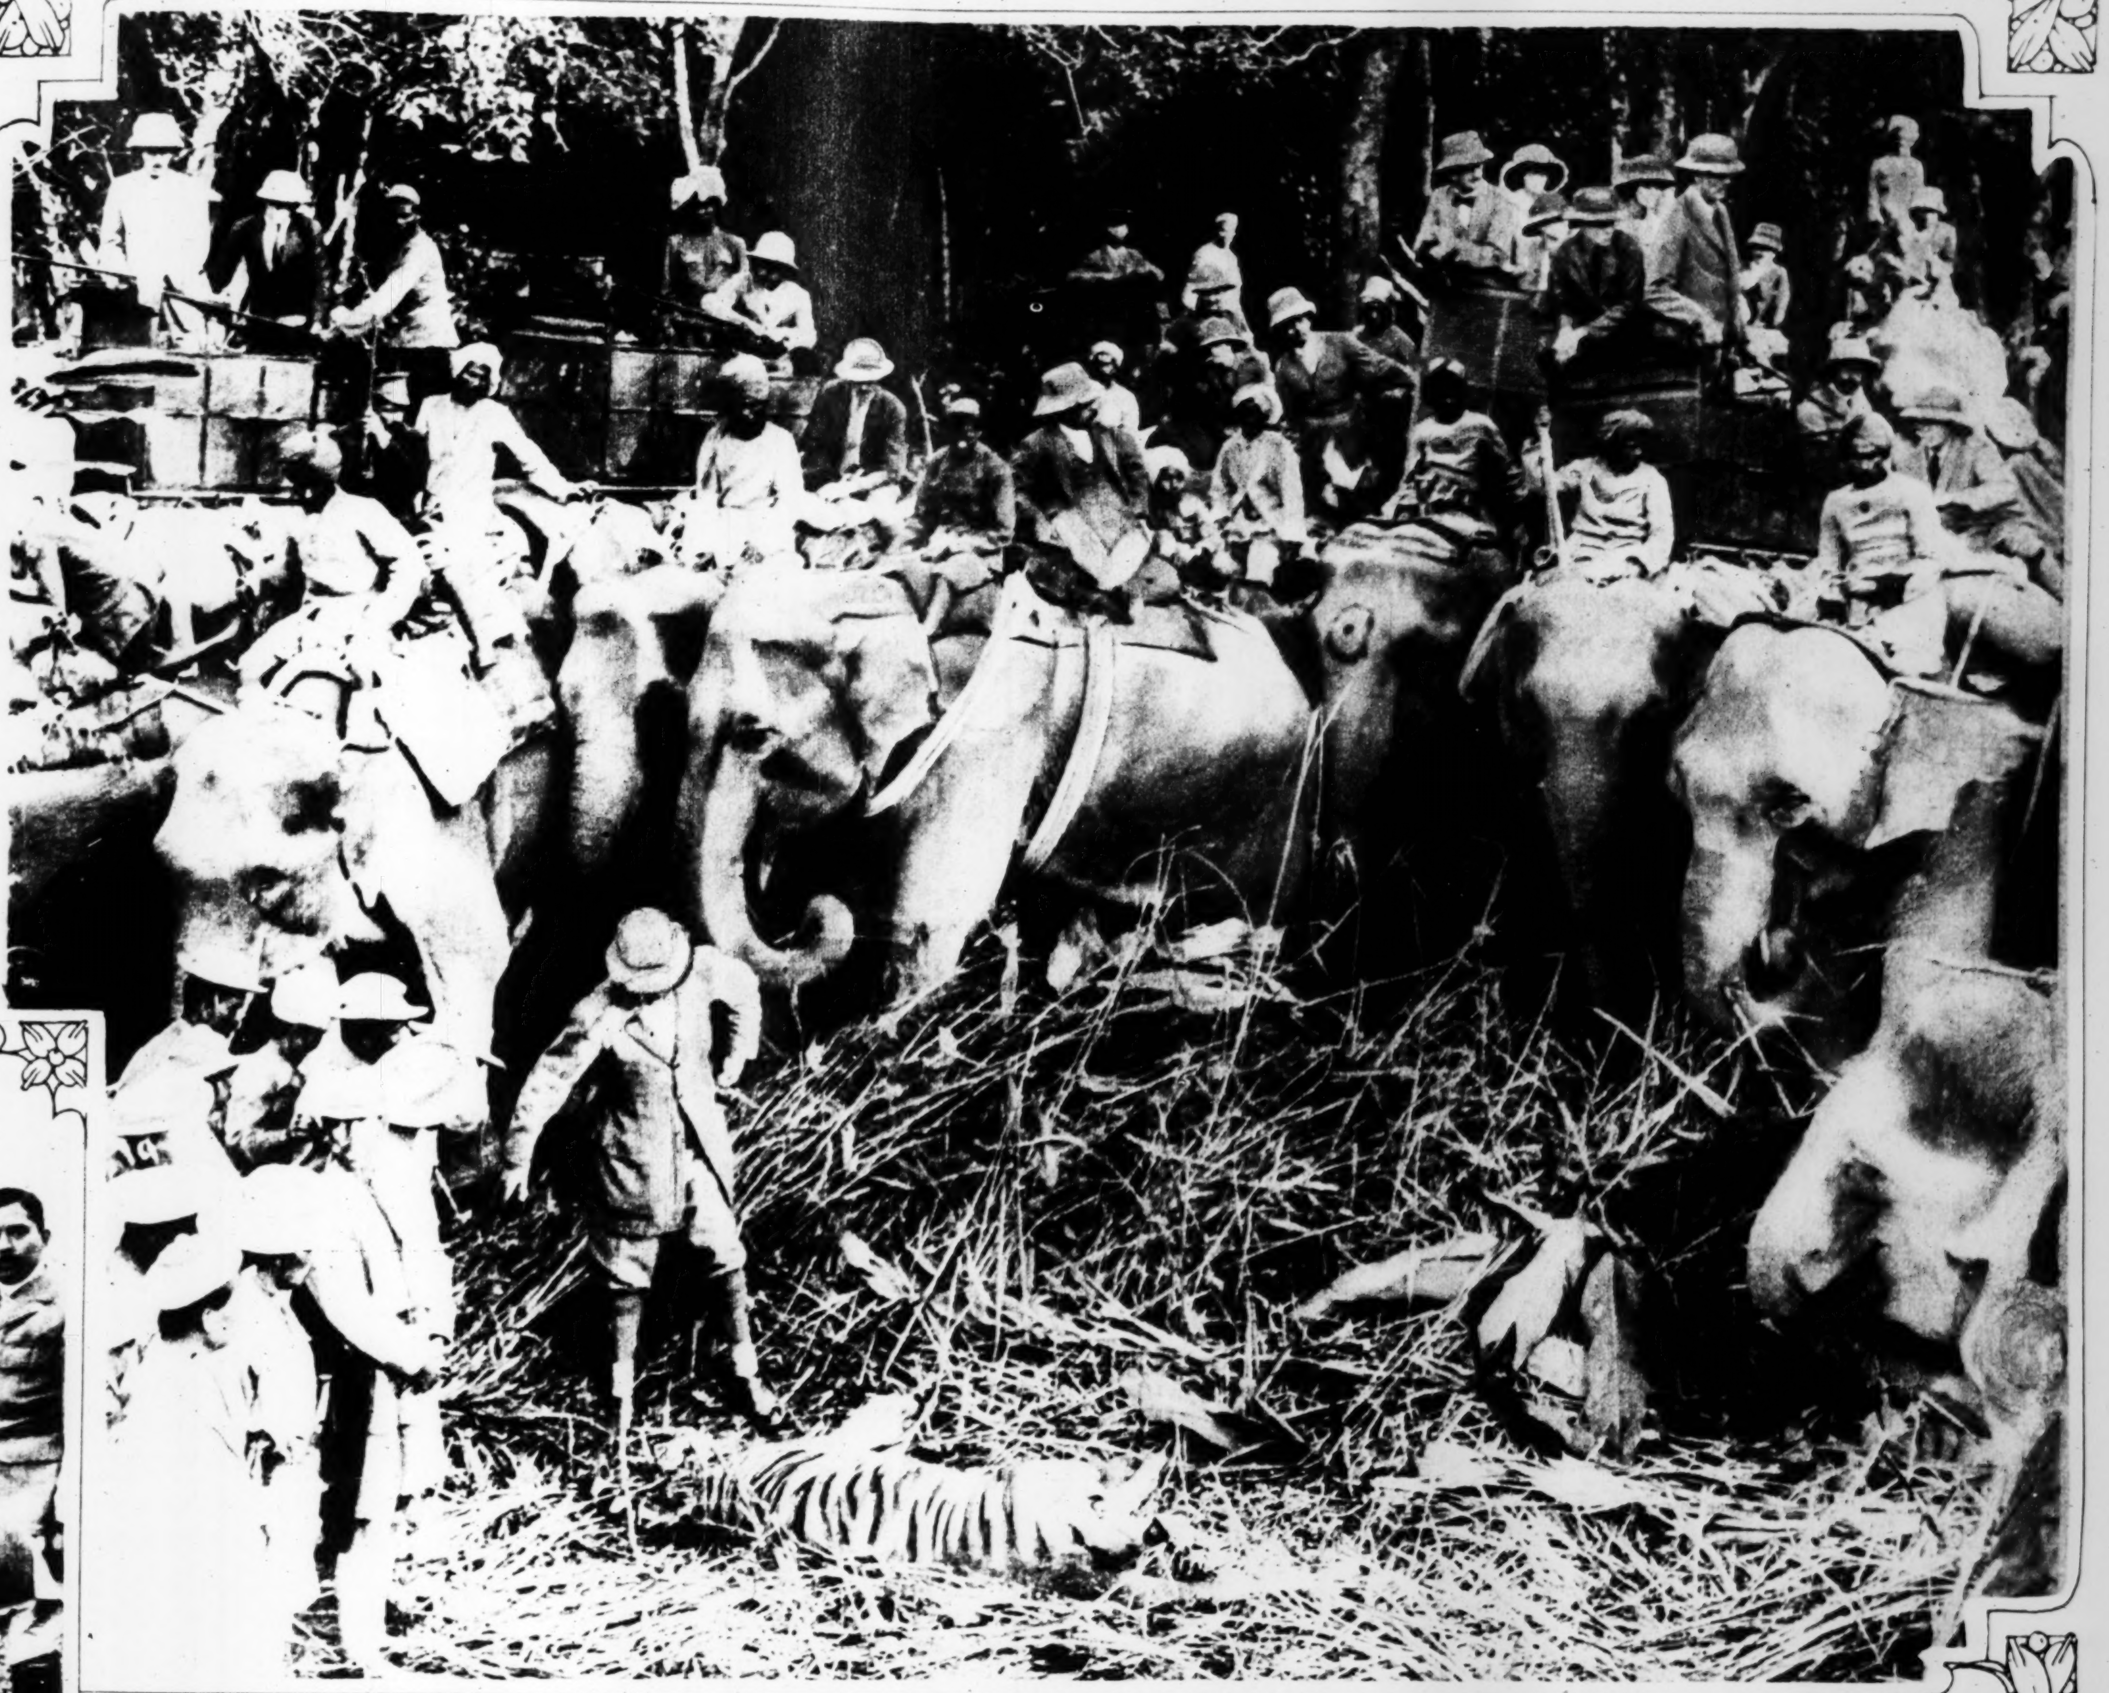
THE PRINCE OF WALES GETS HIS FIRST TIGER



This scene, from the jungles of Nepal, shows the Prince of Wales, rifle in hand, standing in the howdah upon an elephant's back and waiting for big game to break cover. The seated figure is the loader.



After the Prince had bagged a splendid specimen of tiger the entire party encircled the dead beast to look at it, as shown in this interesting photograph. The Prince, who proved himself a steady shot, is in howdah upon third elephant from right. —Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

Is your skin
pale and sallow?
—How you can rouse it

IF your skin is pale and sallow, it shows clearly the need of a more stimulating treatment than you are giving it. A pale, sallow skin means inactive blood-vessels—pores that do not throw off quickly enough the waste matter that accumulates.

Don't let this condition become chronic. To give your skin the soft, clear color every healthy skin should have, follow once a week this special treatment:

JUST before retiring, fill your basin full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over the top of the basin and cover your head with a heavy bath-towel, so that no steam can escape.

Steam your face for thirty seconds.

Now lather a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin with an upward and outward motion.

Then rinse the skin well, first with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing it for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

THE other six nights of the week cleanse your skin thoroughly in the usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and begin tonight this special steam treatment. A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's lasts for a month or six weeks. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ontario.
